

Kuchel Gains, Yorty Loses

By DON M. MUCHMORE

Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel is broadening his base of support with California Republican voters while Mayor Sam Yorty is losing strength with Democratic voters — as a prospective senatorial candidate.

And if the U.S. Senate race were to be decided today, Kuchel would easily win renomination and go on to defeat former state Controller Alan Cranston, who has increased his lead over Yorty for the Democratic nomination, according to The State Poll.

This latest survey confirms findings first disclosed in a State Poll of March, 1967.

In personal interviews conducted recently throughout the state, a scientifically-selected cross-section of the electorate was asked to express preferences in the U.S. Senate race this year.

Kuchel, who has held the office since 1953, was matched against Dr. Max Rafferty, state superintendent of public instruction, in the Republican primary test.

This is how Republican voters responded when they were asked:

Here's the Famous Playwright...

Q. I'm in charge of our junior high school talent show to be given in April. We would like to use skits based on the Broadway play, "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown". We need the musical score and permission of the producers to use it. Can you help us get these? G. L., Long Beach.

A. Good grief! You'll have to pick another idea, says Gene Persson, co-producer and co-owner of the show. The rights for "Charlie Brown" probably won't be released for at least five years. Ordinarily show rights are released within two years, Persson says, but this one is such a smash that no one will be able to touch it for a long time.

Indian Aid

Q. Whom can we contact to donate clothing and food for needy American Indians. M. T. B., Long Beach, and others.

A. A warehouse for collection of goods for Indians in New Mexico and Arizona has been established at 4009 S. Halldale Ave. in South Los Angeles, two blocks west of Normandie Avenue and just south of Santa Barbara Avenue. The operation is run by Dr. Henry E. Hedrick, a minister. Hedrick has a truck which hauls the material to several reservations. The warehouse is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and arrangements may be made for accepting items at other times by phoning 734-8144. Items must be dropped at the warehouse as Hedrick does not have personnel to make pickups. Particularly needed are warm, durable clothes for men, women and children and canned foods, including milk. Cash donations also are accepted. The money is spent to buy supplies on the reservations, thereby saving transportation costs.

HELP!

I am director of Teen Center 103, part of the Youth Development Project, Inc. We are located at 1862 Atlantic Ave. and we serve culturally disadvantaged youngsters from the Long Beach central district. We are a new program just getting off the ground and we would very much like to get a juke box and a pool table (it doesn't have to be full-size but we wouldn't mind if it was) for our center. We are able to pay a monthly rental of up to $30 for these items. If any ACTION LINE readers can help, they may contact me at 591-9150 or 426-0407. John Rambo, Long Beach.

Judge Not Lest

Q. I was married in 1965 by Judge Louis Kizas in Cicero, Ill. I was told recently that Kizas has been arrested for pretending to be a judge when he wasn't. If this is true, does that mean I am not legally married? B. J. H., Norwalk.

A. You may legally continue to love, cherish and obey your husband. Louis W. Kizas was really a judge, but he has resigned under fire from the circuit court, says a representative of the state attorney's office in Cicero, the notorious Chicago suburb which was the one-time headquarters of mobster Al Capone. According to reports in Chicago's American, Kizas has been charged with conspiracy to commit bribery and official misconduct. The major issue seems to be Kizas' bond setting policies. For more information, you might write to Chicago's American, 445 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60611, Attn: Back Copies Department. Q. A few months ago, I purchased a four-speed transmission at a public swap meet. I later found out the transmission had come from a hot car. So my

HO CHI MINH TRAIL

Radar Wall Across Laos

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government sources confirmed Saturday reports of the installation of a combined airborne and ground warning system across Laos to monitor enemy troop movements along the Ho Chi Minh trail.

The Washington Post had reported that such a barrier is being installed at a cost of some $750 million, and that it is designed to reduce the infiltration of troops from North Vietnam through Laos into South Vietnam.

The Laos "barrier" would be in addition to an electronic barbed wire "barrier" announced in September by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara for South Vietnam.

Like the "barrier" atop South Vietnam, the new system for Laos is intended to reduce infiltration of enemy troops from North Vietnam, though its operation will be somewhat different.

Sources said the "bugging" of the Ho Chi Minh trail will involve planes using side-looking radar, the radar having interlocking patterns as it searches from opposite sides of the infiltration routes.

THE RADAR will be supplemented by a ground system involving a variety of electronic sensors to pick up evidence of movement of men and equipment through Laos, the sources revealed.

A Pentagon spokesman, meanwhile, neither confirmed nor denied the plans for the warning system.

"We have nothing to add to what we have said previously about efforts to impede infiltration into South Vietnam," the spokesman said.

When McNamara announced the early-warning zone across the top of South Vietnam, he made no mention of any extension across Laos.

In fact, he elaborated little about its operation and is equally as anxious to keep secret the fine points of the new monitoring system.

The Laotian "barrier," the Post said, actually will consist of elaborate mechanical gadgets that will give warnings to persons miles away.

Massive Bleeding Wracks Stanford Heart Man's Body

STANFORD (AP) — Mike Kasperak's transplanted heart beat steadily on Saturday, but he was bleeding internally throughout his body. His doctors said his condition was "extremely critical."

A report from the Stanford Medical Center, where Kasperak received his replacement heart the night of Jan. 6, said doctors suspect he "may be developing an overwhelming blood infection."

Continuous transfusions were being given: the 54-year-old retired steelworker and "massive" doses of antibiotics and steroids were administered.

Blood infection has been one of the major problems the doctors have had to deal with. Kasperak has received several massive transfusions. A week ago Saturday, 80 per cent of his blood was exchanged to remove impurities.

Since Kasperak's heart was implanted, he has suffered repeatedly from gastrointestinal bleeding. Doctors have resorted to both transfusions and surgery in an effort to halt it.

Final 'Surveyor' Spies on Earth

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Strong beams of light aimed at the moon from the Earth were recorded by a television camera on Surveyor 7 on the lunar surface, space officials said Saturday night.

Scientists said the Surveyor camera reacted to laser beams from Earth stations near Tucson, Ariz., and Brightwood, Calif.

the third major surgery in less than a week — was performed Friday night. His spleen was removed then, to head off a decrease in platelets, a blood clotting factor, in the hope it would prevent further bleeding.

But Saturday the doctors detected internal bleeding throughout Kasperak's body. He already had received more than 20 pints of blood since Friday's surgery "to control bleeding from an ulcer in the stomach."

Kasperak remained semi-conscious. A respirator and an artificial kidney both were in use to help sustain his life.

Throughout all his struggle against liver, kidney and lung malfunction and gastrointestinal bleeding since the transplant surgery, Kasperak's new heart has continued to function normally, his doctors said.

Congress Happy About Clifford

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson apparently has bought a measure of peace with Congress on Vietnam with his appointment of Clark Clifford as secretary of Defense. Before he steps into the shoes of Robert S. McNamara on or before March 1, Clifford, the former counsel to Harry S. Truman and a top adviser to John F. Kennedy and Johnson, will face a friendly inquiry into his Vietnam views by the hawkishly inclined Senate Armed Services Committee.

He is expected to be confirmed speedily.

The effectiveness of Johnson's action in moving a comparative outsider into the thankless job of running the Pentagon was demonstrated when the appointment of Clifford was greeted with cheers by both Sens. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., and Richard B. Russell, D-Ga.

RUSSELL, WHO heads the Armed Services group and is by way of being the leader of the Vietnam hawks, predicted an outstanding career for the nominee in his new post.

He said Clifford is thoroughly familiar with defense and intelligence problems.

Fulbright, who heads the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and is the principal Senate critic of Johnson's war policies, said he thinks Clifford is taking the job with an open mind and "is capable of reevaluating our policies."

The principal benefit to Johnson falls in the category of his having given Fulbright someone in the administration he can trust to talk about war policies.

The Foreign Relations chairman has all but lost contact with 'Secretary' of State Dean Rusk. He never had much with McNamara.

But Fulbright and Clifford, both Burning Tree Club golfers and friends for more than 20 years, are at home with each other in the kind of intellectual discussion both enjoy. They may differ, but there is no likelihood of any significant misunderstanding between them.

CLIFFORD IS WELL known to many members of Congress and is not likely to be trapped into the kind

JAIL 3 IN MURDER OF CAB DRIVER

Three youths were arrested Saturday night in the "execution" style robbery-murder of a Compton cab driver, Compton police said.

Defective Capt. A. M. Thomas identified one suspect as Thomas LeMar Brown Jr., 19, of 1349 W. Arbutus St., Compton, but withheld the names of the other two on grounds that they are juveniles 16 and 17 years of age.

He said all three will be booked for murder in the slaying of Alonzo R. Hancock, 51, of 3310 Seminole Ave.

HANOCK WAS SHOT once through the head Thursday night by a killer standing by the driver's door of his cab, police reported. Investigators said he had been robbed of money in his pockets, but left on the body were his wallet, wristwatch and gold wedding ring.

Thomas said the three were arrested by Compton detectives "near Brown's home" about 8 p.m. after investigation uncovered leads that pointed to them.

He said Brown was being held in Compton city jail and the two juveniles would be sent to county juvenile hall after completion of booking.

NEW TERMS FOR PEACE?

N.Y. Times Service LONDON — A report in today's London Sunday Times says that President Johnson is no longer insisting on some form of military de-escalation by North Vietnam in exchange for a halt in the bombing.

The report, by the paper's Washington correspondent, Henry Brandon, describes the President's position as an "important modification" of the terms for talks with North Vietnam. It says that Washington has communicated its proposals to Hanoi but does not say through what channels.

PIGEONS DROPPING A LOT IN MAIL SURVEY

By TERRY SATTORIA

In 1963 some 5 million pigeons and 8 million people shared the streets and parks of New York.

In 1968, according to local health authorities, an estimated 30,000 cooing critters share Long Beach with its nearly 400,000 human inhabitants.

Their relationship — the humans and the pigeons — is a coexistence that ranges from friendly through uneasy to hostile.

The problem may not be as gross as it was in New York City in 1963, but there are, in Long Beach at least, some pigeon-haters who are insisting the birds be eliminated.

CITY COUNCIL mail seems to be running against the pigeons since the council have reported a multitude of diseases that are carried by pigeons.

"Nonsense," an elderly

gray-haired lady feeding pigeons in Lincoln Park Saturday replied to the charge.

"This business about pigeons being dirty," she said, "began debating a proposed ordinance which would make it illegal to feed wild pigeons on public property."

The city's pigeons have been accused of heinous crimes by those who favor getting rid of the birds.

They say they cause damage to buildings and signs and create a nuisance of considerable proportions.

"Sometimes you can't find a place to sit," said one senior citizen at Lincoln Park, the apparent center of the pigeon controversy, where some 200 park habitués recently got together a petition against the birds which they presented to the city council.

"They're dirty birds," say medical authorities. Pigeons, both wild and domestic, according to health authorities, can carry diseases which can be conveyed to humans.

IN 1963 a New York physician, Dr. Maxwell L. Littman, a specialist in fungus diseases, reported that a 50-year-old salesman and an 18-year-old youth died from a particular meningitis caused by a fungus Cryptococcus neoformans. This organism, he said, flourishes in pigeon droppings and is wafted about on the wind.

Other medical specialists as she chunked a piece of bread among some cooing birds, "is contacted by the same people who want fluoridation!"

Nevertheless, there are folks, including the Long Beach City Council, who, flying in the face of zealous who regard anti-pigeonism as next to Godlessness, still are considering an ordinance to prohibit pigeon feeding in public places.

THERE ARE SOME who insist that such a law could never be enforced. There are some peace officers who agree.

Seymour S., 71, a retired seaman who lives in Long Beach and visits the park every day, feels that there's "no proof" that pigeons are a health hazard.

Another 75-year-old man claims the pigeons are no problem at all in Lincoln Park as long as "folks stay out from under their 'bed-room' trees."

And as far as Eddie

White, 14, who goes to Washington Junior High School, is concerned. "They like the park so they should be allowed to stay."

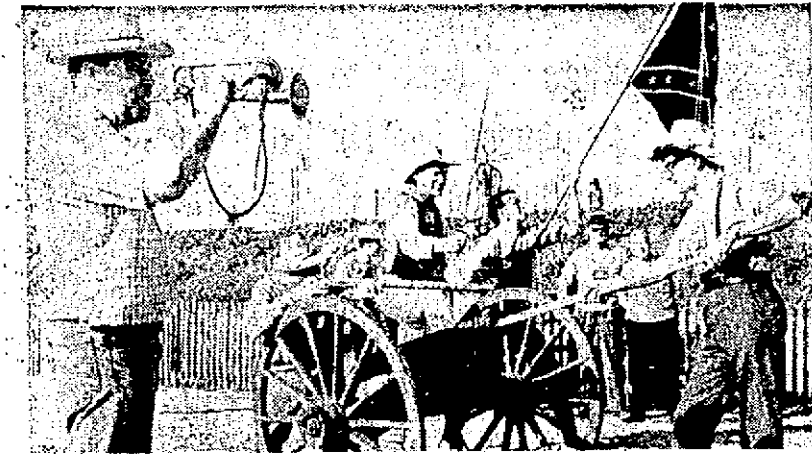

EDDIE SPENDS a couple of hours every day luring the pigeons into reaching distance so he can catch them, put them in a box and cart them away to his house, where he is maintaining a coop with 53 other pigeons.

Still, people have strong feelings about pigeons when they think about them at all. They're either for them or dead against them.

The Lincoln Park pigeons, for example, are a delight to bench sitters, and a bane to others who have a hard time finding a clean spot to sit.

"Actually," as one smiling gentleman said, "nobody really hates pigeons until he becomes a 'pigeon drop' case."

JACKSON STONED

Brigade, Cannon Loaded

To hear the valiant colonels and the reactivated Stonewall Jackson Brigade tell it, that was a real cannonball that whistled out over the water behind the Golden Sails restaurant Saturday.

Perhaps some of the 13 children who had gathered for the event knew better.

But this was a day of make-believe for grown-ups and it all centered on a Civil War vintage cannon and the brigade — a motley array of attorney's, private detectives, newspapermen and assorted camp followers — was firm in its belief that when the cannon went "bang" something flew out of it.

FRIDAY WAS the birthday anniversary of Gen. Robert E. Lee and today is Gen. Stonewall Jackson's birthday.

The brigade is composed entirely of than a year ago, had purchased a cannon and then sat around for several months trying to figure out what to do with it.

The birthdays of the two Confederate generals seemed to present the ideal occasion to find out if the thing really would work and — incidentally — to raise a few dollars for the Civil War-era Drum Barracks in Wilmington.

The brigade is composed entirely of colonels; it is obviously shot through with Yankee infiltrators and boasts one make-believe general — John Curtis — and one admiral — unidentified but possessor of a boat.

MEMBERS OF THE brigade assembled with their cannon on a point of land overlooking a slough at 2 p.m., Saturday.

By 2:30 p.m., attorney Kenneth Golden had tamped a load of black powder and wadding into the short barrel of the old, red-wheeled cannon.

Col. Ed Bynon sounded the trumpet, the fuse was lit, the colonels — except for a brave handful — hid behind an embankment in case the weapon exploded and waited for the solid thud when it fired.

The first shot was a success, the second shot was delayed a minute or two while a slightly overtrained colonel was urged not to smoke near the powder supply, and it wasn't until the third shot that the crisis came.

The fuse burned down to the cannon's breach, then went "spit." The brigade was stuck with a fully loaded cannon and no fuse.

Finally, the problem was solved with the aid of a new fuse. Another great cheer went up and the day was over.

A WIFE APPEARED to lead away the overtrained colonel and the remainder of the organization followed Gen. John Curtis' victory slogan: "We are going to forward to victory — and then to the bar."

The colonels trooped off with their muskets. Col. George Robeson (who had appeared with his feet swathed in bandages only to have to sacrifice the wrappings for wadding in the cannon) led the walk from the field. The assembled children watched the grownups disappear. Now they knew what adults did with their Saturdays.

A GUN IN HER PURSE

Compton Woman Kills 1 Bandit

A North Compton woman shot and killed an armed bandit and held his two companions at bay until police arrived early Saturday after reaching into her purse and pulling out a gun instead of money.

Los Angeles sheriff's deputies said Rosie Lee Jones, 43, owner of the Sassy Kitten Bar, 1133 E. Firestone Blvd., fired three shots at the bandit trio, killing Samuel Armstrong, 33, of Los Angeles.

Deputies booked his companions, Roscoe Lee

White, 21, and Ranell R. Woods, 21, both of Los Angeles, on suspicion of robbery.

The robbers accosted the tavern owner as she closed the bar about 2 a.m., deputies said. When they demanded her money, she reached in her purse and pulled out the gun.

Armstrong was dead on arrival at Southeast Doctors Hospital.

Hitchhiker Takes Car, Cash

A hitchhiker left a Lakewood motorist standing dejected on the Long Beach Freeway after robbing him of his wallet and his car at gunpoint, Long Beach police said Saturday.

Jim W. Young, 20, of 4607 Coldbrook Ave., told officers shortly after he picked the robber up on Artesia Boulevard near Orange Avenue, the hitchhiker leveled a .38-caliber revolver at him and said, "Don't bother to stop. Keeping going straight and go south on the freeway."

Man 'Serious' After Slipping Into Acid Vat

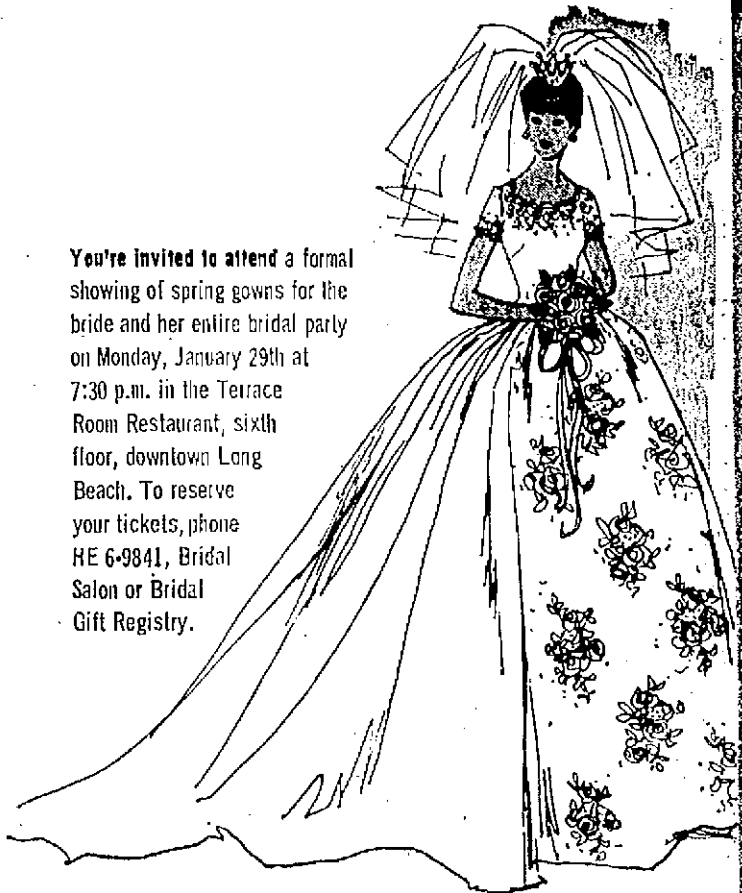

A 26-year-old Compton man was in serious condition Saturday after slipping into an acid vat at the plating plant where he worked.

Firmin Sheriff's deputies said Miguel Martinez, who lived next door to the Bowman Plating Co., 2631 E. 126th St., suffered first and second degree burns over most of his body.

He was pulled from the acid by fellow workers after he slipped in while dipping metal parts, police said.

The marquee on a Pine Avenue theater boasted, "Three Big Features — Any Seat, Any Time."

But Saturday afternoon there were more people viewing the three big features outside on the street — peace marchers, the half black-long Titan II missile and the Long Beach Municipal Band.

And Pine Avenue between Ocean Boulevard and First Street was clogged with gawking, honking motorists asking each other, "What does all this mean?"

More than 75 anti-war demonstrators were staging the city's biggest peace march to date on the sidewalk between the theater and the big black rocket. Saul Stolzberg of the sponsoring Long Beach Committee for New Politics said the protest was aimed particularly at the recent federal indictments of Dr. Benjamin Spock and four others for urging young men to avoid the draft.

"This is a beginning of a show of opposition against the indictments," Stolzberg said. "We feel the indictments are the beginning of a massive repression of dissent."

"These people marching today are marching in Long Beach because they live and work in Long Beach, and they're concerned about the attitudes of Long Beach citizens towards the war," Stolzberg said.

Marchers carried placards reading "Free Speech for Spock Too," "Don't Stifle Dissent" and "Would You Want Your Daughter To Marry General Ky?"

The half-hour demonstration followed a longer march in front of the U.S. Post Office at Long Beach Boulevard and Third Street, selected "because it is the only federal building in town," Stolzberg said.

During the demonstration beneath the Palace marquee persons continued to line up for the guided tour through the long, cylindrical Air Force rocket, which blocked two lanes of Pine Avenue.

"We're glad to have everybody down here," an Air Force information officer said. "The demonstration helps business."

Providing musical entertainment for hawks viewing the missile was the Long Beach Municipal Band, competing with anti-war songs and "Peace Now! Peace Now!" chants from the marchers.

About 30 persons — mostly elderly — sat on folding chairs across Pine Avenue listening to the

NATION'S YOUNGEST PATIENT

Easter Seal Society Aids Infant's Hearing Disorder

A Midway City infant, who entered the Easter Seal Society's Rehabilitation Center for Crippled Children and Adults in Orange when just two weeks old, probably is the nation's youngest patient undergoing hearing tests.

She is Cheryl Lynn Ward, born last Nov. 20 to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ward, 8571 Pyle Way. Her family doctor, suspecting the child might have a hearing disorder, referred her to the center, 1800 E. La Veta Ave., Orange, for comprehensive testing.

The center audiologist, Joan Nassberg, has been administering the tests with assistance of Florence Hungerford, of the National Charities League of Fullerton.

During testing, the baby is placed in an infant seat between two speakers. With her mother present, various sounds are introduced to the tiny patient. These range from a dinner bell and maraca to a scientific combination of sounds known as "white noise." Cheryl's reactions to the sounds are then measured and evaluated.

The series of monthly tests will continue until it can be determined — possibly when she is 18 to 24 months old — if Cheryl actually has a hearing disorder. If positive determination is made, appropriate treatment can then be prescribed at the Orange County center.

PHONIC EAR TESTS HEARING
Joan Nassberg Checks Cheryl Lynn Ward

Miss Nassberg stressed early diagnosis as of extreme importance to successful treatment. If hearing disorders are detected early enough, she said, most patients can be trained to lead normal active lives.

Audiological testing is a part of the Rehabilitation Center's new program for aurally handicapped preschool children between the ages of 18 months and three years. The center's audiology division also offers testing programs for older children and adults.

In addition to the aurally handicapped program, the center offers comprehensive rehabilitation services for children and adults suffering all manner of physical handicaps. It is the only "freestanding" outpatient rehabilitation center in Southern California, and one of the few in the entire United States. Services are provided on the basis of ability to pay.

A primary source of the center's support is the annual Orange County Easter Seal Drive, scheduled March 1 through April 14. The drive is the only public fund-raising activity undertaken by the Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults of Orange County.

N. Viet Pushes Khe Sanh Attack

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese regulars clashed with U.S. Marines Sunday on a hill overlooking Khe Sanh, continuing a series of attacks that the allies believe foretell a big Communist offensive on South Vietnam's northern frontier.

It was the second straight day of battle in the Khe Sanh area. Associated Press correspondent Robert D. Ohman reported from Da Nang that the enemy attacked before dawn on Hill 861. Details were not available as the fighting raged.

In heavy fighting Saturday, around Hills 881 South and North, five miles north of Khe Sanh, the Marines reported killing 60 North Vietnamese while suffering one dead and 22 wounded. The same area was the scene of sustained fighting last April and May.

THE CASUALTIES were inflicted in two separate engagements. One involved an estimated Communist battalion and a Marine platoon. The other resulted when a platoon-size Marine unit made contact with an estimated Communist squad and called in a second platoon.

The North Vietnamese in the Khe Sanh area are believed to be elements of the 325C Division. The unit is reported to be at full strength — some 12,000 men — after replacing an estimated 1,000 troops lost in the 1967 campaign north of Khe Sanh.

The Marines have been preparing for a major Communist offensive along the DMZ before Tet, the Vietnamese lunar new year, which occurs Jan. 30.

$2 MILLION FIRE RAZES BOATYARD

ESSEX, Conn. (AP) — Ninety-six large pleasure boats, valued at more than $2 million, were destroyed Saturday night in a fire at the historic Essex Boat Works.

Stuart Ingersoll, owner of the boatyard, said the damage estimate did not include three storage sheds and an office building that also were destroyed.

Sheds contained boats that were as much as 70 feet long, said Robert Clark, a boatyard worker.

Some, he said, were valued at $150,000 and up.

One of the craft destroyed was in the final stage of construction. It was being built for Thomas Watson, president of IBM. Another craft was a 53-foot Alden-class schooner named Vagabond, which formerly belonged to the nearby Mystic Seaport.

Essex is one of Connecticut's most historic ports. In 1812, the boat works built one of the first U.S. warships, the Oliver Cromwell.

Soto Reminds of U.S. Treaty

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Eisaku Sato declared Saturday, Japan has obligations under the U.S.-Japan security treaty to permit visits by American nuclear-powered warships. He contended there is no danger Japan will be involved in war because of the visits.

He spoke at a convention of his Liberal Democratic party at a time when leftists were demonstrating against the current stop-over at Sasebo of the U.S. nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Enterprise.

Killed for Love Potion

GAUHATI, India (AP) — Game officials say poachers killed 37 of the rare variety of one-horned rhinoceros at the Kaziranga game sanctuary near here last year for their horns, which bring nearly $500 a pound when ground up for use in love potions.

Mafia Moves In on Credit Card Bonanza

$25 a piece, "within a day."

"If that isn't Mafia or Cosa Nostra or whatever you call organized crime, then I've been in the wrong business for 25 years."

The credit card idea, however, dates back farther than 25 years. It began in the 1920s when leading oil companies started allowing traveling salesmen to charge purchases.

It's grown since then.

NOW IT'S possible to go around the world, enjoying the best in food, accommodations and whatever, with little more than a nickel in your pocket.

You can travel on airplanes and trains or rent cars; hotels and restaurants accept them, as do gift shops, liquor stores, florists and taxicabs.

A Diner's Club member made credit card history a few years ago by charging a $60,000 African safari.

Company parties many times, officials say, run tabs up to $25,000.

One credit card agency hired a pretty San Francisco secretary to find the weaknesses of the credit card system. No "serious" consequences were apparent as she ran up a $1500 tab in the 30 day test.

She found her card took care of a wig, vacations, having a tooth filled, groceries, bikinis and tickets to baseball games. She stayed at the best motels, ate in "marvelous" restaurants and traveled the length of the state, first class.

ONLY FLAW to the credit card system, she found, were vending machines, parking meters, pay telephones and toll bridges. But, she added, "you could get around those with a little thought."

When she wanted to see a movie she was rebuffed by her conscience, she told officials.

"The only way I could figure to do that was to fly to New York and see one on the plane, but I was asked to stay within 'reasonable' limits."

But she's the only person — not using her own credit card — that has stayed within "reasonable limits." Two months ago, a 46-year-old Hollywood man lived on a credit card for seven months.

USING AN OIL company credit card — which most people don't realize can be used for almost anything — he charged up $8300 for food, liquor and lodging at a Denver motor lodge. He even gave a party for motel employees which cost $500.

The only rub — he had taken the credit card from an elderly Anaheim woman his employer, after he quit his job.

The author of an unpublished manuscript "Master Swindler" was given 14 years in prison for forgery and grand theft after being convicted of netting $22,000 in a credit card scheme which lasted three months. Along with the manuscript, arresting officers found 12 bank books, 143 charge plates and 300 temporary charge plates in his apartment.

A CREDIT CARD theft and forgery ring, made up of members mostly on the fringe of the motion picture industry, was broken up with the arrest of eight persons. The ring operated, arresting officers said, by having call girls steal credit cards from men and then sold, rented or used them to make purchases. Value of the card: $50.

A free-spending, high-tipping traveling man was arrested in Long Beach after leaving a $10,000 trail of bad debts. When arrested he had a wallet full of stolen credit cards and 13 cents in his pocket. He told officers he bought eight stolen credit cards for $500 in New York and used them to cross the country.

Credit cards have joined the driver's license, the Social Security card, and the family snapshot as a near-standard item in the wallets and pocketbooks of the nation's shoppers.

But they seem to disappear more easily.

Classic example was a $16,000 New York executive who discovered his wallet missing shortly after he left home.

In the wallet: $85 in cash and the complete executive's survival kit — 14 credit cards, ranging from the all-purpose American Express and Diner's Club to assorted hotel and oil company cards he hadn't applied for, but had arrived unsolicited in the mail.

A MONTH LATER, despite the fact he reported his loss, the bills started rolling in: $1500 on two oil company cards and $2150 on a central charge card.

It got worse the following month. There was $450 in Air Travel Card fares and $1800 for hotel bills for someone's trip to the Caribbean.

Then came a new twist.

The thief had used the card collection as reference to open a checking account and quickly left a trail of bad checks all along the east coast.

The executive's credit rating, despite his innocence, was shot, and he spent much of his free time fending off irate merchants who had been bilked — under his name.

Just a year ago, authorities were convinced that credit card misuse was confined to petty hoodlums, small time rings and private citizens off on wild speers.

This was despite the warning — as early as October of 1965 — by the chief postal inspector in Washington that funds from organized crime were being invested in large scale schemes to buy goods on credit, resell them and then vanish without paying for the merchandise.

POLICE OFFICIALS now all agree that the "sprees" cases are just the tip of the iceberg — that underneath, the world of organized crime is fast organizing the credit card business to take place with such proven money-makers as prostitution, gambling and narcotics.

And their activities are responsible for changing the racket from an expensive nuisance to a major nationwide bunc.

The bunc — and the New York planning session by the Mafia bosses — includes perfecting mechanisms for quick, cross-country transfer of stolen cards, the forging of cards and generating a new variety of user schemes.

The FBI recently closed in on a six-state bookie network which had placed some 6,500 longdistance calls to gamblers on pilfered telephone credit cards.

Police have also been alerted to a scheme called "bust out" where underworld front men buy into flourishing businesses, obtain dozens of credit cards in the names of various "employees" run up thousands in fraudulent purchases, then disappear after leaving the company in bankruptcy.

NEW YORK CITY police recently cracked a racket in which professional criminals ordered airline tickets by mail, using stolen credit cards then sold some $25,000 worth of tickets at discounts to individuals.

The trend towards organized criminal participation in the credit card fraud business started some 18 months ago, shortly after the first airlines contracted to honor credit cards.

"Once they knew they could turn cards into cash, and not just go into a gas station and buy gas or a restaurant for food, organized crime got interested," one official said.

Most of the Mafia's credit card profits, officials believe, are drawn from a central clearing house for cards and identity papers. They never deal directly with the black-marketing public.

"This is the reason," says Texaco's chief fraud investigator in Los Angeles, Wayne Butts, "at any given time we can buy as many forged or stolen cards as we want."

Butts, a retired homicide detective with the Los Angeles Police Department, is one of a growing list of "pros" being hired by the credit card companies to fight the problem.

Up to this point, efforts to combat the trend have been limited and inadequate.

MANY CREDIT card companies have tightened their credit checks and have abandoned the unsolicited mailing of cards.

But it still doesn't stop a growing problem.

Besides the lack of enforcement machinery, credit card cheats are getting a head start from the system itself.

The "time lag" is benefiting the criminal.

He knows, says Butts, that it takes time — often a week — before the cardholder realizes he's lost his card. And he realizes, too, that it takes another week or two before the company records the loss and distributes the number to participating merchants.

The "hot lists" of four big credit card companies currently include more than 25,000 cards. One company is so deluged with lost, stolen or forged cards, it lists on its "hot sheet" only those cards currently being misused.

"As of November of last year, the misuse of a credit card became a felony — up to then it was a misdemeanor," Butts says. "This has helped as far as prosecutions go."

BUT THE REAL help, most credit card officials agree, is the hiring of the professionals, whose abilities and contacts have paid off.

And with the professionals come methods to foil the criminals.

One is a telephonic communications center — a clearing agency — for stolen or lost cards.

"The quicker we can get those cards on the hot sheet the tougher it will be for the criminal," Butts says.

The problem, monumental at best, is causing police agencies to consider assigning detectives "full time" to credit card fraud.

"As of right now, credit card frauds are the tag end of the check detail," Long Beach Police officials said. "But the problem is growing so, we might have to assign some men full time."

The same holds true in other policing agencies.

A comradeship has developed between police agencies and the ex-policemen who now handle the credit card company problem, making the job easier for the police and harder for the criminal.

But most important of all, investigators feel, is now they are backed by company policies of following through with prosecution. Up to three months ago, all they wanted was the stolen credit card back.

"Police know that we'll fly a person involved in a credit card case anywhere to aid in prosecution," Butts says. "They know we mean business."

"We hope the criminal does too."

Fumes From Auto Kill Priest, Injure 2

CHICAGO (AP) — An 82-year-old Roman Catholic priest was asphyxiated Saturday by auto exhaust fumes that seeped into living quarters over the St. Salomea Church rectory on Chicago's far South Side. Two other priests and the rectory housekeeper were overcome, but they survived.

The dead priest was Rev. Paul Sabota.

Police said the janitor discovered their plight when he went to the rectory to learn why the priests did not appear for early morning mass. Detectives said the engine of a car in the garage was running.

Holy Cow!

By GEORGE LAINE

Sgt. Joe Patterson of the Lakewood Sheriff's Station detective bureau never saw a purple cow. He probably never hoped to see one, either.

But Patterson will see one come Monday when he arrives at work. There's a life-sized cow, painted purple, standing atop his desk.

Lakewood officers seized the beastie Friday as they culminated a month-long investigation of a Bellflower psychedelic shop by arresting five persons and confiscating a quantity of marijuana and dangerous drugs.

The animal, which had been positioned atop the store — The Purple Cow, 15923 Lakewood Blvd. — was taken down Friday when officers raided the shop. Parents had called the sheriff's station, officers reported, and told of the ease with which their young sons and daughters were purchasing marijuana and drugs.

An undercover officer visited the store, a sheriff's spokesman said, and was sold a quantity of marijuana.

Arrested were:

—Robert Ross Montgomery, 19, of 9020 Hegel St., Bellflower, identified as the owner of the store. He was charged with possession and sale of marijuana and with sale of dangerous drugs.

—A. J. Zito, 21, of 4502 W. Mauri ave., Santa Ana. He was charged with possession of marijuana.

—A 16-year-old boy, charged with possession of dangerous drugs, and two 14-year-old girls, charged with being in danger of leading an idle and immoral life.

Deputy "Pat" Patton and the Purple Cow

—Staff Photo By George Shuman

The fiberglass cow fitted a description of a bovine reported stolen by a dairy. It was black and white when reported taken. Officers said that Sergeant Patterson will have to determine if the cow was repainted. He'll have to work that investigation in around the assembly of the cases against the five persons nabbed Friday.

Airline to Offer 1/2-Price Flights to Visiting Aliens

NEW YORK (AP) — Trans World Airways will offer half-price flights to foreigners visiting the United States next summer, TWA president Charles C. Tillinghast Jr. has announced. In a telegram sent Friday to President Johnson, Tillinghast said: "In response to your constructive state of the union message and in support of your travel program, Mr. President, I have instructed TWA's representative at today's CAB (Civil Aeronautics Board) meeting to advise that TWA will offer during the coming summer travel season a 50 per cent discount on all domestic flights except during peak local periods for all bona fide residents of countries outside North and Central America and the Caribbean area."

Plea Entered for Captives

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spurred by the case of a Marine captain who disappeared on a Vietnam combat mission two years ago, Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., D-N.J., called Saturday for new efforts to gain repatriation of some 700 U.S. prisoners of North Vietnam.

He appealed for support from President Johnson and the 34 senators who have visited Vietnam.

If repatriation cannot be achieved, Williams said, arrangements for exchange of correspondence and packages should be sought.

He made public letters he has written to Johnson and the 34 senators.

He was visited recently by the parents of Marine Capt. James T. Egan of Mountlake, N.J., missing in Vietnam for two years.

They brought a petition, asking public letters be written to Johnson and the 34 senators.

Tape Gear Taken

Edward H. Smith, 1182 Olive Ave., told Long Beach police Saturday thieves stole $120 in tape recording gear from his car while it was parked in his driveway.

with more than 6,800 signatures, asking Williams' help in arranging negotiations for repatriation or exchange of mail.

Turks Break Ranks, Recognize Greeks

ATHENS (AP) — Turkey broke with the stand of its big western partners Saturday and became the first member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to extend formal recognition to the Greek regime that was withholding recognition to the Greek king.

The first NATO country to give it was about to go to war with Greece just two months ago over Cyprus.

Diplomats in Athens and Ankara felt the move might lead other NATO members to recognize the junta as well.

For the moment there was an element of irony in the situation. The United States and Britain, traditional friends of Greece, were withholding recognition to the Greek king as head of state.

The Athens regime itself has taken the stand that Zoltakis represents the king's office and is not a new head of state.

In Ankara, government sources said Ankara considered the full scope of normal diplomatic contact was necessary to work out negotiations for a cessation of bombing in the Vietnamese war, but said they did not favor the "immediate withdrawal" of American troops.

The delegation of about 20 Jewish, Roman Catholic and Protestant leaders made the statement as they left Saigon for Hong Kong as part of their "peace mission" to nine countries.

"We have some diversity of opinion concerning the issues involved in the war, and have not as yet had the time to attempt a comprehensive agreement among ourselves," said Rabbi Maurice Eisendrath, chairman of the peace delegation.

Dr. Dana McLean Greeley, president of the Unitarian Universalist Association, said he was in agreement with the President of the United States to reevaluate present U.S. policy, to give serious consideration to an immediate halt, on moral and political if not military grounds, in the bombing of North Vietnam, and to deescalate the level of military action with out immediate withdrawal.

He said members of the group agreed, too, that the U.S. should be "continually open to negotiation, including the use of the services of the secretary general of the United Nations" and should give strong encouragement to non-Communist social reform elements in Vietnam.

"We Americans cannot, in good conscience, promote justice at home and help to preserve quasi-feudalism by the rule and wealth of the few abroad," he said.

Clerics Mission Calls for Viet Bombing Halt

NEW YORK TIMES SERVICE — A group of visiting United States religious leaders called Saturday for negotiations and a cessation of bombing in the Vietnamese war, but said they did not favor the "immediate withdrawal" of American troops.

LBJ Unveils New Aid

nomination are Northern California Democratic Chairman Robert Coate; Board of Equalization member Richard Nevins; and State Sen. Anthony Beilenson, who recently announced his candidacy.

Here are the results of a STATE POLL Survey of Democratic voters, compared to previous results:

	Jan. '68	Sept. '67	Mar. '67
Alan Cranston	33%	31%	35%
Former State Controller
Samuel Yorty	20%	29%	33%
Mayor of Los Angeles
Robert Coate	6%	4%	—
Northern California Democratic State Chairman
Anthony Beilenson	5%	—	—
California State Senator
Richard Nevins	2%	5%	—
Board of Equalization Member
Don't Know	34%	31%	19%

When the leading Democratic contenders, Cranston and Yorty, are matched against each other, it is apparent that Cranston is steadily increasing his base of support among Democrats, while Yorty is losing Democratic support.

• Partial results

Here are the results from the most recent Survey compared to previous results:

	Jan. '68	Sept. '67	Mar. '67
Alan Cranston	52%	47%	46%
Samuel Yorty	27%	33%	35%
Don't Know	21%	20%	19%

In this most recent Survey, when the field of Democratic hopefuls is narrowed to include only the two leading contenders, the Cranston vote increases by nineteen per cent, while Yorty gains only seven per cent.

Also interesting is the fourteen per cent reduction in the number of voters who say "Don't Know," indicating a willingness on the part of Democratic voters to choose between these two men who generally are identified as having opposing political philosophies.

Analysis indicates that about one-third of the large number of Democratic voters who say "Don't Know," when asked to choose among all the Democrats, have actually decided that they will not vote for Yorty and are only undecided between the other contenders. This analysis was first reported in the September, 1967 State Poll, and the recent survey lends further support to this thesis.

When questioned further, Democrats responded as follows:

(Ques.) If the contest for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator from California were between these two men, for which ONE would you vote?

	Jan. '68	Sept. '67
Samuel Yorty	36%	41%

Again, when the field is narrowed, Yorty picks up fewer votes than do the other Democrats, and never commands a majority of the Democratic vote against any opponent.

It is also apparent that state Sen. Beilenson, who is an announced candidate, has, so far, made no impact on the California political scene.

Talking off the cuff to newsmen, grandfather Johnson injected a personal note:

"It takes a lot of people working on a baby to keep it sanitary. I know — I've been baby-sitting."

While Max Rafferty is able to defeat lesser known Democrat Beilenson, and has gained some strength against Yorty, he would still be defeated in a General Election contest with either Cranston or Yorty.

CRLA Renewed With 'No Strings'

From Our Sacramento Bureau

The California Rural Legal Assistance (CRLA) program has been renewed for another year without any of the strings attached to it which Governor Ronald Reagan's office had sought earlier this month.

This was disclosed today by Laurence P. Horan, western regional director of the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Horan said he was divulging details of negotiations between his and the Governor's staff in the CRLA matter "because of a grossly misleading press release from the Governor's office, which would indicate that we had, in fact, severely modified the CRLA grant."

Horan outlined this sequence of events:

On Dec. 20, OEO approved the $1,442,333 renewal grant, subject to a series of conditions imposed by OEO to assure CRLA's meeting the standards for operation of a federally funded legal service program.

TWO DAYS LATER, OEO submitted the grant to Reagan's office, thus beginning on Dec. 22 the 30 day period provided by law in which the Governor could disapprove the grant.

On Jan. 9, William Piclark Jr., the Governor's executive secretary to whom Reagan delegates authority in anti-poverty matters, proposed 15 modifications to the CRLA grant in a letter to Horan.

The regional OEO director, in response, said many of the objections had been adequately covered in the grant itself and required no new language. Other proposed modifications, he said, were totally unacceptable.

Horan then appealed to the Governor to refrain from a veto action which would halt a legal service program that Horan said has helped over a million and a half of California's poor. The regional OEO director said he would be willing to meet with the governor at any time to explain why the proposed modifications were unacceptable.

LAST WEDNESDAY, Theron Bell and Paul Zimmer, director and asst. director, of Reagan's state office of economic opportunity, came to the regional OEO in San Francisco, saying they wanted to discuss the CRLA matter further.

OEO insisted however, that all modifications in the CRLA grant proposed by the Governor's office be withdrawn.

In exchange, Horan said, he authorized his staff to prepare a letter clarifying — but not changing — OEO's position on the CRLA grant.

On Friday morning, the Governor's office agreed to withdraw the last of its proposed modifications. OEO then issued the clarifying letter.

transmission is now at the police station. Please help. I need my car to get to work. C. D. Long Beach.

A. We checked with Sgt. Jimmie D. Reed, auto theft detail, Long Beach Police Department. He explained that the transmission had been taken from you because an insurance company had paid a claim on the stolen car, and thus, became the legal owner of the transmission. The insurance company has agreed to sell back the transmission to you. The policing of swap meets is a problem. Sheriff's Sgt. George C. Woodman, burglary detail, says that he supplies "buy forms" to swap meet organizers on a voluntary basis. The forms are filled out with the name of the establishment, the address and name of the seller, the piece of merchandise being sold and any identifying marks. When these forms are returned they are checked to see if any of the merchandise sold was stolen. He adds that periodically law enforcement officials do visit the swap meets to check on stolen goods, but that the best advice is still to be cautious.

Patient Pen Pal

We will also forward your address to other readers who might wish to write you.

Reagan Again Rips U.S. Fiscal Policy

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — California Gov. Ronald Reagan said Saturday night he was "not concerned" with public opinion polls that indicate his popularity is slipping as a potential presidential candidate.

Reagan said, "If anyone takes a poll showing slipping in regards to the job that I am doing, I will then be concerned."

Reagan spoke at a fundraising rally for Missouri Republicans in which he took sharp issue with President Johnson's "State of the Union" message.

Reagan said, "The question remains, 'which union?' It didn't sound like the United States we've come to know and worry about."

"Inflation knocks at every door because of the President's romance with something called the 'new economics,'" he said.

Reagan said the President "is spending a million dollars more each month than we are taking in."

"It takes the combined incomes of almost five families to pay the cost of government for one second."

"Did you just blink your eyes? Well, before they had spent $4,550."

Reagan said the President is offering the American public the opportunity to be taken "only" $8 billion farther into debt. He said, "We have the uncomfortable feeling that we've just been lapped for a campaign contribution."

Reagan flew to St. Louis in his private jet from Sacramento. He was to return to the West Coast six hours later.

At a news conference held immediately after arriving in mid-town St. Louis, Reagan said repeatedly that he is not a candidate for President.

On speculation that a "rockefeller-Reagan" ticket would be the strongest ticket Republicans could offer this year, he said, "I don't put much stock in that ticket because it puts together the two noncandidates."

Asked what his response would be "if the party rose up" and issued a mandate, Reagan said, to laughter, "I'd argue it."

Romney's Campaign Hard Work

Wisconsin Race Real Exercise for 'Underdog'

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Gov. George Romney got his Wisconsin presidential primary campaign going Saturday by running a mile, shooting some baskets and meeting the people.

Smiling and appearing confident, Romney pictures himself as an "underdog" in the Wisconsin race. Then the Michigan Republican went out and did what he said he is best at — "getting to meet with the people and talk about the issues."

"I'm an underdog, but not as much as I was in New Hampshire," he said. "We got things going in the right direction there."

Romney said Richard Nixon is the leader in Wisconsin as he is in New Hampshire, where Romney campaigned earlier this week.

Romney's Wisconsin campaign was literally off and running.

THE TRIM governor got started by running a mile with a physical fitness group at the Milwaukee Central YMCA, pacing the 38 runners most of the way just after dawn.

Sweat dripping from his face, he was presented with a sweatshirt making him an honorary member of the club's 1,000-mile club.

Romney then grabbed a basketball and spent the next 10 minutes shooting baskets in a corner of the gym.

Following a quick breakfast, Romney visited two of his "home headquarters" where he was greeted by brass bands and clusters of backers.

He later met his wife at the Romney for President headquarters in downtown Milwaukee. There he told a few men that President Johnson's "State of the Union" address Wednesday night sounded like "marching orders for another year on the treadmill — devoid of promise or hope."

ARABS DEMAND REVENGE

AMMAN, Jordan (UPI) — Thousands of Arabs demanded weapons and "revenge" against Israel Saturday when King Hussein of Jordan and President Charles Helou of Lebanon visited a tent city for war refugees in the Jordan River valley.

"Liberate Palestine!" some of the 15,000 refugees shouted. "Give us arms for revenge against Israeli aggression!"

The two Arab leaders were surrounded by the Arabs at one point during the tour of the camp.

Helou was in Jordan for a two-day visit.

In Damascus, Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad held a second round of talks Saturday with Syrian leaders and delivered a personal message from President Gamal Abdel Nasser in President Nuruddin Atassi. The contents were not disclosed.

In Cairo, officials of eight guerrilla groups who want to "liberate" Palestine announced Saturday they had failed to form a single organization but agreed to step up terrorist activity against Israel.

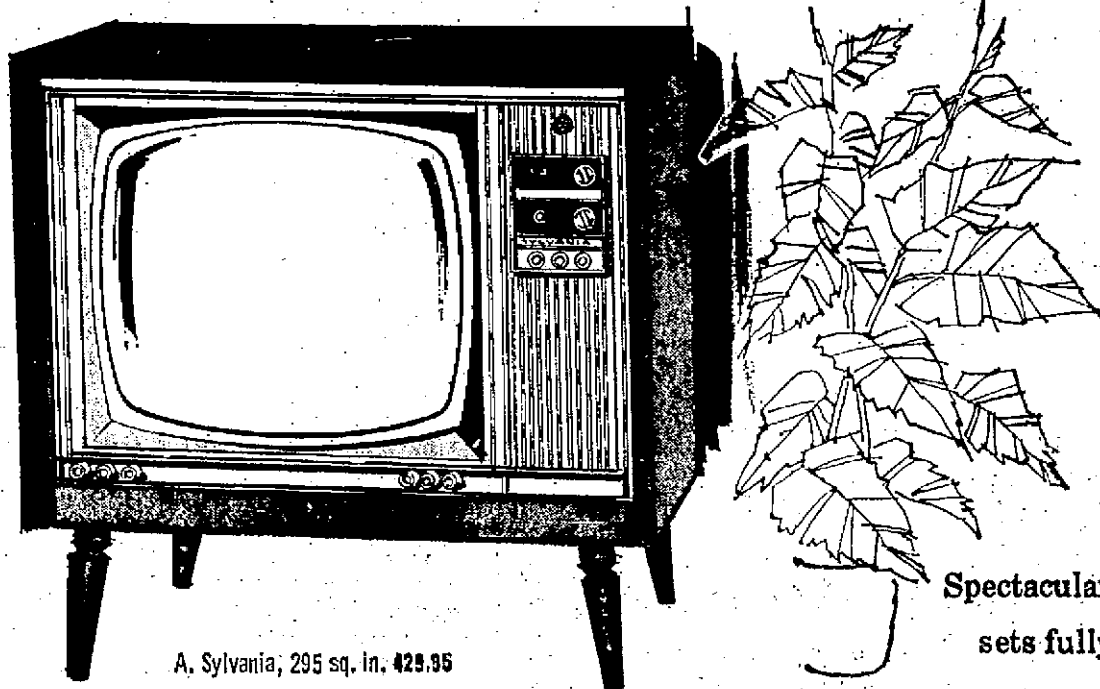

Grand Jury Gets Records on Powell

NIXON SEES U.S. LAGGING

'Falling Behind in Atom Race,'
He Maintains

HOUSTON (UPI) — Former Vice President Richard Nixon warned Saturday the Soviet Union will match the United States nuclear capability within three years because of the manner in which President Johnson is handling our foreign policy.

Nixon left shortly after the speech, ending a three-stop visit to Texas and heading back to New York.

Nixon said President Eisenhower left office Jan. 20, 1961 and "the advantage of the United States was seven-to-one in deliverable (nuclear) capability over the Soviet Union."

"We find that that advantage has been reduced to two or two-and-a-half to one today," he said. "In three years, the Soviet Union will be equal to us in nuclear capability and in four years at the present rate they can pass us."

"In four years, they can pass us," he said.

"The only reason we have avoided a third world war is because of our superior nuclear strength," Nixon said.

Nixon said our foreign policy has brought a breakdown of alliances in Europe and Latin America. He described a "diplomatic gap" with France and economic and trade problems with England.

Nixon spoke in Houston to a crowd of some 1,500, many of them waving such banners as "Viva Nixon," "Nixon For Us in 1968." He spoke earlier in Dallas and San Antonio on a 16-hour Texas tour.

In Dallas, Nixon told 3,500 persons at a rally that "People who think Texas is solidly in the black for Lyndon Johnson should take another look."

British Rebels Suspended

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson, ending a week of unrelieved crisis for his Labor government, cracked down Saturday on rebels within party ranks in Parliament.

He suspended 25 Laborite lawmakers from membership in the majority caucus in the House of Commons, thus depriving them of a voice in government decisions.

Most of the suspended rebels were leftwingers, including fiery Michael Foot. Others included such right-wingers as Reginald Paget, who called Friday for Wilson's resignation as prime minister.

Their offense was failing to support their government in a crucial parliamentary vote approving Wilson's slashing austerity program following devaluation of the pound.

RARELY, IF EVER, in British politics have so many members of a ruling party been thus suspended.

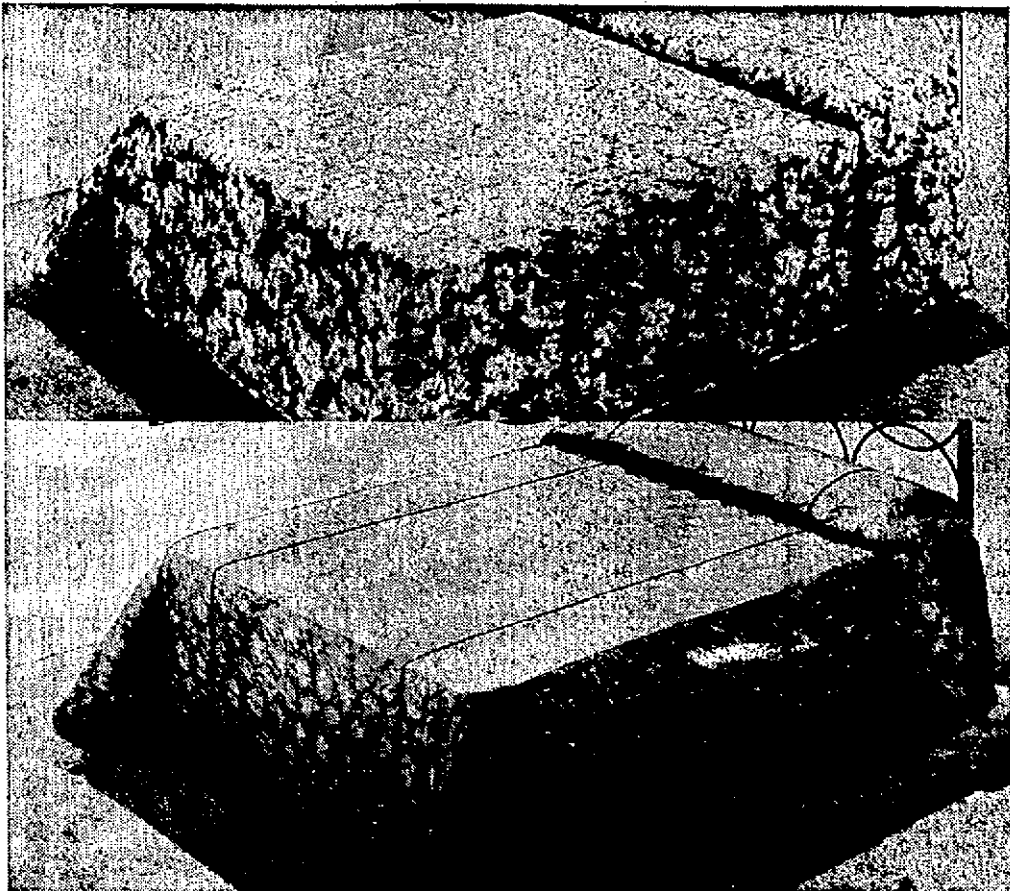

Wilson, still commanding a big majority in the House of Commons even without the rebels, clearly was striving to reassert the authority he has lost in the weeks since devaluation Nov. 18. If past experience is anything to go by, the rebels will be readmitted to the Laborite ranks in Parliament whenever they are prepared to pledge loyalty again to Wilson's leadership. Even if the rebels are not counted, Labor has 327 of the 630 House of Commons seats, to 254 for the Conservatives.

The pipe-smoking prime minister, a master of parliamentary techniques, nevertheless was deep in the doghouse of national politics. Beset by policy failures, scorned by Conservative opponents, assailed by leftwing friends, Wilson has the look of a man fighting for his political life.

But the prime minister is canny.

"A week in politics is a long time," he once remarked to a newsman.

L.B. Women's Jail Really Isn't Such a Bad Place

By BARBARA KNESIS

As the prison gates rattled open to admit me there came an eerie, fidgety feeling and memories of hundreds of movies about jails and rubber hoses and king-size matrons and bread and water that I never knew I retained.

It was a Friday night and I had been sentenced by my boss without even a trial to an eight-hour shift as matron in the Long Beach City Jail.

Actually I was a victim of circumstances, the circumstances being I was the only one in the office when "my warden" gave birth to his brainstorm.

Matron Barbara LeGate, an attractive young woman with blonde hair standing at attention atop her tall, slender frame, greeted me and pointed to a chair. Then she did something unheard of in my matron movie recollections — she smiled.

The big, black hands on the clock overhead traveled toward 4:30 p.m.

"The girls are getting ready for dinner," she said, lighting a cigarette. "We try to keep a regular routine going so the girls will know what to expect. If we are five minutes off we hear about it from them."

Minutes later, Cassy, a buxom trusty who bounced when she walked and hummed in between talk, wheeled in a dinner server. She was aided by an older woman, slight and far more serious. It was Sarah, also a trusty.

"Gee that suuure is a fine picture," Cassy said, stopping the server and focusing her attention on a painting on display in the matron's quarters.

Miss LeGate laughed.

"You know," she said, "you're supposed to let other people compliment your work."

"Yeah I know," Cassy admitted, "but it's still a good picture." Then she went back to dishing up dinner for the rest of the inmates.

That night there were eight including Janie, a young blonde in for drunk and disorderly who spent much of her time writing love letters to five different men and Annie, a prostitute, with the frizzy brown hair who wanted to go back home to Indiana far away from the men who wanted to take advantage of her retardedness, and Lillian who didn't think about her little boy when she robbed that liquor store, but who had thought of little else since, and Karen who sold her body "because my husband was just too beautiful to work."

Sarah held the plates while Cassy smothered them with healthy portions of fish, carrots, salad, bread and butter and jello.

My stomach growled. Before I knew it I had a heaping hill of the same before me. The matrons, Miss LeGate said, eat what the prisoners eat since they cannot leave their posts to go out for meals.

Piped-in music played softly in the background.

"It goes into all the cells," Miss LeGate explained. "We got it with money from the Prisoners Welfare Fund" — she grimaced — "the only trouble is the men control the stations. It's murder on the girls when there's a ball game on."

Then it was time to check the inmates. At least once an hour the matron must take count.

I walked down the narrow hallway with Miss LeGate. The girls were sitting in the day room. This is a long, narrow area with three picnic tables where the prisoners spend much of their day. They have games, books, and projects to amuse themselves.

"How are we doing," Miss LeGate asked cheerily.

"I'm cold," one of the older women replied.

Miss LeGate walked over and closed the window.

"With service like this," she said, "you think you're at the Ritz."

The candy and cigarette man made his second and last visit of the day about 6:30 p.m. The girls, who can keep as much as $5 placed their orders through the trusties and waited anxiously for their treats.

The jail's first new customer arrived soon after the candy man. She was a nicely-dressed, middle-aged woman who was picked up for shoplifting. She was searched and her watch, rings and pocketbook placed inside a safe with the rest of the inmate's personal.

The woman's hand fluttered nervously as she tried to explain to her husband over the phone what had happened.

"I was going to pay for it," she fumbled, "but I didn't."

She was then led to a little room to await bail.

"There's no sense in disturbing the rest of the girls," Miss LeGate said.

It was quiet for a while and we used the time to chat with the inmates.

"Some of us were talking earlier about what's worse — an alcoholic or a prostitute," Kay said. "They all said an alcoholic is worse. But, man, all an alcoholic gets is drunk. At least a prostitute gets money."

She said she was once a street-walker.

"I'm not ashamed of it either," she added, hastily, "but I ain't proud of it, either. It was a job." She paused for a minute, then added, "some people don't think you have any feelings, but you do."

At 9 p.m. the lights went out.

"All right, girls," Miss LeGate yelled, "arms in" and the doors to the tiny cubicles closed with a slam until 5:30 a.m.

Silence descended on the fifth floor and stayed until Clair arrived, still struggling with two officers despite the handcuffs on her wrists.

She glared hard at Miss LeGate.

REPORTER Barbara Knesis enacts role of prisoner as she talks to her husband. Phone setup enables prisoners to talk to visitors without touching them.

"They tried to strangle me," she screamed, looking at the two young officers. "I hope you're going to book them for attempted murder."

"Hello, Clair," Miss LeGate said, recognizing her. "I got to get to the hospital. I'm delivering two babies tonight," she screamed.

The woman, who sometimes imagines strange things, was drunk and would be taken to county jail when she sobered up.

Miss LeGate explained. In the meantime her handbag was confiscated and she was taken off to the tank to sober up. Within five minutes she was sleeping soundly.

The two hands on the clock signaled the end of the shift and when the gates closed behind me I couldn't help thinking of what one of the girls had said.

"If you have to be in jail, Long Beach is a real swinging jail."

Sailor Misses, Drowns After Leap to Ferry

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A sailor who tried to jump aboard a ferry drowned Saturday officials reported.

Coroner's office said PO 3.C. John E. Cooper, 24, went by ferry from San Diego to North Island and then, for reasons unknown, tried to jump back on the same ferry as it was departing on its return trip at 3:45 a.m.

He plunged into the water and was lost despite efforts by Ens. John Frohnmayer who saw the incident from the quarter deck of the cruiser Oklahoma City, docked nearby. Frohnmayer ran to the dock, posted off his uniform and dived in, but he was unable to find Cooper.

Marine Lt. Stanley Allen, using scuba gear, found the body about an hour later.

Pair Fired in Fatal Cable Car Crash

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The two operators of a cable car which killed two persons and injured 41 in a fiery collision last month have been fired.

And a coroner's jury has recommended that one of them, Arthur L. Coats, 42, be charged with involuntary manslaughter.

The City Public Utilities Commission, which operates the colorful cable cars, announced the dismissal of Coats, the gripman on the ill-fated car, and Louis A. Ables, 24, the conductor.

Cape Town Heart Man Doing Fine

Blaiberg Eating,
Walking, Making
'Steady Progress'

United Press International

Dr. Philip J. Blaiberg, 58, Saturday entered the 19th day of a new life that is his only because a miracle of surgery replaced his dying heart with the healthy heart of a young man.

The South African dentist has now lived with a dead man's heart longer than anyone in the brief and controversial history of human heart transplants.

A bulletin from Groote Schuur hospital in Cape Town Saturday said Blaiberg was making "steady progress," exercising every day, walking regularly and well on the way to a normal diet. Doctors said they were looking forward to the day when Blaiberg will walk out of the hospital and go home.

Louis Washkansky, 53, died in Groote Schuur hospital in Cape Town on Dec. 21 — 18 days after Dr. Christiaan Barnard gave him the heart of Denise Darvall, 25, fatally injured in a traffic accident.

Washkansky, the first person in history to receive a second-hand heart, succumbed to pneumonia fostered by the fact his resistance to disease had been weakened by the very drugs intended to prevent his body from rejecting the alien tissue.

Set Legal Study on Transplants

From Our L.A. Bureau

The heart transplant era "inevitably" will confront authorities with criminal complaint requests from some relatives of organ donors, District Attorney Evelle J. Younger warned Saturday.

There also will be complaints from one doctor or institution concerning another, he predicted.

Coupled with the Younger concern on the legal implications of transplants was a district attorney's office announcement that a top-level committee of Los Angeles County doctors and lawyers will be formed to study the problem.

Younger invited the committee to meet Feb. 9 in his Hall of Justice office.

The complaint requests, he said "inevitably" will come with the increase in transplant surgery.

"MEDICINE must be permitted to save those who otherwise would die. But the public has to be assured that the living — no matter how ill — will not be sacrificed," Younger declared.

Invited to join Younger's transplant committee were Charles F. Forbes, counsel, Los Angeles Hospital Council; Dr. Jean F. Crum, president, Los Angeles County Medical Assn.; Dr. Sherman M. Mellinkoff, dean, School of Medicine, UCLA Medical Center.

Dr. Roger W. Oblath, president, Los Angeles County Heart Assn.; Dr. Thomas Noguchi, county coroner, and Deputy District Attorney John Miner, head of the office's medical-legal section.

"Legal complications of an Eastern case have just been publicized. I strongly believe we have a mutual duty to anticipate and, if possible, forestall these problems from happening," declared Younger.

He said no medical breakthrough has so aroused the public as organ transplants.

20 Festival Spills

AHMEDABAD, India (AP) — Twenty persons were hospitalized here in a single day with injuries suffered in falls from rooftops. The rash of spills came during a Hindu festival in which nearly everyone flies a kite and many climb to the roofs to get a better view.

Professor Tries Teaching Animals to Converse

LOGAN, Utah (UPI) — A Utah State University psychologist is trying to teach animals how to "talk" better — not only among themselves but in communicating with humans.

Although it long has been acknowledged that most animals have some means of vocal communication, the utterances are primitive and apparently express only general situations, such as alarm or contentment.

Nobody knows what animals actually talk about — the language barrier between human and animal is one that man, in all his sophistication, so far has been unable to break. It is this barrier that Dr. Marvin F. Daley, USU associate professor of psychology and, for the last three years, director of the university's animal psychology laboratory, seeks to penetrate.

Daley's approach is simple enough in theory: Reward the animal for making sounds you want it to make and thus teach it a new language, much in the same way a newborn baby learns words.

But this is more complicated than it may seem.

"It's harder than you might think to reward an animal such as the guinea pigs we work with for making a particular sound," he said.

"In a fraction of a second there is a terrific change in frequency in the call. We must have very precise equipment to reward the animal at the crucial time."

One approach is the surgical insertion of an electrode in the guinea pig's head to stimulate the animal's hypothalamus, or pleasure center. A computer monitors the sounds the animal makes, and the machine is programmed to stimulate the animal with an electric shock when he makes a sound desired by the experimenter.

"It's the same thing as teaching an animal to press a bar or exhibit some other behavior," Daley said. "You reward them when they make the move you want and soon they make the move whenever you want it."

Wilson to Fly to Moscow in Quest of Vietnam Peace

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson will fly to Moscow Monday to discuss with Kremlin leaders the latest signals from North Vietnam for peace talks.

Wilson, accompanied by a few close advisers, will meet with Premier Alexei Kosygin, Communist Party Chief Leonid Brezhnev and other key Soviet officials.

Sources close to the prime minister left little doubt that during his three-day visit he once again will take up the Vietnam issue with his hosts, to probe the latest prospects for a ceasefire and an eventual settlement.

BRITAIN AND Russia are the cochairmen of the Geneva Conference, which in 1954 settled the Indochina War.

Wilson appeared doubtful of success of his new Vietnam peace effort, but in the light of latest rumblings from Hanoi, the prospects of a new probe were rated somewhat more promising.

What is considered important in this context is for Wilson to feel out Russia's own latest position on the Vietnam issue and to establish whether the Soviet Union would be prepared to play an active part in new direct soundings in Hanoi.

Wilson and Kosygin tried to get Soviet leader visited for a Vietnam cease-fire in February last year, when Brezhnev was in Britain.

Russians at the time indicated they had sufficient influence with the regime of Ho Chi Minh and undertook, in effect, to deliver the North Vietnamese to the conference table if American bombing were halted. But they failed to win a commitment from Hanoi for the reciprocal gesture asked by the Americans, not to take military advantage of a bombing pause.

Since then Russian influence in Hanoi has slumped to almost zero level, authoritative Communist sources said. Despite stepped-up and costly Soviet arms supplies, Ho Chi Minh's regime has continued to cold-shoulder any Soviet political counsel and, for that matter, any advice from the Communist East Europeans and Peking.

Conference, since the idea is premature. Wilson was expected to endorse President Johnson's most recent offer for peace talks. The Russians, it is held could be of assistance if they were to help elicit a clear-cut definition from Hanoi of its peace terms. Another area of probably British intervention was expected to be a call for Russian cooperation in moves to strengthen the International Control Commission for Cambodia, to help block Communists using the kingdom as a haven in the Vietnam war.

Anti-Riot Guard Held Adequate

New York Times Service WASHINGTON — Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark said Saturday the nation must "plan for the worst and hope for the best" to prevent widespread rioting in the cities this summer.

"Riots can be prevented," he said. "But if they do occur," he added, "we can control them."

Clark spoke at a news conference called to discuss a series of conferences being held for about 120 police chiefs and top city officials on methods to prevent and control riots. The first conference was held last week near Warrenton, Va., for 19 police chiefs and their mayors.

The conferences are being sponsored by the Justice Department and the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

CLARK SAID that the police chiefs of the nation's major cities — those of 100,000 population or over — share his views that riots, such as those that occurred in many cities last summer, can be prevented.

CLARK SAID the time has come for "America to face the fact that we have neglected law enforcement for decades. We need more police, better police, better trained police."

Police costs, on federal, state and local levels, totaled $2.8 billion last year, he said.

"And this in a country that spent $8.8 billion last year on tobacco and $12.4 billion on liquor," he said.

The policeman, Clark said, "is the man in the middle this year. His responsibility to the nation is perhaps greater than at any time in history."

Powell Sees Loot on Lecture Circuit

By TED POSTON

SAN FRANCISCO (NANA) — Adam Clayton Powell expects to more than double his former $30,000 congressional salary this year by addressing white college students across the country on the virtues of black power, the unseated representative told the North American Newspaper Alliance just a few hours before flying to Bimini, his Bahama home for more than a year.

"I picked up $5,000 out here on my first four days," Powell said, lounging in a silk bathrobe in his 8th-floor double suite in the Jack Tar Hotel, "and I turned down $1,000 today from the University of Oregon and another grand from another school because sheer exhaustion is threatening to bring me down with the flu."

A bit wan under his deep Bimini tan, Powell discussed the new career opening before him with a seeming awe.

"I've never seen anything like it," he said, "and this is only the beginning. I've been flooded with invitations from all over the country. I've got to get myself organized if I'm to accept even half of them."

"I'M FLYING back to Bimini to get my health straight, and then I'm going to open my cross-country tour by accepting invitations from the student bodies of four white colleges and universities in Florida."

Then I'll open my North Carolina tour at Duke University, after another short rest in Bimini. Then the student bodies of five eastern colleges — Amherst, Williams, Wellesley, Holyoke and Smith — will sponsor me at the University of Massachusetts.

The adjoining door of the other suite opened and in walked Ardie Ivie, assistant to UCLA's dean of student activities. He told Powell that the student council of the University of Oklahoma was on the wire and offering him $1,500 "plus full expenses for you and your staff" for any date he would set.

"Put them down at the end of the Florida tour," Powell said wearily, then, "No, hold it. Maybe we can hit them when we go to Indiana and Michigan State. Then we can go from there to Oregon and Washington State and pick up those canceled dates. It should be warm enough up there by then."

AS THE TALL, gangling Ivie went to the other suite to take care of the University of Oklahoma, a trim young man emerged from the bathroom, naked to the waist, muscles rippling.

"That's my other bodyguard — Ed Brown," Powell chuckled. "He's earned his Black Belt in karate. He can disable any human with a single blow."

Brown, as unsmiling as Ivie, gazed at the visitor steadily from behind the large dark glasses which both wear, until Powell told him: "Oh, he's an old friend, but he'll probably try to beat my brains out on 'Face the Nation' when we get over to the CBS studio."

"Brown, who manages the Maverick Flats, Los Angeles' only Black Power discotheque, for former Cleveland Browns grid star Jim Brown, spoke for the first time. 'You tell him about that white cat?'"

POWELL explained. It seemed that a couple of days before, while Powell was having lunch with the dean of one of the universities, another Powell protector — "a white friend of mine from Florida named Tom Catt" — noticed a strange white man lounging nearby, intently watching. Noticing a bulge in the stranger's pocket, Catt seized him and hurled him against the wall, revealing the gun. Catt rushed over to warn Powell and the intruder scrambled to his feet and fled before he could be held for the police.

But mention of the CBS program brought Powell back to the matter of this year's income.

"I'm doing this CBS thing for free," he said. "It's good national exposure. But TV is opening up too. I met a young TV producer the other day on one of my walks through Watts and he's giving me $1,000 for a 30-minute radio-TV thing which he is going to package for independent stations across the country."

HE CONCENTRATED on rearing out his pipe, and said softly:

"What really impresses me is the amount of money these student organizations have in their treasuries. Why, they've got some $6 million out there at UCLA — over $3 million of it in cash — and don't forget that it is the students and not the college administrations who are bringing me to the campuses."

The disarming Powell grin again, and: "You know, it's rather ironic that I haven't been invited to a single Negro college. Of course the United Negro College Fund is the factor there. Without all that money they get from people like the Rockefellers, any one of those Negro colleges would go down in a minute. But I think I just might drop in on Florida A. & M. while I'm doing Florida. Yep, I think the students would welcome me at Tallahassee."

But commercial TV and campus treasuries are not the only things keeping the wolf away from Adam's door. He delivered a fiery sermon on "What's in Your Head?" to an overflow congregation at the prominent Third Baptist Church here, and received "a very fine honorarium and expenses."

POWELL modestly terms his California foray "sensational" and, in fact, has been widely hailed by at least 20,000 students, 99 per cent of them white (he claims 35,000 and accuses the press of underestimating his appeal on four campuses). He has derided established figures like Roy Wilkins and Whitney Young, and exhorted the white students to pay homage to and follow the very men who pushed most whites out of the civil rights movement — Stokely Carmichael, H. Rap Brown and Floyd McKissick.

The white students applauded.

His press conferences, daily, have been wall-to-wall affairs. Occasionally, questions arose which would have embarrassed another man.

One reporter asked about charges by the UCLA student group that their illustrious guest had skipped out, leaving them with a $500 tab at the Bel Air Sands Motel in Los Angeles — after the Associated Students Inc. had paid him $1,250 for his appearance.

"IT WAS a misunderstanding," Powell said. "I thought the $1,250 was exclusive of expenses. But I didn't pick that hotel with its plush sitting rooms and kitchenette. My name is not on the registry. And, anyway, it was five members of their group who rushed in and ordered all those steak dinners and drinks."

"The bill has been paid by the university," said Ardie Ivie from behind his black glasses.

Another reporter reminded Powell that he had told the press in Los Angeles the other day that Rev. Martin Luther King had come down to Bimini 10 days ago to tell the congressman-elect that King's own non-violent program had failed and that Adam Clayton Powell represented the only hope for the Negro people. The reporter said that King had denied this in New York and said he hadn't even conferred with Powell during his three days of rest on Bimini.

Powell replied: "I don't want to call anybody a liar, so I won't say anything."

HE ADDED: "He (King) conferred with me personally on each and every one of those three days; he not only begged me to come to Atlanta at any price I wanted ($1,500 and expenses), but I have five witnesses who heard him say to me:

"Adam, despite my own position, posture and image, you are the only man who can save the situation facing the black man in the U.S."

Powell then said: "Well, King's only been on the fringe of the movement. I've been in the heat of it since I was 12 years old and first met Marcus Garvey."

At one press conference in Los Angeles, Powell looked out and saw his former wife, Jazz pianist Hazel Scott, in the audience. He rushed over and embraced her.

"SHE LOOKED great," he said later, "real great. She had just closed an engagement in one of the big nightclubs. She told me that Skipper (his son, Adam Clayton Powell III) was coming down to visit me next week. Edward Bennett Williams, my lawyer, is coming down then too."

Powell was less effusive when CBS's Morton Dean mentioned his third — and estranged — wife on "Face the Nation," and recalled that Mrs. Yvette Powell had claimed that her husband had once told her that he was not a Negro at all, but the illegitimate descendant of a white slave owner.

Said Powell: "Anyone who has an estranged wife has automatically inherited a liar."

Negro Seeking N.C. Governorship

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Reginald Hawkins, a Negro dentist, expects to become governor of North Carolina by appealing to "black men and poor whites" with a program for their common good.

Hawkins announced a week ago that he would be the first Negro ever to run for governor of the state as a Democratic candidate. He is running against Lt. Gov. Robert Scott and former State Democratic Party Chairman J. Melville Broughton Jr., both sons of former governors.

"I'm not the son of a former governor," Hawkins said. "I'm the son of a poor black man and I'm trying to do something for the sons of other poor men, both black and white."

"I PLAN TO RUN this campaign the same way we ran the civil rights fight," Hawkins said. "But instead of campaigning for the right to drink a cup of coffee in a restaurant, I'm campaigning for the right to sit in the governor's mansion."

Hawkins, 44, a medium-sized man with a neat-close cropped mustache, should know how to run a civil rights campaign. He was involved in the nation's first sit-in at Greensboro, N.C., in 1960 and has since been "bombed, shot at, spit on and cussed" as a social and local Democratic political leader who has made his presence felt in the state for a number of years.

Hawkins, who talks in short, rapid bursts and then subsides into periods of thought, thinks he can beat both Scott and Broughton. He bases this on this appeal to the state's 550,000 voting age Negroes — of which 280,000 are registered.

ALTHOUGH the poor white is generally considered to be the greatest detractor of the Negro, Hawkins said he expects to get many votes from this class "because I'm people-oriented."

"The only thing the (poor) white man has that makes him supreme over the Negro is his color. He stays in the South so he can call the black man 'nigger' and put him in the back of the bus," Hawkins said. "The power structure has never gone after him for anything except to put him against the Negro."

AIRMAN GUIDES TOUR THROUGH INSIDES OF "SPACE EYE" AT ELGIN AFB, FLA.

$62-MILLION RADAR COMPLEX

Keeping Eye on Space Things

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

ELGIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. — America's first radar complex specifically designed to track and identify objects in space for the Air Defense Command will go into full operation here in April.

More than six years in the making, the gigantic, $62 million installation will detect and catalogue some 1,500 manmade objects now orbiting the earth and more than 5,000 expected to be in orbit by the mid-1970s.

However, like other space age developments requiring long lead times, the AN-FPS-85 system built by Bendix Radio Co. for the Air Force space tracking program is already semi-obsolete for its primary purpose of defense.

ADVANCES in space technology, particularly in weaponry concepts, have surpassed the capabilities of the system much as the auto population explosion in Southern California has exceeded the rush hour capacity of new freeways.

The FPS-85, also known as the Space Detection and Tracking System, will give far less warning time of a fractional orbital bomb attack than more recently developed radar with over-the-horizon capabilities.

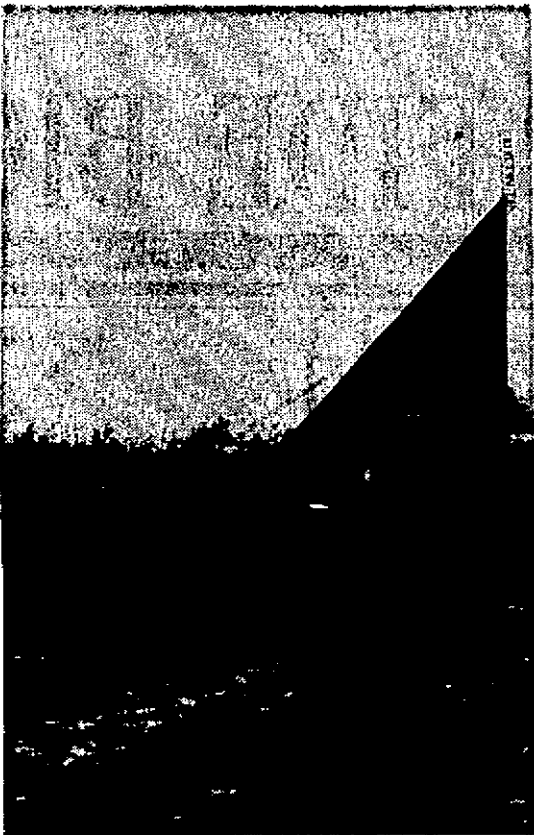

Although the installation will be entirely manned by Air Force personnel as a part of the North American Defense Command, its basic utility will be that of a scientific instrument with military applications.

Computer data transmitted instantly to NORAD headquarters deep in a Colorado mountain fortress will distinguish between harmless space debris such as exhausted booster rockets, and unknown objects posing a threat to national security.

The new radar also will detect sea-launchings of missiles within its cone of surveillance and predict their targets in time to launch countermeasures.

THE EQUIPMENT will operate automatically 24 hours a day, but will require a staff of 300 or more for monitoring in time to launch countermeasures.

With 5,184 separate transmitters and 4,660 receivers embedded in a huge slanted slab of plastic foam on the side of the system's 13-story building, the system scans deep into space like the compound eye of a gigantic insect. Failure of individual portions will have little effect on its overall performance.

RADAR COMPLEX SCANS SPACE FOR AIR COMMAND

Because the powerful radar beam is steered electronically in micro-seconds instead of by slower mechanical means, the system can track many space objects in such rapid succession that it appears to be simultaneous.

Development of this space-age capability may be equally important to civil aviation. Applied as a nationwide air control system, it could provide a solution to the ever-increasing problem of the crowded skies.

Icebreaker Glacier to Join 2-Year Study of Weddell Sea

The Long Beach-based icebreaker Glacier this month is scheduled to be part of the first oceanographic study of the ice-covered Weddell Sea in the antarctic.

The 310-foot Glacier, will depart Punta, Chile Jan. 31 to aid in the two-year survey.

The ship with 251 men on board will remain in the Weddell Sea area until the end of March, the Coast Guard public information office said.

The ship is equipped with automatic equipment to receive satellite-photos showing ing openings in the ice cap and a turbine-powered helicopter.

THE EXPEDITION will include physical, biological, chemical, and geological observations. Water samples will be taken and studied, together with core samples from the ocean floor.

on Oct. 30 to participate in the international expedition. The ship is due to return in mid-April.

The Weddell Sea project is being coordinated by the office of Antarctic Programs, National Science Foundation.

Some 50 scientists and technicians from Argentina, Norway, West Germany and the U.S. are participating.

Science Shrinks Painful Hemorrhoids Stops Itch—Relieves Pain

Finds Way That Both Relieves Pain and Shrinks Piles In Most Cases

New York, N.Y. (Special): Science discovered a medication with the ability, in most cases, to actually shrink hemorrhoids and promptly stop the burning itch and relieve pain.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, very striking improvement was reported and verified by doctors' observations. Pain and itching were promptly relieved. Then this medication starts right in to gently reduce the swelling of inflamed, irritated piles.

This conducted on hundreds of patients by leading doctors in

New York City, in Washington, D.C. and at a Midwest Medical Center proved this so. And it was all done without narcotics or stinging astringents of any kind.

The secret is Preparation H® — an exclusive formula for the treatment of hemorrhoids. There is no other formula like it! Preparation H also lubricates to make bowel movements less painful, it soothes irritated tissues and helps prevent further infection. Preparation H comes in both ointment or suppository form. No prescription is needed.

CAREER SEMINARS

STOCK EXCHG. FIRM
To meet expanding public interest in stock market, we are now offering a series of seminars. If it is necessary we increase the number of seminars to meet the demand. In each of our offices, Southern California office located.

EVENING SEMINARS
Qualified persons interested in learning about the requirements and rewards of a career in the investment securities business will be invited to attend an evening seminar on a date and at a location convenient to them.

ALL THE FACTS
Each seminar is well planned and covers all the facts—the advantages and disadvantages of the investment securities business. A question and answer period is also provided. You'll learn the value of work that utilizes intelligence and imagination; that deals with ideas and people rather than things. You'll also learn who we are and how we operate. About the investment securities business, we provide the 10 registered representatives personally selected by us; how they function and what they earn.

Harbor Aide Frets About Lunch

Victor M. Carter, newest member of the Los Angeles Board of Harbor Commissioners, has challenged the propriety of commissioners getting together for lunch on commission meeting days.

Carter, at a meeting of the commissioners last week, suggested also eliminating the weekly morning briefing sessions, the luncheons which follow, and reducing the number of monthly afternoon meetings from weekly to twice monthly.

The recently appointed commissioner said he "sees no reason for the luncheon meetings" adding he thought them "improper."

He explored the possibility that the noontime get-togethers might be in violation of the Brown Act which makes it illegal for public bodies to conduct closed door sessions.

City Attorney Edward Farrell assured Carter the luncheon meetings were legal — so long as the commission took no action during the meeting.

"We are a policy making board. We should not need to meet to discuss administrative problems. If management can't handle the matters, then we should get rid of them," Carter said.

Taul Watanabe vice-president of the board suggested the board continue its present meeting schedule until after a special meeting scheduled with the Department of Parks and Recreation on Jan. 31.

Meeting Set on New Marina

A special meeting of the Los Angeles Harbor Commissioners and the Parks and Recreation Commission will be held on Jan. 31 in San Pedro to discuss a port plan to convert Cabrillo Beach into a small boat marina.

The meeting will be held in the board meeting room in the Consolidated Marine Terminal, at Berth 93-A starting at 10 a.m.

Port officials said the meeting is not a public hearing and comments from the audience would be limited to pleasure of the chairman.

Gordon MacLean, president of the Harbor Commission, will serve as chairman.

TEEN Action Line

Where the answer is!

TEEN ACTION LINE is your service, solving your problems, getting your answers, cutting red tape and standing up for your rights. To get action, write TEEN ACTION LINE, Box 230, Long Beach, Calif. 90801, or dial 432-3451 between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. or 5 p.m. and 9 p.m. Monday through Friday. Questions to be answered are selected for their general interest and helpfulness.

Batter Up

Q. The Lakewood High School branch of the American Field Service, a foreign student exchange program on the high school level, gives a pancake breakfast each year. We depend entirely on food donations from neighboring markets, and our profits go toward sponsoring a foreign student at our school. This year, we are having trouble getting the necessary food donations. Can TEEN ACTION LINE help? T.M., Lakewood.

A. Your fellow Lancers were able to break their fast with a robust meal of pancakes and sausage, since all the items needed for your breakfast were donated by a local market TEEN ACTION LINE contacted.

Own Your Own

Q. On "Ralph Story's Los Angeles," I saw two teenagers who own and operate their own radio station. I'm really interested in doing the same thing. Where can I get more information? M.M., Norwalk.

A. The boys do not own and operate their own radio station. But at age 14, they got their third class radio-telephone operator's license from the Federal Communications Commission (FCC), and so could do routine operations on an FM station of limited power if they wanted to. The boys got practical experience at an FM station in Garden Grove — KTBT. "We hired them to do odd jobs, and they became the station mascots," says Frank Ernest, assistant station manager. Ernest adds that he will answer questions you have about operating a station and will provide you with a tour of KTBT if you write him at 5929 Chapman Ave., Garden Grove. You may also want to write to Don Potter, one of the boys featured in the television show, at 12201 Brookhaven Park Drive, Garden Grove. Potter, now 15, goes to Garden Grove High School and wants to be an actor or disc jockey. "I got a job with the station as trash boy. People at the station showed me how the equipment operates and let me practice making tapes. No I have my license and help around the station, but I still have trash duty sometimes," he says.

Pregnant Males?

Q. Is there such a thing as a fresh water sea horse? And if so, where can I buy one? Cp., Lakewood.

A. That's a sea horse of another color. John Prescott, curator of Marineland, Dr. Ross Nigrelli, director of the New York Zoological Society aquarium and other fish experts say they know of no fresh water species. The sea horse, a variety of pipefish, with its head and neck resembling that of a horse, is usually found in tropical and temperate seas. Adams Tropical Fish and Supplies in Long Beach carries pregnant male sea horses. The male pipefish receives the eggs from the female, fertilizes them and carries them in a pouch on the underside of his tail until the eggs hatch.

'Dragnet' Debate

Q. We wish we had recorded the "Dragnet" program on narcotics and LSD. Would it be possible to obtain a copy of the script or excerpts from it? The program's presentation of this problem would help stir debate in my senior world problems class. L.R., Long Beach.

A. Frank Farrell, unit publicist for NBC-TV, took your request to actor-producer Jack Webb for the script in which Friday and Gannon investigate the leader of a psychedelic cult preaching the legalization of narcotics and LSD. Webb will talk with his legal department and try to make arrangements for you to get the script or excerpts. But you must send your request to him, c/o "Dragnet," Universal City Studios, Universal City, Calif.

Under His Hat

Q. On my way to school each day, I see an officer at a school crossing who wears a white hat. Is he a regular police officer or a crossing guard? C.S., Long Beach.

A. The man in blue with a white hat is a uniformed traffic guard. He is not a police officer, but is assigned to the traffic division of the Long Beach Police Department, says a department spokesman. The duties of the uniformed men are to patrol assigned intersections, act as crossing guards, protect life and property, preserve the public peace and safety, regulate traffic, control parking and issue citations. They are under the general supervision of a police sergeant and patrolman and receive on-the-job training. To become a uniformed guard, a man must be at least 5 feet 6, 140 pounds, between the ages of 21 and 50, a high school graduate and a U.S. citizen. He must pass medical and civil service examinations, have recent experience in guard duty and a driver's license. Actual crossing guards can be distinguished by their yellow uniforms.

Mail-Order Actor

Q. A friend of mine and I are great fans of actor John Davidson. We found out he was a model for Sears Roebuck and Co. between 1958 and 1960. Is it possible to get a catalog so we can clip his picture? K.H., Bellflower.

A. Yes, Sears Roebuck and Co. usually keeps catalogs only for its files. But with the help of Dwayne Tooker, catalog circulation manager in Los Angeles, you will receive a fall-winter edition of 1959. Tooker had everyone in the building searching for a catalog and at last, one was found stashed away in a cabinet.

REACTION

I would like to reply to the surfers complaining about the lifeguards at Seal Beach. There is a city ordinance which limits surfing to certain areas and to certain hours. If the surfers are unhappy about the situation, they should protest to the city council and not criticize the lifeguards who are just doing their job. M.M., Long Beach.

Ladies — Man Your Hosecart!

By ROBERTA ULRICH

ATHOL, Idaho (UPI) — When the fire alarm sounds in this little northern Idaho community, the ladies come running.

The women wear the pants, literally, in the volunteer fire department for the town (pop. 214). Mrs. Joreen Bohn, 34, was appointed fire chief in February 1966, and continues to head the department, which currently numbers four.

"When we first started, there were 17," Mrs. Bohn said. "But a lot of them sort of faded away."

The remaining fire ladies meet once every two weeks to review fire-fighting techniques. Their practice has been somewhat curtailed this winter, because of a community water shortage resulting from a low level of nearby Lake Pend Oreille.

THE WOMEN are pretty much self taught. Each can drive the pumper rig, purchased after women organized the fire department. Each also can handle a hose although, Mrs. Bohn admits, "those hoses are pretty heavy. When the pressure is up, they are really something to try to hold onto." With pressure at the maximum, it takes two women to a hose, despite the fact "we're all pretty chunky."

The women are between 5-foot-2 and 5-foot-5. Marie Allen is a grandmother. Vicki Upchurch has two small children. When the fire alarm sounds, she "drops the kids off with dad at the post office" and then goes to the fire. She is currently on leave to have another baby.

The women took over the fire department because the town is almost devoid of men during the day. Most work in logging or construction or on the railroad outside of town. The men who remain in town during the day are largely retired or disabled.

"THEY ALWAYS come to help, though," Mrs. Bohn said. "Anyone around helps. It's amazing how fast people can gather."

The women have been fortunate in having few fires—seven—since they started their work. Two serious house fires posed the greatest threat. In one, the women fire fighters saved the family's personal belongings, and in both cases the fires were prevented from spreading and no one was hurt.

The first fire call the women answered presented one problem nobody had thought about. When the fire alarm sounded, Mrs. Bohn raced to the firehouse—and found she was too short to open the emergency door. The lock has been lowered.

Mexican Border Plan Not Seen as Threat

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The U.S. government is making an "extensive review" of the Mexican Border Industries Program, under pressure from organized labor—and so far it does not find much for labor to worry about, informed sources here said.

The sources said the facts show the Mexican program isn't draining off jobs from the United States.

Worries by the AFL-CIO brought on congressional pressure—including concern by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.—to investigate the Mexican program, the highly placed sources said.

"The trouble is a communications gap between the Mexican Confederation of Workers and the AFL-CIO," one source said. "The CTM is going to try to sell the idea to the AFL-CIO, and try to get them off Mexico's back."

UNDER THE BORDER Industries Program, factories set up in the border zone are allowed to import raw materials or semifinished products free of tax or import duty—so long as the finished product is re-exported. The program is catching on, and about 75 U.S. firms have set up plants in the zone.

Their products are sold almost entirely in the U.S., becoming in effect American factories, using American capital and materials, turning out items for the American market with cheaper Mexican labor.

"There are no 'runaway industries' in the sense of firms that were making decent profits in the United States switching to the border to make even bigger profits off cheaper labor," a source said.

Statistics show they are either firms that were faced with folding in the United States, or branches of companies who have been doing their manufacturing in cheap labor places in Asia such as Taiwan, Hong Kong and Japan.

"THE BORDER PROGRAM is really competing with these Asian labor mar-

BLAIR CLARK HEADS CAMPAIGN

Young People Lead McCarthy's Campaign

By AL EISELE
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — Youth Generation is well represented on Sen. Eugene McCarthy's presidential campaign team.

The strong accent on youthful dedication and energy is immediately evident in the newly opened McCarthy for President national headquarters here.

Five of the seven top assistants to Campaign Manager Blair Clark are under 33, including three who are 25 or younger.

The McCarthy campaign staff, which is still being molded into final shape to spearhead his drive for the 1968 Democratic nomination, settled last week in an 8-room suite on the fifth floor of an office building two blocks from the White House.

Headed by the 50-year-old Clark, the campaign staff faces an extremely rigorous schedule in the months ahead. With the Minnesota Democrat running against President Johnson in six key primary elections—beginning with the March 12 New Hampshire contest, heavy demands will be put on his campaign aides' stamina and organizational abilities.

Clark believes the campaign has picked up in the last 10 days with McCarthy's announcement that he will enter the New Hampshire primary. It has been bolstered by his California trip and his challenge to Democratic party leaders. He dared those who privately agree with him to say so publicly.

McCarthy strategists are quick to remind skeptics that he has never lost an election in five Minnesota races for the House and two for the Senate, and point out that his sense of political timing is as good as anybody's in the business.

CLARK DOES NOT feel that he will have any difficulty working with McCarthy who has run past campaigns more or less out of his vest pocket, in an outwardly unorganized manner—but with such success that one political figure once remarked that "McCarthy campaigns are run by the Holy Ghost."

"I don't think there'll be any problem. We seem to see eye to eye on what the priorities are and I think we're going to have an energetic and effective campaign," said Clark.

Clark, a former reporter, newspaper editor, publisher (he once published a paper in New Hampshire) and broadcasting executive, sees his task as McCarthy's campaign chief as a two-fold one.

"I don't have any philosophy—that's too big word and we'll leave words like that to Gen. Eisenhower. In general, I see my job as providing for the allocation of two things."

"First, the candidate's time. Second, the resources that he can command, both money and energy, from other people. I guess all this comes under the heading of organization."

HE CONTINUED, "We've got a damn short time, really. We started long after John F. Kennedy in relation to his 1960 primary schedule and we're going into, twice as many primaries as he did."

McCarthy's January schedule will take him into five of the states whose primaries he will enter as well as Georgia. In February and March, McCarthy will concentrate on the March 12 New Hampshire primary, the April 2 Wisconsin primary and the April 30 Massachusetts primary.

'LEHI V' TO BE CHECKED

Raftman Baker Ready to Try Again

By VINT MADER

As ready now as ever to pit his scholarly determination against adversity, Devere Baker is preparing for another raft voyage to prove his theories of early man's oceanic migrations.

After succession of heart attacks that quickly ended his attempt to drift around the world three years ago on the raft Lehi V, Baker is reviving his great dream with some revisions.

With Baker in the comfortable accommodations of the 40-foot vessel, now at Pierpoint Landing, is his vivacious wife, Nola.

ON COMPLETION of months of work and worries that another Lehi saga entails, Mrs. Baker plans to sail again with the crew of the doughty craft.

Basic to all the other problems, Baker says, is the answer to one question: At 10 years of ages, can the plank-and-timber raft still be put in condition to face the rigors of the high seas.

Since he built and launched her in Redondo Beach, Lehi V has never been taken out of the water. So she must be dry-docked for a thorough hull inspection.

At the very best, he knows, rebuilding work will be necessary to overcome the effects of timber rot, boring teredo worms and other salt-water ravages.

Facing also the very worst, he may have to start afresh and build a brand new Lehi VI.

AT THE WORST, he says, this will cost $75,000 for a complete new raft (Lehi V cost $50,000) and mean an additional six months' delay in starting attempt to vindicate his historic and religious theory. Minimum foreseeable outlay, assuming Lehi V can be restored, would be $10,000, he says. In this case, he has hopes to ship the raft to the Mississippi River as deck cargo on a freighter "early next summer."

There the voyaging will begin—but inland. Under tow, they will raft

SKIPPER WONDERS IF HIS RAFT CAN PROVE HIS THEORY
Capt. Devere Baker's Lehi V Contrast Against Queen Mary (Background)

northward on the Father of Waters. From the upper reaches of the river, they will then travel canals, rivers and other navigable waterways of the nation.

EVENTUALLY THEY will drift again down the Mississippi, into the Gulf of Mexico and seek the currents of the Gulf Stream to carry them up the East Coast.

They plan an ascent of the Potomac River to Washington and visits to New York and other ports along the way.

The visionary Baker wryly observes that in this aspect "we are very mercenary people." The visits throughout the continent and on the Atlantic Coast are to include a schedule of lectures and other personal appearances.

They will have the dual purpose of "disseminating our theories" and of raising funds for Baker's great undertaking.

THIS REMAINS NO less than to demonstrate the theory he has developed from research in the writings of his Mormon faith and other sources that ancient American civilizations of higher order were built after a band of Jews under a prophet, Lehi, fleeing destruction of Jerusalem, drifted to the shores of Guatemala.

From the Muscat-Oman area below the Gulf of Persia, they "crossed the waters of the Pacific Ocean on flat-bottomed barges or rafts."

The climax of the planned great voyages will be to repeat this colossal drift with the Lehi raft. But this will be preceded by a transatlantic drift on the Gulf Stream.

FROM THE EAST COAST, the Bakers and the Lehi crew plan to cross the Atlantic from Nova Scotia to Ireland. They will then visit the British Isles, follow inland waterways through continental Europe to the Mediterranean at Marseilles.

They will then have to be towed to the eastern Edn of the Mediterranean and make their way through the Suez Canal, the Red Sea and Arabian coastal waters to the starting point for crossing the Pacific.

Time schedules for the whole vast undertaking are flexible, but Baker estimates two years for crossing the Pacific, alone. This he divides as one year actually at sea, with the other year in various ports, including further lectures and appearances.

MONEY, OF COURSE, is important to such a tremendous plan.

Once operator of shipyards at Vallejo and Petaluma, he already has pured a fortune into the five Lehi craft.

"I just walk a bankruptcy rope all the time," he says now.

However, with Lehi IV, he proved in 1958 his theory that a westward drift could have carried early peoples from California to Hawaii.

That section of his theories he proved by accomplishing the trip in 69 days in a raft that was 22 feet shorter than the present one, after many false starts and difficulties with the earlier series of rafts.

THROUGH THE YEARS, heard his wife have also written books to keep funds coming in.

Now, under a auspices of the federally chartered Foundation for Theosience Amalgamated, a full-length feature film, "The Voyage of the Lehi," is nearing completion as a source of financing.

Baker is also preparing shorter films that he will use in TV appearances.

Heading these production efforts is Art Callow, 1622 Monterey Lane, Huntington Beach, a longtime friend and freelance cameraman who is president of the Long Beach Cinema Club. In preparing the two-hour feature, Callow has been editing masses of film that the Bakers have accumulated during 20 years of the rafting sagas.

New Budget to Offer Less Stimulant

WASHINGTON (AP) — The budget President Johnson will submit to Congress will offer less of a stimulant to the economy than his two previous budgets.

Administration officials said Saturday the budget deficit figured on a national income account basis is projected at $2 billion for the fiscal year which begins July 1 — the lowest in three years.

This is the bookkeeping system which economists consider the best guide to the impact of federal activity on the economy. It is one of three systems of government accounting.

If the national income account runs a deficit, the government is priming the economy. The extent depends on the size of the deficit.

During last year's economic sluggishness, the national income account deficit rose substantially, and in the third quarter reached $14.7 billion at an annual rate.

THE DEFICIT under this accounting is expected to reach $10.5 billion during the current fiscal year; it totaled $7.5 billion a year earlier. It ran a $300-million surplus in the year which ended June 30, 1966.

At the same time, officials confirmed earlier indications the administration will seek to impose higher taxes on individuals beginning on April 1 and on corporations retroactive to Jan. 1.

These dates will be disclosed officially Monday when the House Ways and Means Committee for the third time holds public hearings on the proposed 10 per cent tax surcharge.

The committee then plans to set aside the tax bill until it gets a detailed look at Johnson's budget and economic message.

THE GOVERNMENT last week unveiled a series of bullish economic data, including another upward surge in industrial output and personal income during December, and record factory orders for hard goods. These will surely be cited by the administration in its quest for higher taxes to dampen inflation and defend the dollar.

One key official said the new budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1 will include a big surplus for the government-operated trust funds, including Social Security and highways, a factor which will lower the over-all budget deficit under the new format to be used for the first time this year.

The major change in format is to lump into one package all outgo, including the trust funds.

18,000 Idled by Auto Plant Shutdowns

DETROIT (AP) — The number of idled in General Motors Corp. plants topped 18,000 Saturday, as the United Auto Workers Union foresaw a possible national shutdown of the country's No. 1 automaker in a week to 10 days unless strikes at three of its foundries are settled.

A transmission plant at Saginaw, Mich., announced it was closing and furloughing 1,100 workers because of a shortage of castings from a struck Chevrolet foundry there.

Two Chevrolet engine plants in Flint, Mich., previously had shut down, laying off 5,800, because of a parts shortage occasioned by the Saginaw foundry strike.

In all, 11,200 are on strike at a central division foundry in Defiance, Ohio, and at Chevrolet foundries in Saginaw and Tonawanda, N.Y.

Principal issues in the three strikes are union demands for a company-paid, six-minute pre-lunch, plus free clothes and shoes for some jobs.

struck, the corporation will be essentially paralyzed with some 300,000 walking the streets in a week to 10 days," Leonard Woodcock, a UAW vice president, told a Friday news conference.

The three foundry strikes erupted over failures to reach at-the-plant working agreements which supplement the national contract, ratified last month by some 360,000 UAW members employed by GM.

The six-day trial concerned only the death of 9-year-old Mary Sinclair. She was killed in her home

Legislature to Hassle With Marijuana Punishment

By TRACY WOOD

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Marijuana is a hearty little plant which flourishes in open fields, cultivated gardens and flower pots. Mere mention of its strikes fear in the hearts of mothers, fathers — and state legislators.

Marijuana users endorse it for the euphoric feeling smoking the tobacco-like weed produces.

Its critics wear it ruins the mind of the user and leads the unsuspecting into the pit of drug addiction.

And an election year legislature views with dismay any issue which might incur the wrath of the voters.

Despite all this, Assemblyman W. Craig Biddle, R-Riverside, plans to introduce legislation this week giving judges discretion to modify the penalty for possession of marijuana.

The present penalty is 1 to 10 years in state prison.

The penalty for use of "restricted dangerous drugs" such as LSD and methedrine, a misdemeanor is imprisonment in county jail for up to one year.

Biddle's legislation would make both first-time offenses uniform — either a misdemeanor or a felony at the discretion of the judge — and the penalty would follow the same line.

Assemblyman William Bagley, R-San Rafael, also intends to introduce legislation to permit judges to use discretion in sentencing persons no matter how many times they are convicted of possession of marijuana.

Biddle, chairman of the Criminal Procedure Committee, said the growing use of hallucinogenic drugs such as LSD has "released the social barriers" against use of marijuana.

"Present penalties have successfully restricted the courts' ability to exercise discretion in handling marijuana offenders, a discretion is still retained when dealing with other offenses of a similar magnitude."

He said that preventing a judge from using his own judgment in dealing with marijuana offenders has "had the effect of saying to the courts that regardless how innocuous the case, regardless how deserving a defendant, if he possesses even one marijuana cigarette he must be stamped a felon."

But even before the bills can be introduced, modification of marijuana laws met strong opposition from the County Supervisors Association.

"Addiction to heroin is murder on the installment plan and the use of marijuana is the down payment," said Warren Dorn, Los Angeles County Supervisor.

The supervisors adopted a resolution urging the legislature not to downgrade the penalties.

"The weakening of legal control of marijuana will be detrimental to society collectively and users individually," the resolution said.

But exactly the opposite point of view was taken by researchers at the University of California medical center.

In a report prepared for the legislature, the researchers said marijuana was less of a health hazard than alcohol.

Not Much to Feel Secure About

HUMPHREY BEGINS 4th YEAR

Our Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey begins his fourth year in office today, secure in his belief that he has been one of the hardest-working vice-presidents in history during the first three years.

Unfortunately, that's about all he can feel secure about as he heads into what promises to be the most difficult period in his long public service career.

The task facing Humphrey in 1968 is formidable, to say the least. He must spearhead President Johnson's reelection campaign in the face of a resurgent Republican opposition, a frustrated and uneasy electorate and a revolt within the Democratic Party led by his old Minnesota ally, Sen. Eugene McCarthy.

Finally, there is the remote possibility that even if President Johnson again wins the Democratic nomination at Chicago next August, that he might offer someone else the number two spot on the ticket.

But if there is any insecurity in Humphrey as he ponders the year ahead, it doesn't show. Optimistic by nature and pragmatic by profession, the energetic, ebullient Humphrey appears to welcome the coming combat with the relish of a Viking warrior.

HUMPHREY discussed his first three years as the number two man in government in an interview last week in his office in the ornate executive office building next to the White House.

"I guess you could say I've been one of the busiest vice-presidents," Humphrey commented as he ticked off the long list of functions that are a part of his job, including the extremely busy travel schedule that has taken him to every corner of the nation and world.

"But I don't think it's good enough to be known as a 'busy' vice-president," Humphrey added. "It's important to be productive as well, and I think that I've been productive."

"I'd like to be known as a working vice-president — one who took care of more than ceremonial duties and who was given an opportunity in helping in the shaping of policy and in helping carry it out."

HUBERT HUMPHREY
Welcoming Combat

There can be little argument from students of government that Humphrey has been intimately involved in the decision-making processes of the Johnson administration.

Because of President Johnson's desire to make certain that his vice-president would be well-prepared if called on to succeed him, the job has expanded far beyond its limited constitutional scope, under Humphrey.

IN ADDITION to the largely ceremonial duties of second-in-command of the government and presiding officer of the Senate, Humphrey has taken on a multitude of other statutory and extracurricular duties.

He presides over and coordinates a handful of cabinet-level councils, including the Space, Marine Resources and National Security Councils, Peace Corps and Office of Economic Opportunity Advisory Councils, and town and county and youth opportunity councils, to name some of the major ones.

Humphrey also heads a number of ad hoc groups, and currently is spending a good deal of his time as the White House liaison for urban and local governments, Chairman of the President's Committee on tourism in the U.S. and coordinator of the Kennedy round trade efforts.

"This office, as other offices in government, has developed and changed," Humphrey commented. "The past 20 years have seen tremendous changes in the role of the vice-president."

"IN TERMS of its constitutional basis, the office has limited responsibility and visibility, and after that, it depends on what the vice-president is willing to make of it and what the President wants him to make of it."

But he added that he has "enjoyed the job despite the fact that there are limitations and you have to live within certain disciplines."

"One of the first duties of the vice-president is to cause as little trouble and embarrassment for the president as possible," Humphrey said with a hint of a smile.

"Another is to try to be as helpful as you can. I think the vice-president can serve as the eyes and ears for the president both in this country and abroad."

Humphrey noted that he gets the same top-secret intelligence briefing as the President each day and that he has studied the federal budgetary process very carefully.

"The vice-president should be very familiar with our commitments and our national security and at least with the framework of the budget process."

TOLD THAT HE is considered by some observers as the man best-equipped to take over the presidency tomorrow if the need should arise, Humphrey replied:

"Nobody knows how well a man's equipped... who's to know what a man will do until he's put to the test? I feel an obligation to do the best I can to prepare myself for any possibility."

Humphrey says he regards President Johnson "as one of the real masters of government — he knows how to be president. I thought I knew a great deal as a senator, and I did."

know much of the Senate, but the difference in the executive branch is a vast gulf."

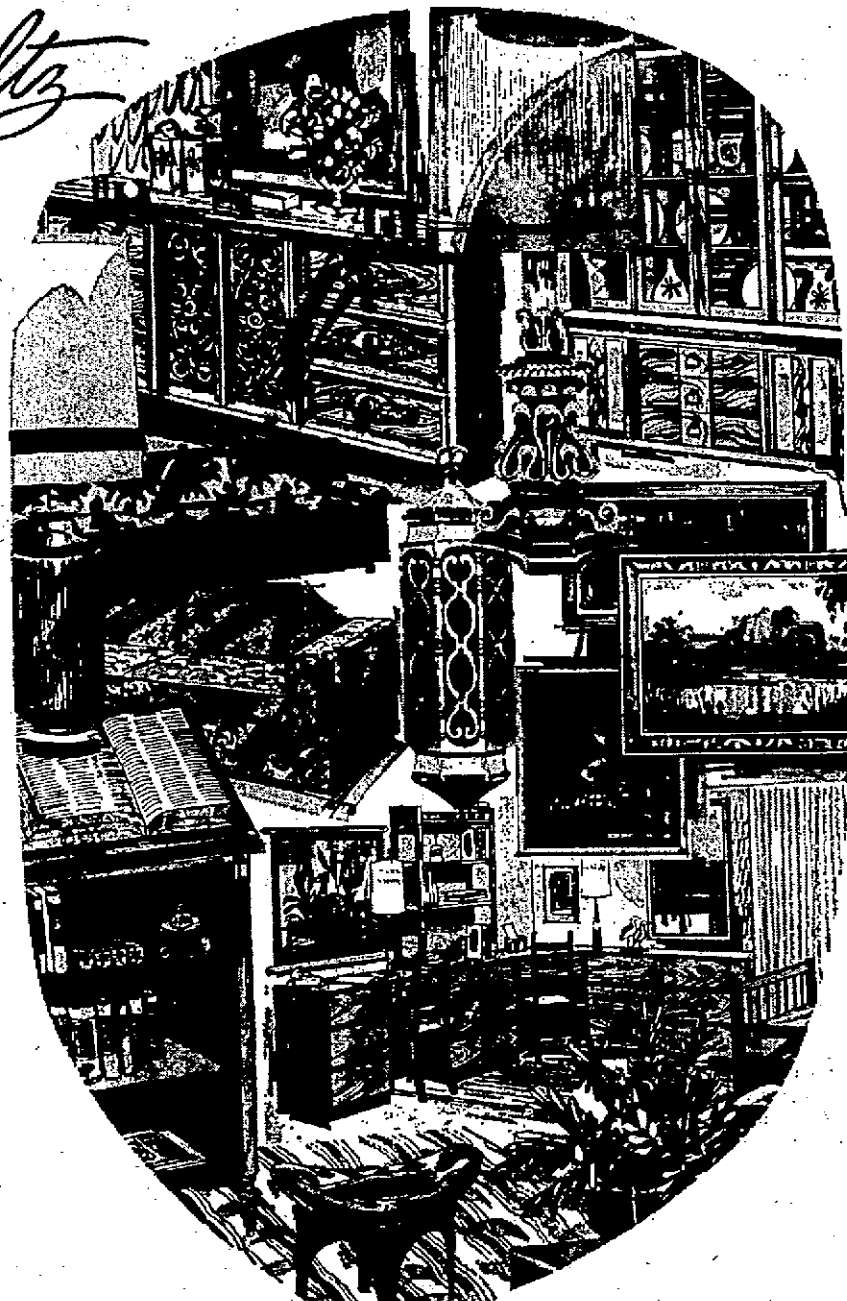

Humphrey feels his relationship with the President is excellent. "As far as I'm concerned, it's as good and better now than it's ever been. The President knows what my capabilities are as well as my limitations. Generally, the history of the relationship between presidents and vice-presidents has not been that."

600 of Little Town Jobless After Fire

TOWN CREEK, Ala. (AP) — Almost 600 persons were jobless Saturday after a fire destroyed the main industry of this little community of between 800 and 1,000 persons.

The blaze was in the G. C. Lingerie plant. The U-shaped building spread over much of a city block in the downtown area.

The plant employed 582 persons, according to its manager, Aaron Yarvin, 540 of them women.

Frankie and Mando Aren't Sweethearts

"They say Mando's more boxer and my bag's pier six. It's not so. I'm a better boxer. His only chance is to come in and wear me down, and he didn't do that last time." — Frankie Crawford.

Boxing promotions have progressed some from the days of "I'll molder de bum," but not much.

Cassius Clay's poetry brought satirical sophistication to pre-fight ballyhoo, and Floyd Patterson offered a refreshing contrast with sincere misgivings about his chances.

Frankie Crawford is honest, too, when he evaluates his rematch with Mando Ramos, the well-known Long Beach teenager, Feb. 1 at the Olympic.

"This is the first grudge fight I ever had," Crawford says, but he's getting the feeling fast.

This one has the qualities of the real McCoy, and we don't mean Mando's manager Jackie. Taking the golden word of those who frequent gymnasiums, Frankie and Mando were something less than sweethearts before their first fight, and the relationship has disintegrated since.

Like many feuds, this one was bred by smoldering resentment, or perhaps even outright jealousy.

"When Ramos started out he got too big and too great," Crawford says. "He wouldn't talk to you, wouldn't say hello. So the next thing I hear he's saying the same thing about me."

"He's a drawing card. He's a Spaniard and he's got the following. He's the type of fighter they like to see. They don't like to see a guy who goes in there boxing."

"He's got a lot of color. But I think his opponents made him look colorful, too. They were always short and didn't know much. They'd just wade in and they couldn't punch."

WHAT FRANKIE'S saying is that Ramos climbed over no giants to attain his popular status, nor did he climb over Frankie, who won a split decision last October.

"The guy got beat, and he got beat good, and he knows it," Crawford says. "Psychologically, it'll be with him when we fight the next time."

Frankie sizes up his foe thusly: "I don't think Mando Ramos is the type of guy to come from behind and win a fight, or to lose a fight and then win the rematch. There's a difference between being brave and having a lot of guts. He's a brave kid. I've come off the floor to win fights. Mando Ramos has never been on the deck."

It's this sort of talk that gained Crawford an edge in their first fight. Even Ramos admits that.

"He was calling me all kinds of names," Mando says. "I was stupid. I blew my top."

"I outsmarted him," is the way Frankie puts it. "He'd be working his best, getting good shots to the body, and they hurt, you know. That's when I told him, 'C'mon, Mando, you can punch better than that.' When you blow up like Mando did, you lose your cool and you can't fight."

AT 21, CRAWFORD isn't that much older than Ramos — just smarter, he thinks. He's a clean living kid with a wife and nine-month-old son and he's been in jail only once in his life.

"I got a traffic ticket on my bicycle," he says ruefully. "I went through a red light with my cousin on the handlebars."

So he's not quite in Sonny Liston's league, but he has big ambitions. No matter what happens Feb. 1, he has a date this spring to fight Ramos' stablemate, Raul Rojas, for the world featherweight championship of 18th and Grand. Ramos means a step up in class to lightweight.

"Mando's tougher — no, no, wait a minute," Frankie corrects, "Mando's not tougher. Mando's better schooled, and Rojas is tougher. Rojas is more mature. He's got those 15-pounders under his belt, and it makes a difference."

"Mando would be a tougher fight, because he's bigger, taller and he's got the reach, the weight, Rojas will be my weight and he's short. I'm much faster than Rojas. In the gym I beat him to the punch all the time. It's different in a fight, I know, but I've got the height and reach on him."

FRANKIE HAS the Feb. 1 fight pretty well figured out, he thinks. Ramos will be playing right into his mitts.

"I know how the fight's gonna go. I know exactly how it's gonna go. Mando's gonna go out there and he's gonna use his long left jab, like Jackie (McCoy) told him to do, which is the wrong thing to do."

"He should be pressing like he did last time, because he's got the weight and everything. But if we box it's gonna be an easier pace. I'll be going to him and picking my shots, and I can rest when I want to because I'll make the fight."

"Mando's gonna jab, jab, jab. He's gonna wait until he hurts me — he thinks — before he comes after me. I've learned a few things since the last fight, too. I'm just smarter than the guy is."

What Frankie's saying is that he'll molder de bum. As long as he stays off that bicycle.

Rams, Dodgers at Sports Fete

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Executive Sports Editor

The Rams and Dodgers will be well represented at the 12th annual Long Beach Century Club Sports Awards Banquet Thursday night in the Grand Ballroom of the Lafayette Hotel.

The Ram corps will include coach George Allen, former all-America and all-pro star Elroy (Crazy Legs) Hirsch, all-pro defensive linemen Merlin Olsen, public relations director Jack Teele, and Jack Geyer, who served as executive director of the 1960 Winter Olympic Games at Squaw Valley.

The Dodger contingent will include A. E. (Red) Patterson, vice president; players Bob Bailey, Jim Lefebvre, and Bill Singer; scout Tommy Lasorda; trainer Bill Buhler, and Howard Handy of the public relations staff.

All will be on hand to honor the Century Club's athlete-of-the-year, USC's Earl McCullough, and Billie Jean Moffitt King, No. 1 woman tennis player in the world. Additionally, special awards will be given Long Beach athletes who distinguished themselves during the past year and citizens who have made major contributions to this city's athletic program.

Master of ceremonies will be Jimmy Piersall, the colorful 14-year major league baseball player now associated with the California Angels in Anaheim.

Final ballot for Long Beach's "most popular athlete of 1967" will appear in the sports section today. All votes must be received by midnight Monday. Among the balloting leaders at the moment are the principal award winners, McCullough and Mrs. King, Shawn Johnson of Long Beach City College, the Rams' Jack Snow, Olympic Games medal winner Jack Rambo, Long Beach State's Phil Johnson, and Pat Cashman of USC, former Long Beach high school and City College football star.

Tickets will remain on sale through Tuesday at the following locations: The Captain's Inn, Apple Valley Steak House, the Pacific Coast Club, and Kenny's Sporting Goods.

For readers' convenience a special ticket box appears on this page for the final time today.

Sports Night Tickets

Tickets for Long Beach's 12th annual Sports Night banquet, Thursday, Jan. 25 can be ordered by mail. Mail orders, accompanied by check, should be addressed to George Heinrich, 215 Marina Dr., Long Beach, 90803. Tickets are priced at $12.50 each. Peggy Glides to Victory in Figure Skating Competition

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Peggy Fleming glided spectacularly through a difficult free skating routine Saturday night to win her fifth straight U.S. women's figure skating championship.

Miss Fleming, whose expected victory climaxed the U.S. Figure Skating Championships at the Spectrum, joins men's titlist Tim Wood as Uncle Sam's singles standard-bearers in next month's Winter Olympics.

Wood, a pre-law student at John Carroll University in Cleveland, earlier in the day backed up his boast that he was the best in his division by edging defending champion Gary Visconti, a teammate from the Detroit Skating Club.

John Petkevich of Great Falls, Mont., was third. The 19-year-old Wood of Bloomfield, Mich., Visconti and Petkevich automatically qualified for the U.S. Olympic and world championship teams.

Miss Fleming was only one-tenth of a point from perfection in the opinion of each of the five judges on her technical method.

In composition and style, two of the judges gave her the full six points allowed while the other three graded her 5.9. It was one of the great performances by a woman since the first nationals in 1914.

The Winter Olympics start Feb. 6 in Grenoble, France and the world championships on Feb. 27 in Switzerland.

SEE YOU LATER, CRATER

COVENTRY, England (AP) — A nine-hole golf course suddenly got a 10th hole but it's six feet wide and two feet deep. The course lies in an area heavily bombed during World War II.

The hole, right in the center of the course, was discovered by early morning players Saturday. They scurried back to the clubhouse, fearing that the earth may have collapsed around an unexploded bomb.

Golfers called in the police and the police called in Army bomb disposal experts. Neither set of experts could reach a conclusion but they declared the course unplayable.

Winter Olympians Prep for Grenoble

Combined News Services

Skiers, skaters and sledgers saw action on slopes and rinks around the world Saturday as they began final preparation for next month's Winter olympics in Grenoble, France.

Key events were held in St. Moritz, Switzerland, and Iron Mountain, Michigan, where American athletes met with mixed results.

At Iron Mountain, John Balfanz, America's top ski jumper, moved into the lead at the three-quarter point in the Olympic trials. Balfanz, 27, sailed 282 and 285 feet in near flawless form to outscore Adrian Watts of Duluth who got off longer jumps but with less form.

The American teams at the St. Moritz four-man bobsled championships settled for fifth and 12th places as Rumania, defending champion, won the first run. Further runs were postponed until today when the ice began to melt.

In other parts of the world, Suzanne Chaffee of Rutland, Vt., made a strong showing in the Pohorje Cup slalom in Maribor, Yugoslavia, where she finished fourth. Austria's Olga Pall won the 1,600-meter event.

Vermont's Billy Kidd was the top U.S. performer in the Klitzschebuehle, Austria, downhill skiing championships. Kidd finished sixth, while teammate Dennis McCoy was 12th.

Jim Bower of New York, the lone U.S. hope for a strong showing in Nordic skiing, took second place in the jump but settled for seventh after a weak showing in the 15,000-meter cross country run.

The Universiade, student version of the Olympics, begins today with where more American competitors will prepare for their Feb. 6 18 date at Grenoble.

WEST SOLID CHOICE

Namath, Lamonica Stage Passing Duel

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Flashy Joe Namath, the "Mr. Cool" of the New York Jets, will come out gunning today in an effort to offset steady Daryle Lamonic and a host of other champion Oakland Raiders in the American Football League's annual All-Star game.

The West, with nine Raiders in its starting lineup, is a solid favorite for the nationally televised (NBC — 10:30 a.m. PST) contest. But the East feels it has a chance if Namath has one of his good days. Players on the winning team get $1,000 each, losers $600.

Have no doubts about it: Lamonica, the AFL player of the year, and the record-setting Namath plan to stage a wide-open passing duel and don't be surprised if a few All-Star records fall along the way.

Lamonica, who led the Raiders into the Super Bowl, had the best overall passing record in the AFL this past season, including 30 TD strikes. But no passer, pro or otherwise, ever came close to the 4,007 yards that Namath gained in 1967.

Namath, who'll be wearing No. 12, has one edge that could be vital. He'll be throwing to his three favorite Jets targets — George Sauer (83), Don Maynard (13) and Pete Lammons (87).

Lamonica (3) has no teammates starting at the receiver posts although Fred Biletnikoff (25) of the Raiders, who set Gator Bowl pass-catching records while at Florida State, will be waiting in the wings.

The West starting receivers are Lance Alworth (19) of San Diego, Fred Arbanas (84) of Kansas City and Al Denson (88) of Denver. Sauer and Maynard were 1-2 in the league last season with 75 and 71 catches, respectively.

Lamonica has an edge of his own: he won't have to spend the afternoon escaping the rush of Buck Buchanan (86) of Kansas City and Ben Davidson (83) of Oakland — the league's most fierce defensive duo. The two 6-foot-7, 280-pounders make up the right side of the West's front four.

Rookie Bob Griese (11) of Miami and the East and veteran Len Dawson (16) who paced the Chiefs to the 1966 AFL title, will be backup quarterbacks for today's game. Dawson ranked second to Lamonica in passing this past season despite gaining 1,356 yards less than third-ranked Namath.

Clark Wins Race

CHRIST CHURCH, New Zealand — (UPI) — Jimmy Clark of Scotland, former world driving champion, drove his 2.5-liter Lotus Ford to victory in the Lady Wigram trophy race Saturday with a record speed of 102.6 miles per hour.

Big Man in Class, on Court, at Table

By DAVE DANIEL

The trend the past few years in colleges has been to produce quality students as well as athletes. Typical is Kirby Gordon.

Gordon is a freshman forward on the Long Beach City College basketball team and has the distinction of having the second-highest grade point average of any male student at the school.

But it's nothing new to the likable Gordon, who in his four years at St. Anthony High, produced a 3.85 grade point average, including a perfect 4.0 his senior year along with being named to the all-city and all-Catholic League teams for two years as a basketball player.

With his talent both in the classroom and on the court, one wonders why

Gordon chose Long Beach City College to begin his pre-law studies, when any school in the country would have wanted him.

"It's simply the best program on the freshman level," Gordon said, referring to both his classes and to basketball. "It's more of a challenge playing here than it would be playing fresh ball at a university. Here, you have something to shoot for — a championship."

Gordon started the first six pre-season games for coach Chuck Kane's Vikings before being sidelined because of a bone chip in his right knee that well may require an operation at the end of the season.

"It's impaired my jumping ability and has stiffened up some," he said. It also has forced him to take whirlpool baths every day.

Between the time he's on the court or with his books, he finds time to indulge in his favorite pastime — driving his 1965

KIRBY GORDON
LBCC Program Best

Porsche.

And if he continues eating the way he does, the 6-5, 205-pounder may not be able to fit in the foreign sports car much longer.

When LBCC traveled to the Foothill Tournament in Palo Alto, one of the eating establishments offered an all-you-can eat buffet dinner.

Gordon, first in line, filled his plate with several kinds of salad, a half-dozen dinner rolls and butter, and a variety of cooked vegetables before returning for five huge pieces of fried chicken, two large servings of prime rib with potatoes and two plates running over with spaghetti and meatballs.

He was the first to begin eating, the last to stop and wouldn't let him. At other meals, he outate the other team members, 2-to-1. "I've always had a healthy appetite," he says.

It's also his sharp sense of humor that has him surrounded by girls most of the time.

And when the team rented two station wagons and a sedan in San Francisco, it was Gordon who wanted to know why couldn't they rent 15 Porsches?

On the court, Kane says of him, "He's as fine a competitor as you can find. He has a very good touch for a big man. He's the best defensive man we have that can guard a big post man. He doesn't back off from anyone."

Gordon also is a fine baseball player, lettered varsity three years at St. Anthony and played on the Alamitos Bay American Legion team. He hit .314 his junior year.

cent except Baylor.

San Francisco coach Bill Sharman was not bitter about the muscle-flexing, but he was concerned that it is getting out of hand.

"The finesse and quickness are going out of the game "because of the pushing and shoving," he cautioned. Everyone leans on everybody else and, eventually, somebody gets hurt."

Thurmond, West, Larry Siegfried, Oscar Robertson, King, Larry Costello, Gus Johnson, and others have been out for long periods of time due to injuries.

Laker coach Bill van Breda Kolff has long felt that something should be done to knock off the rough stuff. Sharman even suggests three officials per game.

"The Lakers struggled to a 69-64 halftime lead and the Warriors were still within hailing distance, 88-82, before a 12-1 Laker spurt put them down for good.

When the Lakers hit eight of their first nine field goals to open the fourth period, it became a rout.

HONOR GUARD MISSES CUE

HOUSTON (AP) — Some 50,000 fans were left nervously stamping their feet standing at attention when the honor guard missed its cue at the start of the UCLA-Houston basketball game Saturday night.

The honor guard, carrying the American flag, marched in before the game and the band started to play.

A television director quickly shushed the band and the crowd — already on its feet — stood for another one minute and 29 seconds until the television announcer finished his remarks.

FANS SQUINT TO SEE ANTS PLAY

Astrodome Has No Peer

HOUSTON (UPI) — Most of the 52,693 fans squinted through field glasses or craned their necks around television equipment Saturday to see the basketball game of the decade from the nine levels of the huge Astrodome, which even managed to make UCLA's Lew Alcindor look like an ant.

While UCLA and Houston, the nation's top two teams, battled on a hardwood floor imported from the L.A. Sport Arena and centered where second base normally is located, fans on the nine levels watched through field glasses.

"It looks like you're up in an airplane," said Sonny Watkins, high school coach at Sulphur, La. He brought his basketball team and they sat in the ninth level

"sky boxes."

"The court looks like you could hold it in your hand, but I can follow the action real well with field glasses," he said. "Without the glasses the players look like ants."

L. E. Starnes, a Houston machinist, said no one in his section on the first level could see because of television equipment and people standing behind the west backboard.

From the $5 seats, normally behind home plate, the low angle gave little view of the game.

But basketball in the Astrodome is assured of at least one more performance. Houston already has signed to play Notre Dame here next year.

est game," said Elvin. "Coach Lewis told us to play our usual game, and we did. It was good enough to win."

Lewis pinpointed the difference between Saturday night's game and the one at Louisville.

"We simply weren't intimidated by Alcindor," he said. "I didn't think we would be. We just shot poorly at Louisville. This time we shot at about our normal percentage."

Although the game was played before a record paid basketball crowd of 52,693, center Ken Spain confirmed that the Cougars were "more relaxed this time."

Hayes offered a reason for Alcindor's poor shooting percentage.

"The guy had to be hurting," said Elvin. "Anybody can have an off night, too."

The Houston star said he was surprised the Bruins didn't send Alcindor toward the basket more after he, Elvin, got his fourth foul.

"I thought he's come crashing in after that," said Hayes. "But they just seemed to stay away from me."

Looking ahead to a possible collision in the NCAA Tournament, Hayes said: "If I have another great night like tonight, we'll beat them again."

If the Astrodome is the eighth wonder of the world, a Houston victory over UCLA in Los Angeles might be the ninth.

INJURY ENDS SPORTS CAREER, NOT SPIRIT

Although a dramatic operation restored his arm, Swaffar's bright prospects as a basketball player had ended. But today the 23-year-old former Tulsa star is in the news more than he had become a basketball star.

He is president of the student senate at Oklahoma State and is preparing to enter the Peace Corps.

The accident happened Oct. 31, 1964. His right arm was caught in the spinning mechanism of a clothes dryer in the athletic department laundry.

A teammate, Gary Hassman, packed the severed limb in cold water and ice and Swaffar was rushed to University Hospital in Oklahoma City where surgeons re-implanted the arm in an eight-hour operation.

Other operations re-tied nerves and he has feeling almost everywhere in the arm.

"I can open doors and carry things around," he says. "I can't do anything intricate at all but I'm making progress with the little time I have to spend on exercises. I occasionally play golf holes double bogey two over par, some basketball and swim."

He thinks the injury is "just one of those things that happen to people."

"When you are 6-9, you don't need anything else to be noticed," he says.

Determined Cougars Won It on Rebounds

The Cougars called for a timeout.

Bruin coach John Wooden obviously told Alcindor to foul Spain, Houston's poorest free throw shooter, and the gamble paid off. Spain missed the free throw, giving the Bruins the ball.

Allen was fouled with 44 seconds to go and made both free throws to make it 69-69 as the cavernous Astrodome rocked with the shouting.

The Cougars went to their big man, Hayes, and he was fouled by Nielsen with 28 seconds left. Elvin was again great under pressure, sinking both shots.

The last gasp for UCLA came with 12 seconds to go when Allen fired the ball toward Shackelford, but it was tipped out of bounds by Warren.

Hayes got the ball when it was inbounded and dribbled cleverly at the defensive end of the court for nine of 12 seconds before passing off to guard George Reynolds, who fired the ball 30 feet into the air at the final buzzer.

Hayes was lifted to the shoulders of the Cougar fans, a tribute most deserved by the Houston star.

For the Texans, this atoned for the disaster at the Alamo and the win was as big as the state itself.

Hayes, as gracious and humble as he was cocky and arrogant a year ago, sounded a warning for the Cougars.

"Boy," he said, "will they ever be laying for us when we play them in Los Angeles."

If both teams make it to the National College Tournament at the L.A. Sports Arena in March, Elvin will prove to be a prophet.

But for the moment, at least, this was his hour, 39 points, 15 rebounds, five blocked shots, including three of Alcindor's, and an intimidating presence on defense. The Big E could afford to be humble.

The Cougars now have won 18 in a row, 17 this season, and no team figures to stop them en route to the National Tournament.

Three astronauts (far left) who will ride the first manned earth orbital flight of the Apollo spacecraft prepare to enter mockup of command module at Space Division of North American Rockwell Corp., Downey. At left, their spacecraft is hoisted into position for mating with service module for final checkout. The astronauts, seen through a side port of the capsule (below), are Walter Cunningham, inspecting the craft's new quick-opening escape hatch; Don Eisele, in helmet, and Walter Shirra.

New Apollo Team Gets Ready

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

A year ago this week America's first team of Apollo astronauts stepped into the capsule which was to start the manned phase of the nation's moon exploration program.

Col. Virgil I. Grissom, Lt. Col. Edward H. White II and Lt. Cmdr. Roger B. Chaffee locked themselves into the air-tight chamber on Jan. 27 for a routine launch test of the moonship which was scheduled to take them on an orbital shakedown run within a month.

Less than six hours later they were dead — victims not of an accident in space, a risk which always had been recognized, but of a horrible flash fire inside the capsule while it was on the ground atop an unfueled rocket.

A shocked and grieving nation suspended the timetable calling for landing men on the moon in this decade. As details of the accident and its investigation were revealed, it became obvious that Project Apollo was in serious trouble.

In Congress and elsewhere, its key hardware was questioned, its management came under attack and cries of "Why?" and "How?" arose. Funding problems resulting from demands on the economy by the Viet Nam war effort led many in the program to wonder if Apollo had any future at all.

Today, a year after the tragic accident, a new team of astronauts is checking out a vastly improved Apollo command capsule being built at North American Rockwell's Space Division in Downey.

ASTRONAUTS WALTER M. SCHIRRA, Donn F. Eisele and Walter R. Cunningham are aiming at an earth orbital mission of several days this summer. The mission, 18 months behind the original schedule, may still make it possible to catch up to the goal of landing on the moon before the end of 1969.

The new Apollo spacecraft features flameproofing changes and a quick-opening escape hatch estimated to have added $75 million to the cost of the command modules. Since the accident last year, electrical wiring was strengthened and covered, plumbing was protected and emergency breathing oxygen and fire fighting equipment installed.

Most important of all, the escape hatch was redesigned with a single control to enable the astronauts to open it in as little as three seconds instead of 90 as before. The astronauts who were lost a year ago died in less than a third of the time it would have taken them to open the previous hatch.

Backing up the astronauts' efforts this week will be the first in space test of the Apollo lunar landing module.

Exact launch time for the Saturn rocket and its bulbous, bug-like Apollo spaceship remains undetermined, but a space center spokesman said, "We're still going for Monday."

The 6½-hour orbital workout is designed primarily to test the spacecraft's rocket engines, which must land two men on the moon and then reunite them with the third astronaut in the command module for the return to earth.

The engines, built by TRW Systems Group in Redondo Beach, will be fired by remote control for a total of 13 minutes at thrust levels ranging from 10 per cent to a maximum of 9,700 pounds in simulation of a lunar soft landing.

BEACH COMBING

MALCOLM EPLEY

SOME commentators voiced irritation because the strongest Congressional applause for LBJ's S of U address came when he said "the American people have had enough of rising crime and lawlessness."

Well, whether some people like it or not, the reaction in the President's audience expresses the mood of the country's big majority. It was Congressmen who have been hearing from home who gave that roar of applause.

For several years this writer, who feels a tiny, but I believe typical, segment of the public pulse, has noted something significant: No other subject mentioned here gets so much reader reaction, by voice and mail, as does a discussion of the rising crime problem and methods of coping with it.

The public concern over this issue was clearly a factor in the last California election. Given a chance at the ballot box, the people will leave no question how it feels on violence and lawlessness.

INCIDENTALLY, as one who feels strongly in behalf of minorities in their quest for equality and advancement, I wish the alleged spokesmen of such groups would restrain their protests whenever there are proposals to strengthen law enforcement and suppress violence.

The logical deduction from such objections is that these people favor lawlessness and violence. I can't believe they speak for a "majority of the minority" in any such position; maybe they don't mean it that way, themselves, but it certainly sounds like it.

Remembering this is a democracy where the majority speaks, it's clearly no way to make points in a country sickened by violence, disobedience of, the law and interference with the rights of law-abiding citizens.

NEIGHBORS on Alfred St. in Lakewood are vastly disturbed over a desperate and frustrating situation involving Mr. and Mrs. Gunter Keppner, 2510 Alfred and Mrs. Keppner's mother, Anna Mueller.

The Keppners are emigrants from Germany who have a year or so to go to get citizenship. About five weeks ago Mrs. Mueller came over to visit her daughter and grandchildren. Later, she suffered a stroke, requiring hospitalization and special care running up a bill at $120 a day.

The elderly woman's doctor has said she should be returned immediately to Germany, a move further justified by the fact she could get prepaid care there. Here she has no insurance help, is not eligible for public aid, and family resources are running low.

The airplane trip to Germany would cost about $1200, covering ambulance facilities on the plane and round trip for a nurse.

The Keppners don't have the money. Since coming here, they have paid their bills currently here and do not have credit established. Their citizenship status and other factors have made it impossible to get a loan from a financial institution. A call to the German consul in L.A. was unproductive. All he did was to bawl them out for letting an elderly woman come to this country.

It's a nagging story and I wish I could suggest a glimmer of daylight somewhere for the Keppners. Neighbors felt that just telling the story here would somehow ease the pain, at any rate. And maybe it's well for the safe and prosperous to know just how rough things can be for some people.

UNIQUE, IT DEFIES DESCRIPTION

Queen Museum Unlike Any Other

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Marine Editor

A walk-through oceanographic encyclopedia!

This is the description of the Queen Mary Museum of the Sea by the directors of the exhibit.

Les Cohen, 39-year-old director of the project, said:

"The museum will be unique in that it will not be a museum — at least not in the traditional concept of a museum."

Appointed as director on Jan. 1, Cohen and his associates are estimating the museum will attract between one to 1.5 million visitors annually.

"It will be far more than a display of dried star fish and stuffed whales dangling from piano wires behind a plate glass window."

Cohen, who helped create the California Museum of Science and Industry in Los Angeles, has some very definite ideas of what a museum that is not a museum should encompass.

The director interviewed at the museum's new offices at 600 E. Broadway is aiming at an opening target date of January 1969, but adds:

"It is a project that may never be completed."

"As man's knowledge of the ocean changes, so shall the museum," he claims.

SHARING COHEN'S ENTHUSIASM for the floating museum is Robert Reardon, recently named associate director of the unusual marine museum.

Reardon, who has a law degree from Loyola University of Los Angeles, and former director of public relations for the California Museum of Science and Industry, further describes the museum planners' philosophy:

"We'll cover all phases of the oceans — what is above them, on them, in them, and beneath them!"

"We have thrown away the old design and display concept of a museum," Reardon added.

"We intend to develop a story theme that will appeal to all five senses of the visitors as they tour the museum," says Cohen.

"The visitors will become a part of the museum. Besides the things to see there will be sounds to be heard, objects to touch, food from the ocean to taste, and the breath of the sea and the aroma of the ship to smell," the director said.

THE TWO-MAN MUSEUM planning team has been working together for the past seven years — first at the Museum of Science and Industry and later with the state college system.

Cohen became a member of the executive staff of the museum in 1955 and was joined by Reardon in LES COHEN (left), director of the Queen Mary's Museum of the Sea exhibit, and Robert Reardon, associate director, examine engine room chart for use in marine exhibit.

—STAFF PHOTO

1960. Both left in 1962. Cohen then became director of governmental affairs for the California State Colleges. Reardon joined the system as director of public affairs.

Elaborating on the operation of the Queen Mary museum, Cohen explains:

"The museum will be operated by the non-profit California Museum Foundation and under a five-man Museum of the Sea committee.

"It will be self-supporting, receiving most of its operating expenses from funds raised by tour charges.

"We don't know yet what the charge for the tours will be but no more than enough to cover our costs."

THE TWO PLANNERS claim that the concept of the museum has created a "fantastic interest" among ocean-oriented industries.

"Many of our animated displays and living exhibits will be provided by industries researching and exploiting the sea," said the associate director.

"We anticipate that many of these displays will be used by schools and colleges who will hold classes in the museum."

Cohen explained that two of the ship's 12 decks, C and D decks, will be removed to create a 460 by 115-foot high ceiling exhibit hall capable of housing displays of multi-story height.

Detailing some of the plans for the shipboard museum the two planners said present ideas include:

A huge circular room lined with motion picture screens onto which nine projectors will produce a 360-degree panorama of underwater scenes.

An engine room catwalk providing a view of a cutaway turbine engine and main gearbox with moving parts. The hiss of steam, the whirr of turbines, and the clanging of the ship's bells, recorded while the ship was underway, will lend realism.

A window in the ship's stern through which visitors can see the giant bronze propeller slowly churning below the water line.

Cohen and Reardon hope they can find another word to describe their monumental project.

"Museum just doesn't fit. Neither does Oceanarium. Maritime Museum suggests a limited scope," says Cohen.

He adds:

"There just does not seem to be a word to describe what we have in mind."

A Year Of Opportunity Is Wasted

RONALD REAGAN'S erratic first year in Sacramento, as reviewed in these newspapers last week, adds up to preponderantly amateurish performance consistent with his campaign refrain that he was not a politician.

Whether he likes it or not, the governor has been a politician since he took office 12 months and 3 weeks ago. Elected to the highest office in the government of the largest state, he holds a demanding job that requires political skill in the highest sense.

IT IS TIME for Gov. Reagan to discard his shallow approach to so responsible a position. His second year will be an improvement over his first only if he begins to recognize the difference between crowd-pleasing and problem-solving, between scoring momentary points and getting ahead with the job, between professional charm and professional conduct.

The needs of California allow the governor no further interlude of bland relaxation, of the hasty decision and the superficial comment soon exposed as conceived in error.

Even now the Legislature is preparing to grapple with such issues, old and new, as tax reform, budget making, crime control, public educational opportunities, medical care for the indigent, and the restructuring of welfare aid by transferring administration from the counties to the state.

IT SHOULD be said that Reagan inherited challenges a year ago that would have tested the most experienced politician. The most urgent of these was the necessity of producing more state revenues and balancing the budget.

The revenue bill recommended by the governor, and passed by the Legislature with few changes, was on the whole a fair if painful measure. It equitably distributed the new tax burdens. Reagan earned good marks for it. Some across-the-board budget cuts also were justified.

But his performance otherwise was unimpressive. As Bob

Schmidt of our state bureau in Sacramento has amply demonstrated, the record is full of his disdain for learning the mechanics of state government, of admissions that he had "goofed," and of statements that may charitably be described as knowingly misleading.

(For what it is worth, the governor invented a new phrase as recently as last Tuesday while on an out-of-state speaking tour. It was "morality gap," a failing he ascribed to the national administration.)

Judgment must be reserved on whether Gov. Reagan lacks compassion for the poor, as alleged by his highly partisan critics.

IN OUR assessment, however, the first year of his administration has diminished California as a state of broad vision and soaring spirit.

The public senses this. Opinion surveys by major pollsters have reported that California voters consistently rank their governor low as a presidential candidate. One of the more interesting aspects is that the governor rates better outside the state than inside, where the people can observe his performance at closer range.

The governor damaged public health by cuts in personnel for care of mental patients (so much so that a distinguished foreign visitor, Niels Erik Bank-Mikkelsen, director of the Danish national service for the mentally retarded, was appalled at what he saw during a visit to Sonoma State Hospital) by his ill-informed attacks on Medi-Cal and by his ouster of an outstanding head of the State Department of Public Health.

HE HAD DAMAGED public education by depriving the University of California Regents of their independence, forcing them to fire the president and pushing for tuition charges under the guise of increased fees.

Although he has inveighed against crime, the crime rate is substantially greater than when he assumed office. The trend is nationwide, but under his administration the state has made no advances toward alleviating the social causes of crime.

It must be concluded tentatively, on the basis of his first year, that Gov. Reagan lacks vision as well as political expertise. The latter, at least, he can remedy. And if he masters his job, possibly his vision also will improve.

Rules Too Strict?

EDITOR:

With the emphasis on more and higher education it appears to me that the junior college could be more lenient in their rules and regulations, or at least make exceptions in extenuating circumstances regarding students wanting to attend college outside their jurisdiction.

My son wanted to attend Long Beach City College because he works full time and he wanted to carry 18 units. This time element involved his getting from work to school in the shortest time possible. City College would not accept him because he did not live in City district. Cerritos (which is in our district) will not give him the necessary permit to attend another college. So, the boy moved in with his grandmother to establish residence in the L.B.C.C. district. City College would still not accept him, with the quotation, "Anyone under 21 years of age must reside with their legal guardian." If this law is to be so strictly enforced by the City Colleges, then it should be changed in the state Legislature. A person of 18 or over can reside where he so desires. Why, to obtain an education must the law read differently?

Cerritos Junior College refused him the permit to transfer to City because they will not get the tax money for his attendance if he goes to another college. Why must our colleges be so one way? Both refusing to give, in their laws and rules, when a person is trying to obtain an education? Why will they not make exceptions in special cases? Cerritos Jr. College granted only four permits for interstate attendance in 1966-67. These were medical-hardship cases. What happens to the hundreds of others who are turned down each semester, requesting transfers? Do they forget the whole thing about education? I fail to see why anyone should be denied an education, whatever their reason, race or color.

The Same Script

EDITOR:

Governor Reagan was asked by reporters what he thought about the State of the Union.

One would think he just received a fast shot with a phonograph needle.

He painted a very dark picture indeed, as he covered unrest on our campuses, our economics, and the war in Vietnam.

They were words from the same script he used when he was running for governor of California.

At that time he painted such a black picture of our great state, that one would figure it couldn't get worse. Well he was elected — and it did.

The Californians who voted for him, weren't listening to any of his speeches. All they were interested in was the fact that he didn't believe in the Rumford Act.

Let's hope that the people of the United States are more interested in what happens to our country than they are about who lives next door to them, for as sure as March 17th is St. Patrick Day, Mr. Reagan has tossed his hat into the presidential ring.

Leaseback Gimmick Runs Into A Snag

From Our L.A. Bureau

CONTROVERSIAL leaseback financing — the gimmick to duck a public vote on raising funds for public buildings — has run into a major tax snarl.

Increasingly, multi-million-dollar public buildings built with leaseback financing are being billed for property taxes. Under conventional bond or pay-as-you-go they would have been exempt for taxes.

The tax obligation of leaseback property to public jurisdictions — where private capital is involved — was determined by a 1966 decision of the First Circuit Court of Appeals.

THE UPSHOT in Los Angeles County: $11,456,450 in valuations has joined the tax rolls.

Biggest catch was the downtown Los Angeles Music Center. An $8.5 million valuation was placed on the Music Center Lease Co. Countywide taxpayers, already stuck with a $2 million-a-year subsidy for the downtown Los Angeles project, will have to pick up the tab for the taxes. Los Angeles city schools will be the biggest beneficiary. As to the county's own taxes, the decision means shifting some revenue from one pocket to the other.

Uncle Sam also will be paying property taxes to Long Beach Unified School District. It is because Lake-El Monte and La Puente. Gardena Fire Headquarters Corp. faces an $86,600 valuation.

An additional $263,000 valuation was tacked on Gardena Civic Center Building Corp., the leaseback go-between for the city hall, police station and jail.

The City of Artesia Municipal Building Corporation Community Center also has a $22,250 valuation. Assessed at $123,900 is the Redondo Beach Civic Center Building Authority, the leaseback agent for the city hall. Redondo Beach's leaseback police station is valued for taxes at $57,700, plus Fire Station No. 1 for $41,000 and Fire Station No. 2 for $30,400.

A LEASEBACK deal involves a contract with a private party to finance and build a public building on public land. The private party then leases back the property to the public agency.

Long Beach's Lincoln Park Garage is assessed at $88,000, though it isn't a leaseback deal. It qualified for the tax rolls because private money is involved.

Heyday of the leaseback dawned a few years ago — after a county counsel's opinion ruled that leaseback property of public agencies probably wouldn't have to go on the tax rolls.

That opinion held up until the 1966 San Francisco court decision jolted the leasebackers. Taxpayer Shirley Stamps had sued in a test case.

The earlier counsel's opinion also held that even if leaseback property were taxable, it might qualify for tax-free status as a welfare exemption. In the interim, the California legislature overhauled assessment procedure in the so-called assessor reform bill. Under the new law, the State Board of Equalization had to approve any welfare exemptions. The state already has refused to approve a welfare exemption for the money-losing downtown Los Angeles Music Center.

That pretty well dashes the hopes of other public agencies for immunity from property taxes — if their property is leaseback.

County Assessor Philip E. Watson had held off on assessing leasebacks prior to 1966. But with the new court decision, he has no other choice.

JAMES McCauley

wood Post Office, built as a federal leaseback project, is stuck with a tax valuation of $77,500. Los Angeles International Airport Post Office also will be due for taxes under an assessed valuation of $597,000.

BUT SOME OF THE REDDEST faces may be in the city halls of Santa Fe Springs and Palos Verdes Estates. Leaseback-built city halls in both Santa Fe Springs and Palos Verdes Estates have been placed on the tax rolls and will be paying taxes.

Also, tax-valuations were placed on leaseback city halls in Pomona, South

Tonkin Vote Like Nuptial Vow to HHH

IF YOUR WIFE gets a little homely — at least not as pretty as when she was your 21-year-old sweetheart, said Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, there may be a temptation to break an old agreement.

"There are ways to get out," he said, "but they are legal ways. An agreement is an agreement."

The Veep was talking, of course, about Vietnam commitments. His words came during one of the few moments of minimum public and press exposure last weekend at Fresno. Because of limited space in small TV studios there, four of the press crew covering the three-day Democratic Campaign Conference were assigned to follow Humphrey and pool their information for the rest who could not attend.

It was while talking to the four of us in the Fresno TV studio, and after he had finished taping a half-hour program, that he also stressed the political quality of disagreeing without being disagreeable, adding, "I don't need to dislike Richard Nixon. The fact is I like him." That kind of affection, he said, he also extends to GOP Governors Ronald Reagan of California and George Romney of Michigan.

SOMEONE related to Humphrey that Minnesota Sen. Eugene McCarthy had suggested Humphrey probably would be on the McCarthy presidential bandwagon now if he were not the Vice President.

"No," said Humphrey, "I couldn't be on the basis of the main issue he's discussing (Vietnam)." He told newsmen his (Humphrey's) record in Congress since 1954 will bear out the consistency of his stand on Southeast Asia.

"You can't let liberation wars gain credence," he said. "You have to stop them."

After the fact of the Tonkin Resolution, some U.S. senators asked what it meant, HHH said. He explained, "It's like a marriage vow." And he said he explained the resolution's meaning to — among others — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho: It means you give the President the power to apply what force is necessary to protect American forces and to fulfill our treaty commitments.

DESPITE REPEATED statements of friendship for McCarthy, Humphrey's appraisal of that senator's candidacy against LBJ boiled down to the "stalking horse" result. No, Humphrey does not think McCarthy is a stand-in for Sen. Robert F. Kennedy nor, as is also charged, a stalking horse for LBJ.

But nevertheless, the McCarthy candidacy "has sharpened the issues," said Humphrey, "and many of the undecided have come around to the President's view. A critic must offer an alternative and it has not been offered."

The Veep discounted one newsmen's parallel between California's 1964 primary race — the Rockefeller-Goldwater fight while LBJ had clear sailing as opposed to LBJ's confrontation this year with McCarthy, George Wallace and a Peace and Freedom slate while Governor Reagan has clear sailing.

No, no, said Humphrey. "There's a great deal of difference. Sen. McCarthy will not engage in personal vilification or attack; he's a gentleman. There's all sorts of fratricidal warfare before the main event. Once the Republicans select a candidate, Democrats tend to pull together."

At Least There's Lots of Bills

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — Partisan politics may play such a large role in the 1968 legislative session that, observers fear, little actual lawmaking may be accomplished.

But for all the politicking the legislators are doing and will be doing in this election year, there has been no reduction in surface activity.

FOR INSTANCE, in the first week of the session the 80 assemblymen introduced 87 bills, seven Constitutional amendments, seven concurrent resolutions (dealing with state matters), one joint resolution (dealing with a Federal matter) and 17 house resolutions (generally commending some California citizen).

On the 40-member Senate side, 32 bills were introduced, two Constitutional amendments proposed, three concurrent resolutions were sought and 19 house resolutions advanced.

And this in a relatively "short" week. Monday was occupied with the two houses organizing themselves, and Tuesday a joint session was held to hear Gov. Ronald Reagan's "State of the State" message.

Each of the 119 bills and many of the resolutions will receive hearings before various committees. So "between authorizing new legislation and conducting hearings into legislation already introduced and reading mail from constituents and doing homework for their legislative duties and making speeches, one wonders when assemblymen and senators have time to meet in the Sacramento equivalent of the smoke-filled room.

THE FIRST WEEK'S action, by the way, is not particularly unusual. Last year, over a total of 283 calendar days of actual sessions, 4,162 pieces of legislation were considered.

The assemblymen introduced 2,608 bills, of which 1,091 won approval of both houses and of which 1,047 were ultimately approved by the governor. The Senate introduced 1,554 bills, with 722 passing both houses and 682 being signed into law.

What keeps the Legislature from sinking into a morass of complicated legislative proposals is its committee system, which acts as a sieve, theoretically, permitting only the most worthwhile bills to reach the floors for vote.

Many of the bills require hearings by more than one committee, sometimes more than one hearing by the same committee, and sometimes hearings in different parts of the state (for instance, the hearings up and down the state last fall held separately by the Assembly and Senate Elections and Reapportionment Committees on realigning California's 38 congressional districts).

It was from the scattered tribes, the people who had no written language, possessed no system of money, that the Inca empire evolved. Author Lan-

TRUE, NOT ALL of the resolutions proposed require extensive committee hearings, but some of them do. One which doesn't figure to occupy a committee too much is a resolution authorized by Sen. George Miller Jr. which "urges the California Chief Executive to remain in the state for the remainder of 1968," and to compensate the Republican Party for the loss of the governor's fund-raising proficiency, directs the state to pay to the GOP "at least one and a half million dollars as damages for the loss of the out of state services of the California Chief Executive."

Miller, if it need be said, is a Democrat.

(Gov. Reagan, asked about the Miller resolution at a press conference, displayed the wit which has made him so attractive as a public speaker. "I'll be happy to stay in the state," he said, "if Sen. Miller will leave.")

Obviously, the legislator-politicians will find a way to keep up their legislative activity while continuing to direct a running stream of criticism at their opposition. They're clever, these people.

Today's Book

PERU BEFORE THE INCAS. By Edward P. Lanning. Prentice-Hall Spectrum Books, $2.95.

Columbia University archaeologist Lanning uses the most recently discovered farm tools, weapons and pottery, artifacts found in central Peru, northern Chile and the highlands of Bolivia, to lay bare the prehistoric civilizations and cultures upon whose successes and failures the powerful and resplendent Inca civilization rested.

It was from the scattered tribes, the people who had no written language, possessed no system of money, that the Inca empire evolved. Author Lanning takes us back in time as far as 14,000 years before the Incas to describe the societies, governments, agriculture of Peruvian prehistory.

It is a fascinating panorama of nomads gathering food, hunting and fishing, then settling down as farmers, and as long ago as 2000 B.C. setting up relatively complex communities. There were sophisticated states before the Incas, author Lanning shows us — the Moche and Nazca peoples, who had progressed to the point of societies embracing rulers and ruled, military and civilians, urban and rural areas, and merchants. — H.

Two Sides to 'Break' Between Nuns and Cardinal McIntyre

THERE IS DEEP DIVISION within the Roman Catholic community on the break between the Immaculate Heart nuns and the Los Angeles archdiocese.

Leaders of parents' groups contacted in Long Beach stand with the sisters, though saddened by the rift. They believe the experimental drive for modernization and greater autonomy to be in the spirit of the Vatican Council directives, and in the ultimate interest of better Catholic education. In Los Angeles, the 700-member Association of Laymen officially holds the same position.

ON THE OTHER HAND, reactions by many parents to this paper's stories indicates widespread rank and file support for Cardinal McIntyre. Few articles in this reporter's memory stirred as many reader phone calls to discuss the issues involved.

"Some readers, while quite ready to grant that the sisters are entitled to liberalizing changes in their mode of life, feel the matter is too complex for the press to present fairly and accurately, and that public airing of the dispute is a mistake which can only confuse the youngsters and harm the educational fabric."

In this they are as one with Cardinal McIntyre, who stated last November when the problem was in the simmering stage: "The nature and structure of religious life is a subject which has profound roots in canon law, as well as dogmatic, pastoral and ascetical theology. It is questionable whether such a subject can be completely discussed in the public forum, or resolved by some kind of popular vote. It is unfortunate that this subject has become a topic of public discussion."

UNFORTUNATE or not, there is no way to keep such an unprecedented development out of the public arena, any more than the decisions and problem-laden consequences of the Vatican reforms. The Roman Catholic Church, with more than four times the number of communicants as the leading Protestant denomination, is not exactly a minor factor in American life.

It may be true, however, that there is a tendency to oversimplification in the press, where, in the manner of today's politics, it tends to come out simply as forward-looking change vs. arch-conservative hierarchy, forgetting that the very possibilities for ferment and change were initiated by hierarchy.

REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK By LES RODNEY

And in pleading for greater educational excellence (through smaller class loads and fully credentialed instructors), the local nuns are not contending with someone who downgrades education in the person of the cardinal. Even his foes concede that under his leadership a far-sighted and efficient school expansion program has made this archdiocese the envy of many others. In fact, this accomplishment, by attracting some non Catholic students, adds a bit to the overcrowding problem.

"We love our sisters and we love Cardinal McIntyre, that makes it so hard to say what we feel," sighed a clerk at one of the area parochial schools over the phone last week.

TO HELP BALANCE the picture given by the previously quoted views of parent leaders, we believe it worthwhile to share a letter we have received from a St. Anthony's school parent. There is good reason to believe it is typical of the feelings of many others.

"Dear Sir: "I have been following your articles and was glad to hear that the president of the Patrons Club (high school parents) was not speaking for all the parents.

"We contribute to three Catholic school systems — elementary, high school and college. We have five children of school age. I do not support the method the I.H. nuns are using to promote their causes. In this age of rebellion against discipline and authority, I think they are setting a poor example in the high school to these impressionable 14-18-year olds.

"The way they govern their private lives as to what time they get up, go to bed, say their daily prayers and where they live is up to them and their superiors, as far as I'm concerned. But when my child comes home more interested in what Sister is wearing (and if we have any good used clothing for Sister), how and when and who fixed Sister's hair, instead of being interested in the 3 Rs, then I am displeased.

"Their habit represents holiness, discipline and respect. I'm not concerned if it is a long black habit or a neat blue suit, if they have some mark of identification so you can tell the teachers from the students, as they are young nuns at St. Anthony's. As much as a nun wants to think of herself as being exactly like everyone else, the world does not see her this way.

"If the nuns can take advantage of more schooling to improve themselves and the schools academically — fine, because there is room for improvement in all of us. But not when it takes rebellion, and causes dissent in the rank and file of the members of the Catholic faith, and labels them as liberals or conservatives instead of Catholics.

"This is my opinion and I can't believe that I am alone.

"Respectfully,
"Mrs. Marjorie LeSage
"2218 Radnor Ave."

Nor, on the hierarchy level, can Cardinal McIntyre accurately be portrayed as a lone conservative holdout on the American scene. In a speech to the heads of U.S. orders, for instance, Chicago's Cardinal Cody was strongly critical of just such experimental communities as the I.H. sisters are embarked upon.

THE FEMALE SIDE is not all with the local innovators by any means. Says Sister Caroleen, superintendent of the Dallas parochial schools: "I'm not interested in wearing a 1968 dress. I'd rather be medieval all the way." Sister Mary Ursula, president of Dominican College in New Orleans, charges that "the desire to display her hair and look like a woman has motivated most of the nuns who welcome the change." Minus the habit, she declares, nuns lack the "symbol of dignity and majesty of their calling."

A sampling of Catholic magazines, on the other hand, shows a tendency to come down on the side of the sisters.

The Jesuit weekly America cites in Sister Anita Caspary's assurance that the new norms are being tried "without moving away from the values implicit in the traditional vows," and adds, "These norms encourage more diverse, spontaneous and responsible dedication to the ideals and endeavors of the religious community. . . . If the archdiocese and the sisters do not come to terms on these issues, perhaps some extraordinary ordinary will use this exceptional source of woman-power — on their own terms — for his schools and other tasks."

JOHN COGLEY in the Catholic Messenger, citing the fact that "Immaculate Heart Sisters have gained distinction as scholars, educators, musicians and artists" (Sister Mary Corita among them), says "If the archdiocesan schools are deprived of their services the people fortunate enough to have them as teachers of their children, as I was, can be the only losers."

In an editorial entitled "Reform as Experiment," Commonweal, while giving the back of its hand to post-Vatican II "faddists" who pressed the sisters for change for the sake of change, says the proposals of the local order "are more far reaching and radical than any imagined by the early critics. The I.H. sisters have in mind nothing less than a profound redirection of their communal life style, making it more open to the needs of their own members and of the larger community of mankind."

Spelling out the proposed educational reforms, the editorial concludes: "For these and numerous other items — including simplification in dress and title — the Immaculate Heart proposals are landmarks. It is important to observe, too, that they are conceived as experiments, not as rigid dicta laid down for the next 40 years. The whole approach is contemporary, American, and, of course, risky. The risks seem eminently worth taking."

THIS IS A LONG LOOK. In the meanwhile, it is all understandably a dismaying business to many a parent. Another of the fixed stars moving off in new directions. Stability and discipline threatened.

If history shows anything, it shows that there are usually excesses in sudden change. Which doesn't mean that change may not have been needed. When the world changes, an institution may have to change. How, how much, and how fast, that is usually the question. It is the question Pope Paul is wrestling with as he works to keep overdue renewal within controllable bounds.

If it's a tough job for the Vatican, there seems little reason to expect it to be any easier in one given American archdiocese.

L. A. C. SAYS

Free Enterprise on Trial?

By L. A. COLLINS SR.

ONE OFTEN HEARS that the free enterprise system is on trial. It is sometimes referred to as capitalism. But regardless of the term used to describe it, many of our people have come to think of our system as being on trial. Actually, it is the only system on earth today that has proven itself successful. It needs to be protected from fanatics and their schemes. But it is the people who are on trial, not our system.

According to the communists — and some of our left-wing legislators — capitalism is a dirty word. These people would destroy it on the theory that everything should be divided among all the people. It is evident that the capitalists must stick together in fighting this philosophy if they are not to be destroyed. It is therefore important that we take a look to see just who are these "capitalists."

ONE DEFINITION in the dictionary is "one who has capital." On that basis, a large percentage of the American people qualify. Compared with Russia, Red China and many other countries, all our people are capitalists because all but a few of them own many things of which ownership is denied to the people of socialist or communist societies. Our people have something to protect and should recognize the fact that they have a battle to protect it.

The family with life insurance is a capitalist because it owns an interest in the company that guarantees to repay it with the investment money paid into the company. The company, in turn, re-invests a large part of that money in automobile, chemical and other industries. Including all individuals, there are about 118 million policyholders in life insurance companies. The safety of their investments is dependent upon the free enterprise system under which these companies operate.

Every individual with savings in a bank or savings and loan association is a capitalist. Their savings are used to finance new homes and office buildings, as well as automobile purchases and many other segments of our economy. When government goes into the financing business it is in competition with these investments. Some of our people encourage the complete domination of such financing — making all borrowers dependent upon government agencies. An estimated 125 million people are capitalists in that they have their savings in their free enterprise system.

Then there are over 25 million workers who are members of company pension or profit-sharing plans. An estimated $100 billion are involved in these private plans. There are over 23 million individual shareowners in our private corporations. Owners of individual business enterprises number around 10 million people. All these are capitalists in that they have accumulated some money and invested it in private enterprises.

Every automobile owner is a capitalist. He has his money invested and must pay taxes for its ownership plus taxes on gasoline, tires, batteries and other appliances. More than 30 million people own their homes and should be concerned over the increasing trend toward government competition. None of these ownerships is permitted in the anti-capitalistic countries that insist they will "bury all capitalistic nations."

NO OTHER people in the world have so large a percentage of their people who own these things. It would seem time that we all take a closer look at our blessings and realize that as capitalists we enjoy the greatest prosperity and comfort ever known in history. They should realize that the rights of freedom of enterprise and capitalism are constantly being attacked. This is true as concerns communists. But it is also true as concerns the attitude of many of our public officials who constantly seek ways of usurping the rights of individual capitalism.

The question now is, are we the people capable of appreciating and protecting the system? There is grave danger that we are not. We have become soft because our system has given us so much. We play around with ideas of changing, when we see all about us the evidence that no other known system has been so successful. We do not seem to know when we are well off. We allow people to go unchallenged when they say our system is on trial, when we know the system is proven but the people are not.

FBI Probes Mafia Gold Speculation

WASHINGTON — Federal lawmen are investigating the possibility that the Mafia, the notorious underworld society, has contributed to the troublesome U.S. gold drain.

Through secret Swiss bank accounts, the Mafia reportedly has been speculating in gold. The recent run on gold, touched off by the devaluation of the British pound, has caused a drain on the U.S. Treasury of approximately $900 million in gold. How much of this was caused by underworld speculation can only be surmised.

The FBI has followed Mafia couriers on their rounds as, quite obviously, they have picked up cash from gambling, shylocking, prostitution and other rackets. After stops in Las Vegas, Chicago, Detroit and other cities, the couriers have taken off for Switzerland where, also obviously, they have deposited the cash in numbered Swiss bank accounts.

UNOFFICIAL overtures have been made to the Swiss for information on these mobster accounts. Though the Swiss have declared their opposition to protecting mobsters, they have produced absolutely no information.

The reports of underworld gold speculation are another evidence of how the Mafia has been infiltrating business and banking circles with its illegal loot. What has happened is that the Mafia has educated its sons as attorneys, accountants and businessmen. They have become shrewd businessmen with almost unlimited capital to invest.

As they have bought their way into legitimate businesses, they have continued to use mobster tactics to intimidate competitors and customers. One of New York City's most famous buildings, for example is known to be secretly owned by Mafia mobsters.

DREW PEARSON

When they want a recalcitrant tenant to sign a new contract, they turn out his lights, shut off his services and sometimes threaten him until he agrees to their terms.

It may take new federal legislation to break the Mafia's tightening hold on the U.S. economy.

WHILE OUR ARMED FORCES have been taking lives in Vietnam, a few unsung Americans have been saving lives in India. It is one of the tronies of our time that it cost hundreds of thousands of dollars more to kill a Vietnamese than to save an Indian.

The United States poured six million tons of grain into drought-stricken eastern India, contrasted with the 886,841 tons of explosives dumped on Vietnam last year. The food made it possible for the Indian government to overcome the famine, thus saving probably millions of lives.

One $25 million emergency food program alone provided daily meals for more than eight million Indian children. Food-for-work programs fed another 400,000 people.

With U.S. equipment, a thousand permanent wells were also sunk. Of these, more than 200 were dug by 39 Peace Corps volunteers.

The Americans also developed a new low-cost, high-protein food, called bal ahar (child's food), which saved millions of children from malnutrition. Indian officials now hope to provide bal ahar midday meals to 25 million children.

When smallpox threatened to ravage the stricken area, the United States delivered 10 million doses of smallpox vaccine to India within five days.

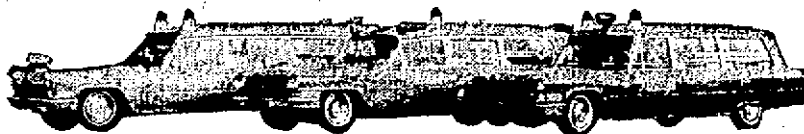

Yet the entire famine relief program cost less than what the United States spends to keep the war going in Vietnam for a week.

Junior Achievers Strong on Profits

By JIM GOODRICH

Tomorrow's businessmen learn today about private enterprise not from textbooks and lectures but from their own functioning projects that more often show profits than losses.

They are the 336 outstanding high school students enrolled in Long Beach's Junior Achievement program, a 2-year-old management development project sponsored by local business firms.

At the JA Center 1263 Long Beach Blvd., in space donated by a bank, the Achievers duplicate roles of the organization men.

They plan operations, sell stock, create and sell products for 14 small-scale companies.

ADULT COMPANIES lend 53 young executives to guide and advise the youngsters in sound business methods.

"I'm gaining experience I couldn't get anywhere else, and I'm really learning how a business should be run," said Taylor Ramsey, a 16-year-old of Lakewood High School, commenting on the learn-by-doing program.

Lakewood is one of five high schools sending students for training at the JA Center (the others are: Jordan, Millikan, Poly and Wilson).

"Junior Achievement is a worthwhile learning experience for any high school student interested in going into a business career," observed Maureen M. Hennessy, 17, of Millikan High School.

"One learns by doing rather than just hearing about and reading about business," she said.

Not only do the teen-age boys and girls gain practical management know-how through the JA companies but they also often find the ventures paying propositions.

They sell stock at $1 a share to their friends, teachers and neighbors — one share to a person.

Products — such as key chains, coasters, bulletin boards, notepads, lap trays, tie racks, auto safety kits and hamburger presses — are sold in stores or door-to-door by the youngsters working their neighborhoods in pairs on evenings and weekends.

About 65 per cent of the companies show profits for products marketed between the time the students organize operations in September and liquidate assets in May.

Return on investment is almost always good, explained a JA director. In one case it was a "fantastic" $2.34 return on a share invested in a wire paper bag holder for kitchens he said.

The average return on an investment: 15 per cent.

Long Beach's Junior Achievement companies are part of a program launched two years ago on a $10,000 investment by local business firms.

The significance of the nation-wide Junior Achievement program, according to one spokesman, is that it "helps high school students to develop a sympathetic understanding of our business system — an understanding that is so vital to America's continuing growth and prosperity."

Junior Achievers are taught to organize, finance, manage and liquidate a going concern.

Three hours a night between Monday and Friday, about 90 of the 336 Achievers gather at JA's Long Beach Center to learn the true meaning of selling at a profit or losing your shirt.

More would attend but not enough floor space is available at the center for all the students who want to enroll in the program. Only 336 Achievers and 53 advisers can be accommodated safely in the allotted 3,000 feet of space, said a spokesman.

This cramps the JA's who have plans to expand from 14 to 17 companies next year.

Barbara Bush, 17, of Millikan High School, voiced the enthusiasm for the JA project when she said:

"Junior Achievement is a fabulous opportunity to learn the various jobs involved in business. My two years as an Achiever will greatly help me in future years when I have a dress shop of my own. Such an experience is indispensable."

For Achievers it's a world of board meetings, production lines and sales talks.

THEY ARE MORE LIKELY TO GOS-SIP about balance sheets and profit statements than about dancing the frog or the monkey. Their language is peppered with such business jargon as amortize, investment funds, yields, ratio and price-earnings.

The tremendous popularity of the Junior Achievement program is attributable to its unique "learn-by-doing" method of education, according to its supporters.

Said a JA council member for the district, George Spradling, who is director of procurement and material for Douglas Aircraft Co.:

"Junior Achievement is the only program that offers a learn-by-doing opportunity to the outstanding high school students in the area, giving experience in our free enterprise system."

He added: "This is very important to the future of our industries."

Twelve companies serve as counseling firms for JAs in Long Beach which will be host city for the National Junior Achievement Week Jan. 29 - Feb. 3. The companies are: Atlantic Richfield Co., Bank of America, Bay City Bearing Co., Inc.; Bemis Company, Inc.; Douglas Aircraft Co.; General Telephone Co.; Johns-Manville Corp.; Robertshaw Controls; Grayson Controls Division; Security First National Bank; Shell Chemical Co.; Shell Oil Co. and Standard Oil Co. of California.

THE JA PROGRAM, started in Massachusetts about 50 years ago, has grown in giant spurts since World War II.

Last year, so great was the demand for the training that JA directors had to turn away, 100,000 students for lack of business sponsors, advisers and training center facilities.

This irked Donald J. Hardenbrook, JA's national president, who commented:

"I am sorry to say that as a whole many management men do not seem to be aware of the snowballing demand for Junior Achievement participation on the part of high school students."

Said he: "The high school students are eager to learn about the business system."

PACKAGING the product at final assembly is Sue Wilson, 16, participant in Lakewood High's contingent of Junior Achievers.

'HOPE' SURGEON SAYS Poor Hold U.S. Future

By EARL GRISWOLD

A 36-year-old surgeon, who believes the future of America hinges "on the affection and loyalties of the poor people of the world," has been named chief surgeon for the hospital ship Hope.

Dr. Robert Kradjian, now visiting his family at 375 36th St., will join the Hope in Philadelphia when the floating medical center sails Feb. 29 for a 10-month teaching-healing mission in Ceylon.

Dr. Kradjian last year devoted seven months to a volunteer tour that took him to hospitals in Vietnam, where he worked with civilian war casualties in the Mekong Delta; to Thailand, India and South America. He performed 500 major operations in his hospital tours. On his visit here, Dr. Kradjian is making numerous appearances before civic organizations, telling of his experiences and boosting support for Project Hope.

THE HOSPITAL ship, he said, is the most effective program he worked with last year.

The Hope, financed by private gifts, visits ports in remote areas for 10-month periods to improve medical training and services.

Dr. Kradjian, a native of Long Beach, is a graduate of Wilson High School and Long Beach City College. He received his medical degree from the University of California at San Francisco, and took his surgical training at Boston City Hospital and Kaiser Hospital in Oakland.

surgicalist affatKaiser, andwascon

He established a private practice, and was on the surgical staff at Kaiser, and was consulting surgeon at Highland Alameda Hospital.

Intrigued by the medical needs of developing nations, Dr. Kradjian decided on his volunteer tour.

THE PEOPLE OF those nations, he said, "desperately need medical help, and I found great satisfaction in the tour, though the financial rewards are certainly not there."

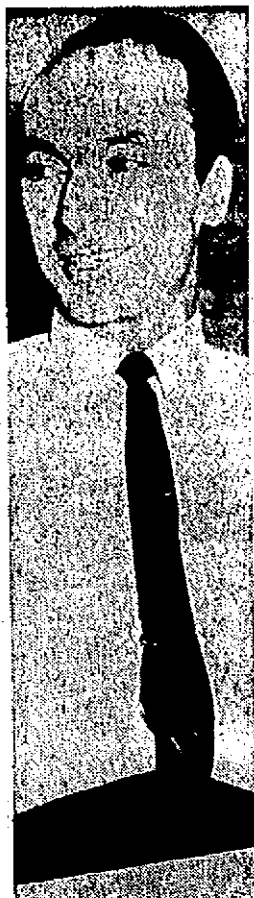

"I'm not a missionary," Dr. Kradjian said. "I'm really not a religious man; I don't go to church."

"But I really believe the future of America lies with the affection and loyalties of the poor people of the world. If they fear us and grow to hate us, we'll be in severe trouble."

Early next month, Dr. Kradjian will be married in Berkeley to Christine Stevens, a registered nurse he met at Kaiser Hospital in Oakland four years ago.

Miss Stevens, reared in a Quaker home, shares the physician's concern for the people and needs of developing nations.

She will also join the hospital ship Hope, serving as an intensive care nurse.

10.6 Million Used Parks Last Year

More than 10.6 million persons took part in the various activities of the municipal and school recreation program in 1967, according to the annual report of the Recreation Commission.

By far the majority, the report said, were the estimated 9,062,988 who visited city and school playgrounds during the year.

Expenditures of $1,717,152 by the city and $559,162 by the Long Beach Unified School District supported the program in 1967. Income from fees and charges $180,885.

Russian Roulette Kills Sailor, 20

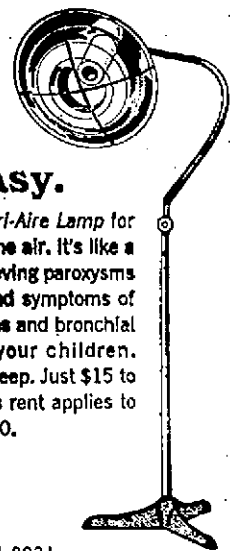

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A young sailor stationed at the Jacksonville Naval Air Station was wounded fatally Saturday while playing Russian roulette, police reported.

Kenneth W. Knott, 20, was with several others in the home of James L. Branch when he placed the pistol to his temple and fired the fatal bullet, police said.

37th Bridge Victim
POINT PLEASANT, W. Va. (UPI) — The body of the 37th victim of the Silver Bridge collapse was found in the Ohio River Saturday by one of nearly 150 boats participating in a massive dragging operation. Nine persons still are missing.

Red Cross Seeks More 'Case Aides'

Increase of service families in Long Beach because of the Vietnam war and assignment of new ships to this port has multiplied the need for volunteer case aides to service with the Long Beach Red Cross, 319 W. Broadway.

Mrs. Gary Huntsman, volunteer in charge of recruitment of case aides, asks that prospective applicants for this service telephone the chapter for an interview appointment.

Volunteer aides are asked to serve at least one day a week and complete a 40-hour training course which will be given simultaneously with introductory service periods.

Mrs. Huntsman said a college degree in the field of social service is desirable for case aides, but related work experience also qualifies the volunteers who will work closely with a professional supervisor.

Case aides assist in getting information of families who request emergency leave for servicemen; counseling on personal problems, sending emergency messages to servicemen, and interviewing servicemen and their families regarding requests for financial assistance. They also make arrangement for taping messages and sending photographs of new babies and mothers to men in overseas service.

U.S., Russ Agree on Nuclear Pact

By DON HASTINGS

THE WORLD

A treaty to halt the spread of nuclear weapons was agreed upon by the United States and the Soviet Union at the Geneva Disarmament Conference. Other participating nations have expressed satisfaction with the agreement and conference officials predicted the pact will be ready for worldwide signing by late spring or early summer.

A SUCCESSION OF EARTHQUAKES destroyed or damaged several communities in the mountainous western tip of Sicily, leaving an estimated 200 dead, hundreds injured and thousands homeless.

THE WORST STORM TO HIT Scotland in decades Monday left more than 20 persons dead, 150 injured and 700 homeless. Glasgow bore the brunt of the storm with winds up to 125 miles per hour.

TWO MEMBERS OF THE U.S. military mission in Guatemala were killed and two others wounded when their car was riddled with bullets in Guatemala City. The Latin government blamed the shooting on left-wing terrorists backed by Cuba's Fidel Castro. A 72-hour wave of terrorism virtually paralyzed the city before government troops were able to restore order.

EAST OF SUEZ will be a thing of the past for the British Empire by 1971. Prime Minister Harold Wilson proposed Britain give up its traditional role as keeper of the peace east of Suez to cut down on foreign spending. Parliament approved.

THE HIGHEST VATICAN POSITION ever given to an American went to Francis James Cardinal Brennan of Philadelphia last week when Pope Paul appointed him head of the Congregation of Sacraments.

THE NATION

Speaking before members of Congress and to millions of Americans on television, President Lyndon B. Johnson last week promised new social progress at home and no let up in the Vietnam war without a like set-up by the enemy.

In his State of the Union message, the President said the budget for the coming fiscal year will set government spending at a record $186 billion. The $10.4 increase over this year will be for defense, jobs and housing for the poor, Medicare and Medicaid payments, Social Security payments and higher interest on the national debt, he said.

To maintain the strength of the dollar, the President called on Congress to enact a 10 per cent surcharge on corporate and individual income taxes and to remove the "gold cover" backing for the dollar.

IN A MOVE TO STEM the flow of U.S. dollars abroad, President Johnson ordered American embassies and other overseas agencies to trim their staffs by 10 per cent.

AT A WHITE HOUSE LUNCHEON to discuss President Johnson's proposals to combat crime in the streets and to make cities safer, Negro singer Eartha Kitt stunned Mrs. Lady Bird Johnson and the 50 women attending by taking the First Lady to task for her husband's Vietnam policies. Mrs. Johnson replied that the war should not prevent the nation from working toward improving conditions at home.

A LONG-TIME CONSULTANT to Democratic Presidents, Washington attorney Clark Clifford was appointed by President Johnson Friday to succeed Robert S. McNamara as secretary of defense. The 61-year-old Clifford will take over the post March 1 when McNamara will leave to become president of the World Bank.

DEFENSE OFFICIALS predicted Friday that 72,000 more men will be drafted this year than in 1967. The increase, to an expected 302,000, reflects the large numbers of men drafted during the military buildup of 1966 who will be leaving the service this year.

THE BIGGEST CONSOLIDATION in United States corporate history received a green light as the U.S. Supreme Court approved the nearly six-year-old proposal to merge the Pennsylvania and New York Central railroads.

The merger, expected by Feb. 1, will create the world's largest privately-owned railroad system with assets of $4.3 billion. The combined line will have more than 20,000 miles of track stretching halfway across the country.

The court also let stand a California law that makes it a crime to refuse to give identification to a police officer.

THE WEST

The continuing debate on raising student fees at the University of California will continue for at least another month. The university's Board of Regents voted Friday to delay action on the increase until its February meeting. The extra month will give regents a chance to study alternate fee-hike plans proposed by two members of the state Assembly.

IT WAS ANNOUNCED by state Finance Director Gordon P. Smith that new tax revenues had permitted repayment of a $194 million debt left over from the administration of former Gov. Edmund G. Brown. Most state officials and legislators agreed this was good, but when Smith said the state must continue to set aside $194 million each year as operating capital to prevent such debts occurring again, Democrats and some Republicans took exception.

Smith said the cash is needed in the lean tax-receipt months. State Controller Houston L. Flournoy said the best answer to the state's cash problem is withholding of personal income taxes. Gov. Ronald Reagan opposes this.

A LONG BEACH SONGWRITER and real estate man, Thomas C. Dilbeck, 62, Tuesday opened fire with a pistol in a corridor of a Los Angeles courthouse as he awaited the second day of a hearing into the divorce action filed by his wife. When the shooting was over, Mrs. Hildegard Dilbeck, 43, his estranged wife, was dead, and her three companions were wounded. Shot were her attorney, Daniel Sheahan, 34, of Glendale; a friend, Mrs. Noble Klug, 45, of Long Beach; and accountant John Norberg, 52, of San Marino.

Dilbeck was booked on suspicion of murder. On Friday he was named in a $4.5 million lawsuit filed by the three wounded persons.

Attorneys to Mark Law Day

By "mock trials" presented in high schools, and by closed-circuit television shows, debates and assemblies, the Orange County Bar Association will celebrate Law Day on May 1.

It's America's answer to the Soviet May Day, according to Superior Court Judge H. Walter Steiner, the general chairman.

Emphasis will be placed on programs in the high schools, because young people there "are anxiously awaiting their transformation into adults — and the legal responsibilities they then will face," it was explained.

Wives of the attorneys will sponsor a county-wide essay contest, for awards to be announced later by Mrs. John C. Teal of Fullerton.

Attorney Roy Zukerman of Westminster was named as county-wide publicity chairman. He's a former newspaper reporter.

Seal Beach Center Due by Spring

Work is under way on a $62,000 Community-Recreation Building which, when completed in the spring, will service Seal Beach's northern section.

The 3,600-square-foot facility is being erected in the rear of the Rossmore Shopping Center next to the Los Alamitos-Rossmore branch library. William J. O'Brien Jr. is the contractor.

The project is a cooperative effort of Seal Beach and the Lakewood Rancho and Los Coyotes Land Co. D.B.A. Rossmore Business Center.

MRS. VAL MYERS

Memorial Paymaster Retires

Mrs. Val Myers, who oversees the $7½ million annual payroll at Memorial Hospital of Long Beach, has retired after 22 years' service.

Mrs. Myers, of 1527 Cedar Ave., rose from cashier to paymaster, a post she has held for 12 years.

Succeeding her as paymaster is Miss Carol Orlando of 70 West Peace St.

On retirement, Mrs. Myers received $7,000 she had accumulated in the Memorial employees retirement incentive trust fund established in 1961 for employees to share in savings they generate for the public by improving economy along with quality of service.

MRS. MYERS joined Memorial in 1946 as a cashier. In her first year she was promoted to insurance carrier biller and then to office manager in accounting. Ten years later she was given responsibility for the hospital payroll.

In retirement, Mrs. Myers said, "I'm going to relax and take my time doing things — seeing my family, going shopping, embroidery, listening to the hi-fi and enjoying the pots and pans in my kitchen."

Her successor, Miss Orlando, joined Memorial three years ago as a business machine operator. She was advanced to an accounting position in 1966 and began working with Mrs. Myers.

DR. MARY CALDERONE

Sexologist Due at Meetings

A series of one-day meetings Feb. 1 with Dr. Mary S. Calderone of New York, prominent sexologist, is planned to further the inauguration of sex-instruction courses in Orange County schools.

The main meeting of the day will be at 8:30 a.m. in Garden Grove High School auditorium under sponsorship of the Orange County Council for Strengthening Family Life.

Other conferences will bring specialized groups into meetings during the day. Dr. Calderone will meet with the Academy of Religion and Mental Health at 7 a.m. Feb. 1 in the doctors' lounge of St. Joseph Hospital. That evening she will be guest of the Orange County Medical Association at a banquet at its headquarters in Orange.

MRS. BERNARD A. PAUL of Costa Mesa, vice president of the Orange County Council for Strengthening Family Life, said that the opening meeting at Garden Grove High School will be on the theme of "How Parents Can Deal With the Sex Revolution in Their Children."

A conference on family life and sex education will be at 11:30 a.m. at the high school, following the open-to-the-public lecture that morning. It will deal with ways to develop a program of family life and sex education in schools.

Anaheim has a major program in all its schools, as first in the county to do so. Buena Park, Savanna at Stanton and Newport-Mesa schools have small-scale programs. Garden Grove is about ready to launch one, and so are Tustin and Westminster schools. Many others are contemplating such instruction, a survey showed.

School administrators and school nurses will meet with Dr. Calderone at 3 p.m.

Generally, boards of trustees of school districts, and many parents' groups, appear convinced that a well-balanced program of family life and sex education is a curriculum "must" for their schools, authorities explained.

Dr. Robert Peterson, superintendent of county schools, said that the county board of education has not yet taken a stand, however.

Dr. Calderone was medical director of the Planned Parenthood Federation from 1953 to 1964, when she resigned to set up the Sex Information and Education Council in New York.

'War Order' Plans Fete, Plant Tour

George T. Murphy, special assistant to the president of North American Rockwell's Space Division, will be the speaker at the dinner meeting of the Long Beach Chapter, Military Order of the World Wars, Wednesday at 6 p.m. at Lakewood Country Club.

Immediately following the dinner chapter members and their officer guests will go to the Space Division for a further briefing and a tour of the Apollo project facilities. This will be conducted by Murphy and other company officials at the Downey plant at 7:30 p.m.

Murphy is an administrative specialist, attorney and, before joining North American's Autometrics Division in 1960, served in the Washington office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The meeting and tour for the members and their male guests will begin with a social hour at 5:30 p.m. Col. M. N. Mayuga, chapter commander, will preside.

28 Council Posts Open in Elections

Up for grabs at municipal elections April 9 in 11 southeast Los Angeles County cities will be 28 councilmanic seats. The first day candidates are eligible to file nomination petitions is Thursday. The deadline is noon Feb. 15.

In addition to balloting on council candidates, the electors of Hawaiian Gardens will vote on a proposition to exclude all animals and fowl except household pets from the square-mile city.

The initiative petition was presented to the City Council last November by Luther Halliday, 12550 E. Carson St. It contained the signatures of 625 of the city's approximate 1,700 voters.

The cities and councilmen whose terms expire this year are:

ARTESIA — Vice Mayor Harold K. Penrose and councilmen Henry Dirksen and Lawrence Harper.

BELLFLOWER — Mayor Norman Murray and Earle Hoggard.

CERRITOS — Mayor Louis Struikman and Councilman Frank Leal.

DOWNEY — Mayor Ben Corbin, councilmen Priscilla Dunnum and Charles Dickerson.

HAWAIIAN GARDENS — Mayor Venn W. Furgeson, and councilmen C. Robert Lee and Lee S. Johnson.

LAKEWOOD — Mayor William J. Burns and councilmen Robert W. Baker and George Nye, Jr.

LA MIRADA — Mayor Edward J. Le Clair and Councilman James Jenkins.

LYNWOOD — Councilmen Eugene Green, Nickolas Siochos and Guy Smith.

NORWALK — Mayor Peter Fogarty and Councilman Macuen Freeman.

PARAMOUNT — Mayor Charles E. (Bill) Kennedy and Councilman Walter Scott.

SANTA FE SPRINGS — William J. McCann, vice mayor, and councilmen Grace H. (Betty) Wilson and Ernest Flores.

Play Once Radical Is Now OK

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Drama Critic

Playwright William Saroyan could have been describing South Coast Repertory's just-opened version of his "The Time of Your Life" when late in the play he had the mysterious Joe say:

"... it was three delightful, somber, beautiful hours."

The production at SCR's Third Step theater in Costa Mesa took almost that long, and the descriptive adjectives neatly sum up my views.

It was like coming upon a completely new vehicle Friday night. I had seen "Time" shortly before Pearl Harbor, and its then-avant-garde concepts and techniques seemed revolutionary to one steeped in traditional stagecraft. Now those selfsame innovations are very much in keeping with today's theater modes, being neither too far advanced nor yet dated.

SAROYAN, to the horror of the purists of his day, scrapped here the accepted notion that a play must have a running plot or conflict—or even a hero. Instead he concentrated on characterization, placing under the microscope that is the stage a slice of life as he conceived it to be lived in San Francisco of 1939.

He sought to show that while evil, brutality, sadness and those other things we seek to avoid, do exist, there also are faith, goodness, hope. This, of course, is a standard Saroyan theme and in some of his works it gets rather schmaltzy—but not in this one.

There are two central figures—not heroes. Joe, the enigmatic man of money who sits around Nick's "Embarcadero" "saloon, restaurant and entertainment palace" sipping up champagne. He is incapable of hurting any living thing, will listen to and sympathize with the bar's motley crew.

DON TUCHE does Joe admirably, if perhaps more forwardly than the writer intended. Arthur Koustik's Nick displays a proper mixture of love, gruffness, toughness and sentimentality.

"Second banana," so to speak, is Joe's sidekick Tom, ably portrayed in his dim-witted loyalties and dogged devotion by Stuart Ridgeway. While as I said there is no real plotline, Saroyan could not completely kick the habit, so he introduced prostitute Kitty Duval to a slight boy-meets-loves-looses-regains-girl situation. Denise Clements handles the role with taste and sensitivity.

Then come the men and women whose personal lives come under our scrutiny.

COOL HAND LUKE AFTER THE 'HEAT'

Members of the chain gang tend Luke's (Paul Newman) wounds after he's beaten by a prison guard in "Cool Hand Luke," opening in area theaters Wednesday. The movie is directed by Stuart Rosenberg.

Ford's Theater Reopening; Presidential Box Vacant...

By STAN BENJAMIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — They turned it into an office building, a museum, a storehouse of government paperwork — anything but what it was meant to be.

It had stopped being a theater the instant President Abraham Lincoln was shot fatally while watching a performance from a box near the stage.

Now, after more than a century without the glare of footlights or the sound of applause, Ford's Theater is being rededicated with an hour-long ceremony this afternoon.

Three years of painstaking work and $2.7 million have erased the traces of office partitions and filing shelves, and restored the look Ford's had in Lincoln's day, when it was one of Washington's newest and most sparkling showplaces. The stage is ready again to receive actors, the auditorium to seat an audience — with one important exception — Boxes 7 and 8, where the assassination took place, will never be used again. They will remain as they were the night Lincoln was killed by a pistol ball fired from the rear of these boxes.

A PARTITION BETWEEN the boxes had been removed to make room for the presidential party that night, April 14, 1865, and an upholstered rocking chair had been provided for the President.

Ford's Theater, only a short carriage ride from the White House was presenting a comedy, "Our American Cousin" by Tom Taylor, a roaring success for the past seven years in New York, on the road and in England.

Ford's had opened less than two years before and was an immediate success, acclaimed for its comfort and elegance.

The auditorium, resplendent in white with gold trim and crowned with an elaborately decorated dome, seated 1,700 in a main floor and two balconies.

Lincoln had been there eight times before — once, shortly after it opened, to see a play called "The Marble Heart," starring John Wilkes Booth.

Booth had no part in "Our American Cousin" but fled across the stage after shooting Lincoln in the head. As he escaped he menaced actor Harry Hawk, alone on the stage at the moment.

FORD'S THEATER was closed at once by order of Secretary of War Edwin M. Stanton, while investigators tried to reconstruct the slaying.

It was not the first calamity for theater owner John T. Ford, who had built this gem after Ford's Atheneum — a former Baptist church converted into a theater — had burned down on the same spot. The sparkling new theater, designed by James J. Cifford, had opened Aug. 27, 1863, and was a success for 20 months, until the president was slain during its 495th presentation.

The doors remained under official seal until the assassination conspirators — sympathizers of the lost Southern cause — were hanged on July 7, 1865.

Ford scheduled a play for July 10 and began selling tickets, but his playhouse was now a focal point for strong feelings.

"Sir, You must not think of opening tomorrow night. I can assure you it will not be tolerated," said a note to Ford on July 9, signed, "One of many determined to prevent it."

Stanton ordered the theater closed again. Troops were stationed to turn away all comers. Ford refunded the ticket money and did not try again to reopen.

A SHORT TIME LATER, the government leased — and then bought — the theater. A New York contractor tore out its insides, amid grabbing souvenir hunters, to convert it into a three-story office building.

The Army Medical Museum moved in, to be joined later by the Office of Records and Pensions and the Adjutant General's Office. When the museum eventually moved out in 1887, the adjutant general took over the whole structure.

On June 9, 1893, tragedy struck again. A section of the third floor collapsed, hurling men, furniture and heavy file cases down to the cellar. Twenty-two government employees were killed and 65 others were injured.

From 1893 to 1931, the building was trusted only as storage space for publications for the adjutant general. Then the Interior Department took it over and opened a Lincoln Museum.

IN NOVEMBER 1964, work to restore Ford's Theater began. Today's ceremony marks completion of that work. Lincoln and his era provide the theme for the dedication. Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., will read excerpts from Lincoln's speeches, standing in for his ailing Illinois colleague, Sen. Everett M. Dirksen.

The building's strange history is reviewed by Sen. Milton R. Young, R-N.D., who first introduced legislation to restore and actor Jason Robards delivers the poet Walt Whitman's eulogy to Lincoln, "When Lilacs Last in Dooryard Bloom'd."

Even the music, by the U.S. Army chorus, is of Lincoln's time.

On Jan. 31, the mood rises, with an all-star show in the restored theater, for an invitation-only audience.

Actress Helen Hayes is to be the first performer on the stage of Ford's Theater since a frightened and confused Harry Hawk fled before the knife-wielding Booth.

JOINING HER WILL be Henry Fonda, Frederic March, Robert Ryan, Julie Harris, Andy Williams, Odette, dancer Carmen de Lavallade and comedian Herb Shriner.

And on Feb. 12, Lincoln's Birthday, Ford's Theater welcomes the public with a performance of "John Brown's Body," the Civil War masterpiece by Stephen Vincent Benet.

Ford's Theater is once more what it was meant to be. And something more.

The Lincoln Museum it still shelters and the empty presidential box will never let it be just another theater.

But the footlights are on again.

Hungry Uruguay Gets U.S., Argentina Aid

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — Uruguay is receiving help from the United States and Argentina to tide it over an impending shortage of homegrown wheat as a result of drought.

U.S. and Uruguayan officials signed Friday an agreement under which the United States will lead Uruguay $20 million for the purchase this year of 200,000 tons of wheat and 100,000 tons of feed grain from U.S. suppliers.

EARL WILSON'S BROADWAY

'Mice, Men' Star Sees Great Chance

NEW YORK — Joey Heatherton is now a sedate young lady of 22 who doesn't say anything weird or hippie except "Guhrrroovey" and "Wrap it up and hang it on the wall."

"People forget I'm an actress," she says, pouting a little about it — her singing and dancing have been heard and seen by millions and millions. But soon the public will see her getting strangled as the victim of "Lennie" in "Of Mice and Men" on ABC-TV, Jan. 31.

"Lennie is played by Nicole Williamson, an English actor, and he had a lot of fun strangling me during rehearsals," Joey said.

Joey's generation was, of course, too young to remember all the literary excitement about John Steinbeck's "Of Mice and Men" — and she told me, "It's a big dramatic thing for me. I play 'the girl' — the Betty Field role. She's tied down to a wrangler on the ranch."

"And Lennie who likes to pet mice and pups and then strangle them, well, he likes to pet my hair."

"Then he grabs me and kills me like he kills the pup."

JOEY'S THE ONLY girl

in "Of Mice and Men" and she hopes her death scene in the hayloft will be memorable. Then she returns to the Dean Martin show, singing a ballad and a couple of songs with Dean, and does a spoof of "She Came A Long Way From St. Louey" — and again as the only girl on the show.

"I wear long dresses down to the ankles and really curly hair and lipstick (which is out today) and horrible shoes with flat heels... Lipstick's old hat, to me, anyway."

"How long ago did you get your singing and dancing reputation in those shows like 'Hulabaloo'?"

"Years ago!" she said.

IT WAS ABOUT three. She's done three movies, "Where Love Has Gone," "Twilight of Horror," and "My Blood Runs Cold," and four plays. Her father, Ray Heatherton, is busy doing TV commercials. Her brother, Dick Heatherton, is a very busy disk jockey. But Joey is probably busier than anybody with her TV commercials for raincoats and things besides her guest appearances.

Joey went to Vietnam twice with Bob Hope. Last year she met John Steinbeck at Gen. William C. Westmoreland's house in Saigon.

"I got Gen. Westmoreland's stars," Joey said.

"How? I just said 'Gee, they're cute!' And I took them."

Wrap it up and hang it on the wall!

THE WEEKEND WIND-UP: Jose Ferrer described himself at L'Etoile as "the prophet of flops" — says he turned down five Broadway musicals, and they all folded... Vince Edwards may not be able to tour with his movie "Hammerhead" — but his custom-tailored wardrobe will be sent on a 28-city trip... Playboy magazine wants to photograph Ewa Aulin, 18, who plays the title role in "Candy"... Louis Armstrong goes into the Las Vegas Flamingo at the biggest salary ever paid a band there.

Insult comic Don Rickles sent Christmas ties to pals with a touching note: "These are to hang yourself with!"... Novelist James ("Tai Pan") Clavell wore a solid-gold nugget necklace with his turtleneck sweater at La Crepe au Village... There are requests for versions of Julius Monk's Plaza-9 revue in L.A. and Montreal... Sid Caesar's trying to sell (via Previews, Inc.) his Long Island home, with pool, sauna, gazebo, playroom with soda fountain and pool table... Carol Channing's first TV'er won't be seen till Feb. 29, but Monsanto wants to sign her for four more.

Warren Beatty and Joe Levine, who have two of the year's big hits ("Bonnie & Clyde" and "The Graduate") will combine for "Augie March" and "Ski Bum"... Duo at Tracton's, L.A.: Robert Vaughan and Carmen Phillips... Al Hirt wants to build a chain of jazz spots, like his New Orleans place... Stripper Mary Cecilia Kelly says she's changed her stage name, to suit the times, from Charlene De Gaulle to Moya Dayan.

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Barry Nelson hears that correspondence school teachers will strike next — they'll mail their students empty envelopes.

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Ralph Weinsheink tells of the storekeeper, fearful of bogus money, who displays a sign: "No Checks Cashed! All Cash Checked!"

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "If you must make mistakes, at least make a new one each time."

EARL'S PEARLS: It's sad about television — the good guys seem to be winning on every show but the news programs. — Bob Orben.

Veteran entertainer Sadie Banks was asked to name the best of the young comics. "Best of the young comics?" said the 81-year-old Sadie. "That's Bob Hope."... That's earl, brother.

American black marketeer Bill Mason (Bob Crane) disguised as an East German lady athlete, arouses the interest of an East Berlin cyclist in "The Wicked Dreams of Paula Schultz," opening at area movie theaters Wednesday.

New Fuel Meets All Controls

A new low-sulphur fuel oil to be used by the Haynes Steam Generating Plant in east Long Beach meets all smog control standards, the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power has announced.

The new fuel — a test oil from Indonesia — has a sulphur content 80 per cent less than the 1.5 sulphur content of conventional oil, the department's analyst said.

The Haynes plant will burn the low-sulphur fuel oil when natural gas is unavailable.

Meanwhile, County Supervisor Warren Dorn has called on federal officials for more help on oil fallout.

In a letter to President Johnson, he urged that more low-sulphur fuel be imported, and suggested that more natural gas be made available to California power plants.

He also hailed as a "major victory" the withdrawal of a court appeal challenging the Air Pollution Control District's power to regulate fuel oil burning.

Water Supply Increase Talks to Be Resumed

Public hearing on a water rate increase application by the Park Water Co. will be resumed by the California Public Utilities Commission (PUC) Tuesday at 10 a.m. in Pico Rivera City Hall.

The company serves approximately 42,000 customers in sections of 13 cities from Artesia to Montebello. Cities in which the company has water services include Artesia, Bellflower, Commerce, Compton, Downey, Lynwood, Montebello, Norwalk, Paramount, Pico Rivera, Santa Fe Springs and South Gate.

The hearing, which began last August, was interrupted following a series of complaints about the company's service, low water pressure in various areas and the poor quality of water.

Orange County Grand Jury Gets New Face

Even before it mapped its 1968 work program, the Orange County Grand Jury lost a member and gained another.

Lyle C. Blystone of Santa Ana resigned for health reasons, and Mrs. Thelma Mary Peterson of Santa Ana was selected as his successor.

The jury organized, but Foreman Donald R. Colegrove has not made committee assignments.

Long Beach Executive Promoted

Raymond E. Strate, 701 Los Altos Ave., who has been branch manager for Westinghouse Electric in Long Beach for many years, has been named vice president and general manager of the Los Angeles Wholesaler Electric Co.

State has had more than 20 years experience in the electrical distribution business in Southern California. He is a member of the Pacific Coast Club and has been active in the Lions Club.

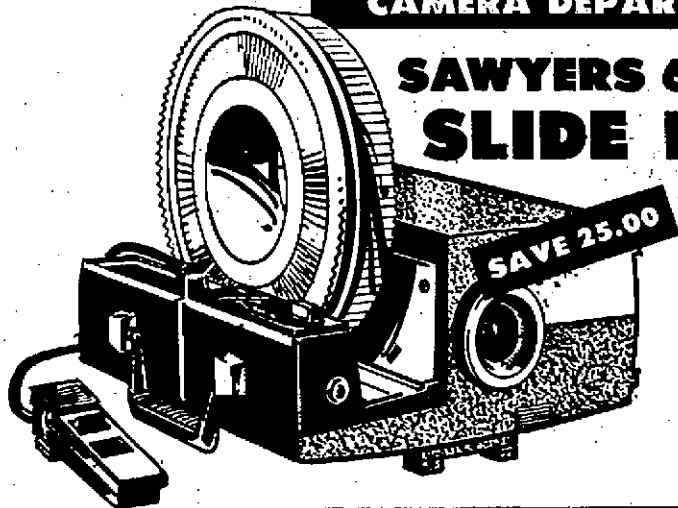

His new headquarters will be at 214 E. Third St., Los Angeles.

Crump Kin A Suicide
MEMPHIS (AP) — Frank Pidgeon III, 17-year-old great-grandson of the late Memphis political leader E. H. Crump, was found Saturday shot to death in a garage apartment at his East Memphis home. "We believe, at this point, that the death was a suicide," said Detective Chief W. P. Huston.

Oilmen Look to Growth

By FRED LANKARD
United Press International

The petroleum industry faces 1968 with an optimism tempered by long-standing problems and new uncertainties.

In general the outlook is for a year of solid growth.

Spurred by the Mideast crisis, domestic production climbed to a record level of over 3.2 billion barrels last year and could reach another new peak in 1968 with predictions for the U.S. indicating a 3 to 4 per cent increase in demand.

Forecasters see demand boosts of some 3.5 per cent for automotive gasoline, 10 per cent for jet fuel, over 1 per cent for heating oils, and 7 per cent for petroleum liquids used as petrochemical feedstocks.

Total world demand for petroleum, based on a 40 million barrel per day consumption, will climb some 9 per cent.

THE PIPELINE industry should be in for a big year with a number of technological developments and completion of capline, a 630-mile, 40-inch line from Southern Louisiana to Illinois.

The new year can expect a boom in offshore exploration.

Lease sales will be held in the offshore Texas area and, early next month, in the Santa Barbara (California) Channel. New expansion is anticipated in the North Sea and giant strides are forecast for offshore development in such areas as Australia and the Mediterranean.

The second session of the 90th Congress shapes up as a significant one for the industry. The 27.5 per cent depletion rate faces a test in the consideration of tax reform and there is pressure from all sides on the government's oil import control program.

A MAJOR item of concern will be the impact of the administration's announced crackdown on overseas spending.

The Department of Interior is expected to publish rules governing research and development on federal oil shale lands, while the Supreme Court will hand gas producers its decision on area rates.

Water and air pollution problems will get their share of attention and new regulations have already been proposed for reductions in the emission of pollutants by motor vehicles.

Domestic refining construction will probably back off its hectic pace but overseas construction is headed for a banner year. Japanese refiners should set the pace with expenditures of well over $400 million.

Technical advances will touch virtually every segment of the industry.

DRILLERS will be offered everything from more durable bits to refinements in automated rigs. A fully automatic welding system is just over the horizon for pipeliners and new super-tankers, their construction prompted by the Arab-Israeli war and closure of the Suez Canal, will begin making their mark in 1968.

Researchers are pressing their study into the development of food from petroleum. Hot on the heels of New Mexico's Gasbuggy blast are plans for an autumn nuclear explosion to fracture western Colorado's Rutison gas field.

The new year will see the start of a two-year study by Stanford Research Institute of processes for recovering oil and gas from coal, lignite, tar sand and oil shale.

Spokesmen for both the big and little oil men also picture 1968 as a year of challenge for the government and the industry.

W. W. KEELER, president of Phillips Petroleum Co., notes that "for the long pull, both crude oil and product prices will have to increase substantially if the industry is to have the incentive to find the petroleum supplies for the future."

1,500 Will Attend Annual Scouts Recognition Dinner

Fifteen hundred Scout leaders and their wives will attend the annual recognition dinner of the Long Beach Area Council, Boy Scouts of America, Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. in the Long Beach Auditorium exhibit hall.

J. Kimball Walker, who is serving as chairman of the affair, said, "Planning a pot-luck of this magnitude is a real endeavor, but with the Sea Explorers serving, having the coffee brewed by officers of the Long Beach Motor Patrol Assn., and having a corps of interested ladies under the leadership of Mrs. Carolyn Staneland, it takes a slightly different perspective."

Serving with Mrs. Staneland are Mmes. Muriel Baker, Lee Walker, Jackie Mayer, Mabel Givens, Beverly Wisniewski, Juanita Zoppa and Margaret Wallace.

Five Silver Beaver Awards, Scouting's highest award for volunteer service, will be presented. In addition, all Scout unit leaders will be recognized for their outstanding work over the past year.

THE AFFAIR, climaxing 50 years of Scouting in the Long Beach area, will feature Elder Marion D. Hanks of the General Authorities of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter-day Saints, as guest speaker. Entertainment will be provided by the Meister Singers from Long Beach City College.

Keith Houdyshell will serve as master of ceremonies. Working with Walker on the program are Jay Rider, Morrie Harl, Jack Molsinger, Elliott Stiles, Virgil Sponberg, Charles Pearson, William Kummer and Judge John Landis.

Others on the program are Council President William H. Todd, M.D.; Scout Executive Harold W. Arnold; P. William Davis, deputy regional Scout executive; Rev. William Abernold, Judge Landis and Kummer.

The Boy Scouts of America, a United Crusade Agency, will serve 16,000 boys and leaders in Long Beach, Lakewood, Signal Hill, Bellflower and Dominguez, conducts the annual affair to say "thanks" to the volunteer leaders who give year around direction to the 350 Cub Packs, Scout Troops and Explorer Units.

Collegians Called to Narcotics Parley

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — A state official said Saturday he hoped to receive a "substantial" number of reports from college officials and students this week on the use of illegal drugs on campuses.

Representatives of 86 colleges and universities in the state were invited by Dr. Thomas W. Georges Jr., acting state health secretary, to a meeting here Monday with the State Drug, Device and Cosmetic Board.

They were asked to present reports on student drug use at their schools.

Part-time Jobs Open at Auditorium, Stadium

Part-time jobs with the city as admissions attendants at Long Beach Auditorium and Arena and Veterans Memorial Stadium currently are available, according to the Civil Service Board.

Applications for the jobs, which pay from $1.60 to $2.60 an hour, will be accepted through Jan. 30 at the board office, Room 332, Municipal Utilities Building, 215 W. Broadway.

The city also is seeking computer programmers and construction inspectors.

Applications for positions as assistant electronic data processing programmer analyst will be accepted through Jan. 29. The jobs pay $696 to $859 monthly. A test will be given Feb. 2 at 8 a.m. in the civil service office.

The board will accept applications for senior construction inspector through

Feb. 1, and will conduct tests for applicants on Feb. 8 at 8 a.m. in Veterans Memorial Building. The job pays a monthly salary of $734 to $905.

IDEAS ARE NEEDED BY MANUFACTURERS

Almost everyone has ideas for products that could be manufactured and marketed. But getting these ideas on the market is the problem. How to develop them, where to take them, how to present them and what kind of royalty deals to ask for—these are the barriers that keep most people from making big money from their ideas.

Research to Reality represents many manufacturers who are searching for new products. This 12-year-old company has the experience, facilities, staff and contacts to do a good job with your ideas.

For information, send your name, address and phone number to RESEARCH TO REALITY, Inc., Dept. 34, Box 8452, Universal City, Cal. 91608.

The World of Religion — Rabbi Willi Kaelter, "The Language of Faith — Chants and Hymns" (Illustrated), 7:30 p.m., Rogers Junior High School auditorium.

Jewish Drive On

"Join the Center" week will be launched at a breakfast meeting at 10 a.m. today in the Long Beach Jewish Community Center, Willow Street and Grand Avenue.

Fred Neuburger, chairman of the membership committee, and Dr. Paul Hillinger, president, will lead off the meeting which will launch a membership drive to enroll interested families in the area who have not yet availed themselves of the services available to all age groups at the center.

The center's service area includes, in addition to Long Beach, most of the southern area of Los Angeles County, as well as Orange County. The Center is a member agency of the United Way, and is a recipient of funds from the United Crusade, but membership fees provide 28 percent of the total financial support for the Center program.

Homes Built on Lot Line Draw Revived Favor

Placing homes on a lot line isn't new in the United States, but after decades of being ignored the plan is back in use here in the Southland.

Its new, instant success is demonstrated at Oceanwood, a $3.5 million community of Armour Development Co. in Huntington Beach.

Lot-line construction of the homes, near Atlanta Avenue and Magnolia Street, gives Oceanwood residents full privacy.

It also provides use of the widened side yard for extra patio space or storage area for boats, campers and other paraphernalia not to be seen by neighbors.

HUNTINGTON Beach planning officials worked out zoning details with Larry Armour, president of the development company, and Armour's marketing director, Paul Bruns who originated the architectural technique.

"The cooperation of everyone involved was tremendous," says Armour. "This concept is the harbinger of future homebuilding, for with the high cost of land it permits the builder to provide greater space and privacy for the homebuyer."

At Oceanwood, one wall of the home sits on the line of the lot. The wall is solid masonry, minimizing sound transmission and visual encroachment from neighboring dwellings.

SLIDING glass doors in the lot-line home lead to a single sideyard area where the residents can utilize space regularly wasted.

Oceanwood received rapid approval as an FHA-VA project.

Only 102 homes will be built at Oceanwood, and the lot-line concept's growing acceptance is told in the fact that 110 homes were sold before the C. Tony Pereira-decorated models were completed.

Armour says Oceanwood represents new thinking and understanding on home architecture by the Federal Housing Authority. Its architectural application is billed as "outdoor living indoors" in the lot-line construction.

"The privacy is increased," says Armour, "because one wall of the homes is on the lot-line. It has no windows and consists of solid masonry construction; thus, sound and visual encroachment are absent."

"INDOOR-OUTDOOR livability is expanded for front and back yard use through access by sliding glass doors.

"We increased the usable space by the lot-line construction, improving access to rear areas for swimming pools, tearhouses or whatever."

"And we have architectural unity, with better street elevation for the neighborhood, a departure from the single-family residences as we understand them today and where homes sit squarely in the middle of the lots."

A few of the characteristics are so different at Oceanwood that Armour went to great legal lengths to apply for trademark protection on their architectural applications.

"We think these unusual innovations should be exclusive to the buyers of these homes," he said, "and this is why we want to give trademark protection where we can."

The four models are open from 10 a.m. to dusk.

Independent Phone Companies Look To L.B. Electronics Firm for Help

By ROBERT BECKMAN
Progress Editor

Independent telephone companies across the country are more familiar with a growing Long Beach firm than are Southlanders.

There's a good reason.

Services performed by San-Bar Electronics Corporation, 3150 E. 29th St., is of direct benefit to the phone companies and of indirect — but important — benefit to their subscribers.

The service: rehabilitation and modernization of telephones that otherwise would have to be scrapped.

HEAD OF this unique firm, which began operation in Anaheim in 1962, is Barry Hallamore who hasn't yet celebrated his 29th birthday.

Hallamore, well remembered by Long Beach area sports fans for his play with the state champion basketball team from Long Beach City College nearly a decade ago, opened his company on April 1, 1962.

"For a while," he laughs, "I thought opening a business on April Fool's Day was a mistake."

He had three employees and an idea.

THE IDEA was to help phone companies save millions of dollars annually by avoiding abandonment of broken phones or expensive repair departments that would not be in operation fulltime.

"I proved to them," Hallamore adds, "my company could completely recondition a phone — actually make it look and operate like new — for about one-third the cost of a new piece of equipment."

Hallamore, acting as his own salesman, began to draw business and soon his small plant was repairing 1,000 units a month.

"We were not only repairing those pieces," he explains, "but actually updating them with more modern parts."

THE ORDERS continued to flood into his Anaheim plant—from Northern California, desert communities and, finally, from nities and, finally, from outstate.

Two and a half years ago, Hallamore purchased four acres on 29th St., a part of the Long Beach Airport Industrial Park, and erected a modern 12,000-square-foot plant.

Shortly after moving his operation to Long Beach, Hallamore incorporated the company (the San-Bar name is derived from Sandra, his sister and part owner, and his own first name).

More independent phone companies, hearing of San-Bar's quick and efficient work, sent in repair orders.

SOME CAME from as far as Texas, and Tallamore soon opened a subsidiary company in Dallas.

At last count, the company plants together were averaging 100,000 units repaired annually.

The tall, still athletic-looking Hallamore isn't through yet.

"Right now," he confides, "I'm thinking strongly of opening another repair plant in the East, perhaps in Tennessee."

There are an estimated 2,200 independent phone companies in the United States. Hallamore's crew does work for 200 of them and more are considering his service.

EACH TELEPHONE is completely disassembled, its parts checked and faulty and outmoded parts replaced.

The components are immersed in a sanitizing bath and polished to like-new luster.

The assembled units then are inserted in a plastic jacket and boxed, just as new factory units are prepared for shipment.

"Every 20 minutes a unit comes off our assembly line," Hallamore says. "At most, the turnaround time on large orders is two weeks."

PROOF OF the firm's growth is the two-plant employee list, now 20 times larger than that in Anaheim days.

There's more in Hallamore's future planning.

"We're going into production of items of our own — amplifiers, finger wheels and a new line of switching equipment needed in direct dialing."

Give Second Thought to Home-Buying Procrastination

By KEN CHILCOTE
Business Editor

So you are putting off purchasing a new home until interest rates come down? Forget it. Maybe, pal, all you will see in your lifetime will be increasing rates for interest as tight money grows tighter.

An individual's financial condition, naturally, will govern a family's decision. So will his needs and financial prospects. But if you really are in the market for a new home and are just waiting for interest rates to tumble, you better give it a second thought.

"The American economy is likely to remain in a period of tight money for a long time to come and there is little likelihood mortgage rates are going to decline appreciably in the foreseeable future," says Norman Strunk, executive vice president of the United States Savings and Loan League.

"If there should be some reduction in mortgage rates," Strunk continued, "whatever savings that could result would likely be more than offset by other increases in housing and related costs."

WHILE THERE HAVE BEEN claims of housing shortages for two years or more, there has been no real acute shortage in this area. There are many who would like to upgrade their housing but they as a rule are waiting for a decline in costs.

There has been a decline in single-family housing starts over the nation for nearly 10 years. In 1959 there were 1.2 million single-family non-farm homes constructed nationwide. In 1960 there were 987,000 and by 1966 the figure had declined to 756,000 with a further decline probable when 1967 figures are compiled.

As the supply of single family homes shrinks, there will be an inevitable increase in prices.

When and if the Vietnam war ends, peace will bring a demand for homes possibly greater than the end of World War II did. Younger troops have been sent into this and they may have been kids when they went off to training but they will be real men when they return, ready for marriage and a home.

MANY HOMEBUYERS FAIL TO REALIZE that there are three factors to be considered in the cost of a home: men, money and materials.

Men: The most important factor in the construction cost picture. Labor, from a simple handyman to skilled artisans such as bricklayers and carpenters, all have been given wage increases since the housing boom slumped.

Money: When mortgage lending funds are plentiful rates naturally tend to inch downward. But when they are scarce, such as in 1966, they soar. Over the next decade we can expect a big demand for loanable money including mortgage funds.

Materials: There has been a continual upward drift in many material prices, especially in the past two years.

There also has been an increase in the home equipment field. And the range and refrigerator are considered as much a part of a new home as the foundation and roof.

"WHAT LIES AHEAD for both the economy and the building industry" asks Strunk. "Costs have only one way to go — up."

"Delaying purchase of a home until things go down is a mistake — a costly mistake," continued Strunk. And it may deprive you of the home you want.

"Natural economic forces keep pushing home prices upward and there is little reason to believe there will be a change for quite a few years. The only solution for the prospective homebuyer would seem to be buy now."

WAYS AND MEANS of stabilizing the mortgage finance market are being explored by mortgage bankers in a series of confabs being held across the nation.

The current 7 per cent interest on home loans seems like a dream to us who recall the 4 or 4½ per cent mortgage loans were drawing not too many years ago.

Today's homes are carrying a 30 to 35 year financing program. Under the spiraling fiscal policies now prevalent, would you as an investor, care to tie up your money for 30 years at 7 per cent? That is the problem. We have seen investments in mortgages jump from 4 to 7 per cent in a few years. Who knows what the returns could be 30 years from now?

UNITED AIRLINES WILL OFFER all-jet freighter service beginning Feb. 1. The last of the company's piston cargo planes will be retired on that date. Boeing 727QC (quick change) will take over the freight hauling task. Those jets will be flown as passenger-cargo jets by day and will be converted to all-cargo haulers by night.

ARRIVAL OF THE QUEEN MARY in Long Beach saw a record set on the Vincent Thomas Bridge crossing the Los Angeles harbor. Dec. 9, Queen Mary day, saw 18,390 vehicles using the bridge, the greatest single day of traffic for the span. The bridge toll keepers reported 430,805 vehicles crossed the bridge in December, up 12.5 per cent of the total traffic in December 1966. Traffic over state-owned toll bridges for last December was 8,081,991, an increase of 5.6 per cent.

As usual, traffic on the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge was greater than on the six other State-owned toll bridges combined, with a 4,518,853 count.

BRIGHT BUSINESS FUTURE is seen by Willard H. Sahloff, vice president of General Electric Co. A growth spiral accelerated by a combination product innovations and increasing customer affluence will carry the electric housewares industry to more than double today's volume by 1980, he believes.

The population of the United States is expected to reach 233 million by 1980, a 16 per cent increase, Sahloff believes. And by that year, the proportion of U.S. households with an annual income of more than $10,000 will have grown to two-thirds as compared with only one-fifth today.

These families are looked upon by the General Electric housewares division to provide a big market for new products.

CONTINUAL GROWTH in the number of mobile home parks in California is noted by the Trailer Coach Association. There was an increase of 197 mobile home parks in California last year representing 14,032 new spaces available to mobile home owners. Los Angeles County led with 78 new parks. San Bernardino County noted 28 new parks for the year.

The 1967 increase brings to 4,680 the number of mobile home parks in the State, representing 211,133 spaces for mobile dwellings. With an average of 2.4 people now living in each mobile home, the State's mobile home passengers now numbers about 500,000.

VETERANS ARE BEING "requested" in some cases to make a side deal when buying a home, reports Mort Webster, manager of the VA's Southern California regional office.

"There have been some cases recently in which veterans have been requested or even required to purchase items of furniture or other merchandise," said Webster. These are paid for in cash and not from the proceeds of the loan guaranteed by the VA.

"In some cases these items have been so overpriced as to constitute additional consideration for the purchase of the home."

When the seller and purchaser have entered into a "side arrangement" or a "tie-in sale" to avoid the GI statutory requirement that the purchase price of a home shall not be in excess of a reasonable value established by the VA appraisal, the VA is required to investigate the matter thoroughly.

In cases where a side deal or tie-in sale appears involved, details must be revealed to the VA, which reserves the right to inspect and appraise items involved before approving a loan," Webster added.

HERE AND THERE — William Harrah, owner of casinos at Reno and Lake Tahoe, will build a 24-story hotel in downtown Reno, beginning Feb. 1. It will be the tallest in the city and will have 342 rentable rooms. Thrifty Drug Stores sales for the first quarter of fiscal 1968, which ended Nov. 30, 1967, were $61,838,000 compared with $57,744,000 for the same period last year, Leonard H. Straus, president, reported.

Retail spending on recreational boating in 1967 topped the $3 billion mark for the first time in history. Boat manufacturers estimated that 41,375,000 went boating more than twice last year utilizing 8,275,000 craft of all types. It was estimated that 6,904,000 outboard motors were used, 671,500 inboard powerplants and 3,560,000 boat trailers were in use. Outboard motor sales reached 444,000 units, the highest since 1961.

L.A. County Land Tax Sale Feb. 19

Approximately 375 parcels of Los Angeles County real estate will go on the auction block beginning at 10 a.m., Feb. 19, and the auctioneer's hammer will continue to fall from day to day until all properties are sold.

MAXINE HAMRA LEADS DECEMBER SALES AT SPARROW REALTY

While real estate sales in general are slow in December it didn't slow down Maxine Hamra who proceeded to sell three properties as well as having one of her listings sell.

Maxine came to Long Beach in 1960 after selling the Hamra's Department Store near St. Louis, Mo., which was founded in 1921 and which she managed since 1946. She immediately entered real estate and has been active in the Long Beach-Lakeview area for the past 7 years.

In receiving the December award Maxine said, "The services provided by Sparrow Realty is just like adding another day to my work week. And my buyers and sellers are so impressed with the extra service we provide through our Value Vision Show of Homes Franchise. It makes it so much easier to be a winner at Sparrow Realty."

In making the award Offie Sparrow announced that the company's annual report, soon to be published, would reflect the highest sales efficiency of any California company. He also stated interviews for sales positions would be conducted through the coming week.

The realty is being sold for non-payment of delinquent taxes by County Tax Collector Harold J. Ostly under the provisions of the Revenue and Taxation Code and with the written authorization of the State Controller.

BIDDING on all parcels starts at $10 and will be sold to the highest bidders unless previous right of redemption has been exercised.

Successful bidders must pay in full for their properties at time of the sale. Payment must be made with cash, cashier's check or certified check. Endorsed checks will not be accepted.

A complete listing of all properties is published by the Journal of Commerce & Independent Review.

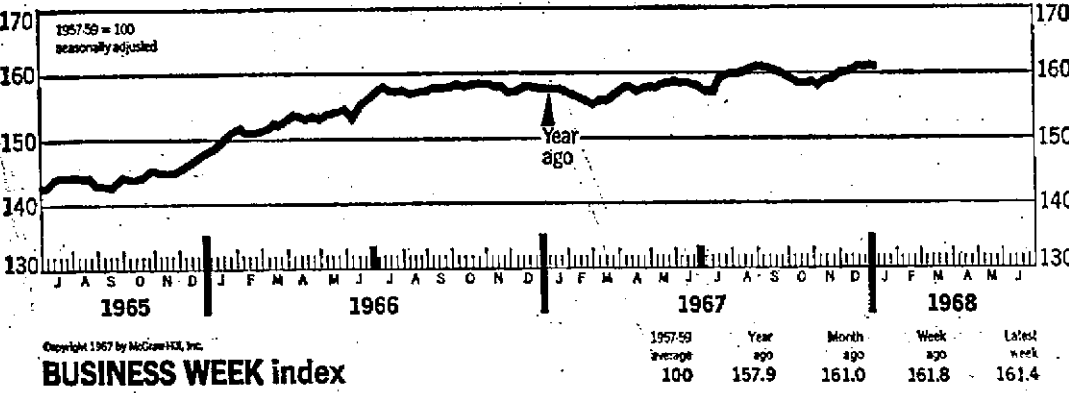

THE DAILY real estate and business newspaper with offices at 220 W. 1st St., Los Angeles 90012, provides readers with unofficial reports giving lot sizes, pin-point locations and other information not a part of legal notices.

Ostly warns prospective bidders to investigate carefully before purchasing tax sale properties. A careful ground inspection is advised. Buyers also should ascertain whether there are certain encumbrances not discharged with a tax deed.

Cold Wave Affects Index Reading

Below zero temperatures in much of the nation combined with holiday schedules to pull the Index down last week.

Auto production — after seasonal adjustment — slipped 0.3 per cent last week, but stands 9.3 per cent above the year ago level. Similarly, steel production slipped 0.4 per cent in the latest week, yet stands 11.4 per cent above a year ago.

Steel orders are coming in stronger and earlier than expected, as customers prepare themselves for a possible 1968 steel strike.

Paperboard production reflected a return to normalcy after the highly accelerated production levels scheduled to fill holiday orders. Output fell 5.1 per cent last week.

The energy components offset each other in the current week, as electric power output rose 2.2 per cent and crude oil refinery runs inched down 0.4 per cent.

Both carloading components turned up this week. Miscellaneous carloadings rose 8.1 per cent and all other carloadings rose 11.5 per cent — both after seasonal adjustment.

According to the Association of American Railroads, rail freight traffic volume fell slightly in 1967, reflecting a production lag in the general economy.

Rancho California Industrial Park Gets First Tenant

Construction began last week on the first light industrial building in the new 40-acre Industrial Park section of Rancho California, the $7,500 acre land development in southwest Riverside County.

Rigoberto Diaz, owner of Ardee Machine and Design Company of El Monte, officiated at groundbreaking ceremonies at the firm's new 25,000-square-foot building.

HE WAS joined by Rancho California executives headed by Robert L. Unger, vice president and general manager, and Riverside county officials, including Floyd McCall, chairman of the county department of development.

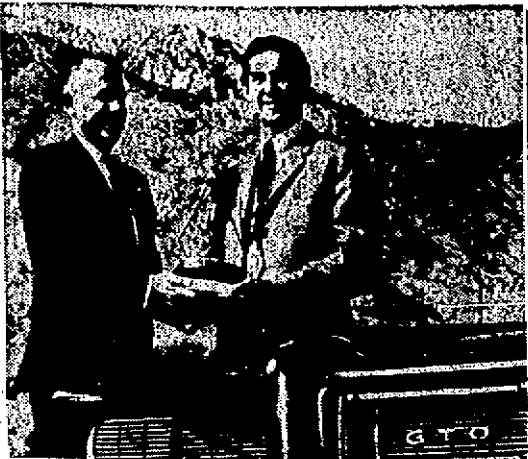

Ardee, which manufactures aircraft components under contract to major aircraft companies, is building its new location on a five-acre site in the new Industrial Park which is located on Highway 395 adjacent to the Rancho California airstrip.

PONTIAC GTO... Car Of Year

WORLD OF WHEELS

By ART STEPHAN
Auto Editor

Pontiac Motor Division has received the Motor Trend Car of the Year Award for its 1968 GTO.

The announcement was made by Motor Trend Publisher Walter A. Woron it marked the fourth time in eight years Pontiac has won the award — a feat accomplished by no other auto manufacturer.

In presenting the Golden Calipers trophy to John Z. DeLorean, a General Motors vice president and Pontiac's general manager, Woron said, "Pontiac has established new design standards and supplied the entire industry with a method for accomplishing them."

"NEVER BEFORE has an automobile been so successful in confirming the correlations between safety, styling and performance as the 1968 GTO," Woron added.

"Not only does the GTO continue to establish the class standard in the fifth year of its existence, but it also represents a unique and revolutionary engineering-styling function," Woron said.

He added that Pontiac is also being recognized for an innovation that integrates the industry's first rubber-like bumper with the overall body design.

MOTOR TREND termed the GTO's bouncy bumper "the most significant achievement in materials technology in contemporary automotive engineering."

Upon accepting the Car of the Year Award, DeLorean said:

"All of us in the industry are aware of the extensive testing and evaluation which precedes the selection of the Car of the Year and we regard the winning of this award as a vote of confidence that we are building the best cars possible," DeLorean stated.

IN TRACING THE HISTORY of the GTO, DeLorean noted that Pontiac in 1964 became the first passenger-car manufacturer to build an exciting sports-type car that the man in the street could afford.

He pointed out that in its first sales year 32,000 GTO's were sold, making it the best selling first-year car that Pontiac had ever had. GTO sales this year are estimated to exceed 100,000.

Pontiac first won the Car of the Year Award in 1959 for its wide-track; the second time was in 1961 for the Tempest and the third award was presented to the 1965 Pontiac for styling and engineering leadership.

Bluffs Homes Move

Into the second official week of the grand opening, the newest unit of George M. Holstein and Sons Bluffs community above Upper Newport Bay could be on the way to setting sales records at the popular site, the pioneer building company reported.

Over one-half of the Mediterranean styled homes have already been sold with buyers acting quickly for the choice sites on the bay or along the Bluff park.

PRICED FROM $33,000, the three and four-bedroom homes are available in both one and two story plans and give the buyer the security and investment potential of the protected Bluffs community along with good terms and reasonable occupancy dates, the developers pointed out.

The Bluffs is located along 20 acres of private park and is adjacent to the new Upper Bay project as well as the new Newport Beach Tennis Club, Eastbluff shopping center, schools, churches and a new pre-school for the youngsters.

Starting right now, forget everything you ever heard about true California living.

THE WEEK'S PATENTS

Production of Steel Speeded With New, Scale-Free Heating

New York Times Service

An industrialist who doubles as inventor was granted a patent last week for a process that promises substantial savings for the steel industry.

Frederic O. Hess, president of the Selas Corp. of America, Dresher, Pa., has developed a method for the scale-free heating of steel and steel alloys. It is said to eliminate much reworking and remelting.

The patent explains that ordinarily when steel billets are heated for rolling, the surface becomes heavily oxidized, or covered with scale that must be removed. This increases the duration of heating, means the loss of metal and often requires scrapping.

THE SELAS Corp. and certain of its licensees, including United States Steel Corp., already are using the process. According to a Selas spokesman, it has enabled one company to increase its net production of steel slabs by more than half.

The patent explains that the metal is heated with a mixture of natural gas and air (with which theoretically perfect combustion is obtained).

BESIDES steel, the scale-free process is said to be useful with copper and other metals.

This week's patent is the 105th in which Hess has been sole or coinventor. As chairman of the Patents Committee of the National Association of Manufacturers, he recently attended a meeting in Geneva, called to discuss a proposed treaty designed to simplify international patenting.

The Selas Corp. makes heating equipment and designs processes for the steel, oil, glass, paper and other industries.

A mechanical hand that was patented last week is described as capable not only of grasping things but of playing the piano, throwing a ball, typing and sewing.

Joseph A. Gentiluomo, a Schenectady, N.Y. engineer, lists the hand movement as thumb pivot, thumb curl, finger pivot, finger curl and wrist pivot.

The device is intended for prostheses, to replace the natural hand, or for operation under remote control in space and in radioactive and otherwise dangerous areas.

IF THE hand is attached to a forearm, the inventor says, "thought control" may be applied through impulses that are amplified electronically. The amputee need use only mental concentration.

Gentiluomo heads his own company, Genco, which engages in special purpose mechanization development. He has other patents pending on artificial arms.

A naval reserve captain has invented equipment with which a tug can attach itself to a ship by suction. Besides getting rid of towing lines, the method produces fast maneuvering.

Capt. Tad Stanwich of Washington was granted a patent, assigning it to his company, the Stanwick Corp., which develops marine engineering systems.

At the end of a boom, the tug has what the inventor calls a suctional attachment. This is a large suction cup that grips the ship's side.

A PUMP on the boom maintains the vacuum, and gets its electric power through an outlet in the ship's hull. Control switches may be mounted on the ship as well as on the tug.

A modified form described in the patent has a fuel conduit through which the tug or other supply vessel can refuel a ship at sea.

Metal Whitener

A small amount of nickel is used as an alloy element to whiten metals such as copper and gold.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Wright Investors' Service feels the last week of trading provided what could be the pattern for the remainder of the year. The company feels the trend has switched from the glamor stocks, which dominated in 1967, to the more "defensive" issues, including the blue chips which have been undervalued for some time.

Stanley Heller & Co. has a similar view and feels for the next few months the market will continue to reflect interest in the quality stocks. "At the expense of some of the more volatile securities which already have appreciated substantially in the past year."

Hayden, Stone Inc. believes the Dow Jones averages and some of the growth and glamor stocks apparently have "approached temporarily over-extended position." But the company feels no major top has been reached by the market and it does not advise general selling now.

DETROIT (UPI)—Chrysler Corp. has begun producing ceramic magnets for use in windshield wiper motors at an Ohio plant. The company said it is studying the possibility of using the ceramic magnets in motors to power windows, heater fans, air conditioners and power seat adjusters for cars.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — August A. Busch Jr., chairman of Anheuser-Busch, Inc., announced his company has optioned 294 acres of land at Merrimack, N.H., for the site of a new brewery. Busch construction will start in 1969.

The proposed brewery would have a capacity of 1.7 million barrels a year and would cost $40 million.

NEW YORK (UPI)—Mesa Division of Dynamics Corp. of America has obtained a $500,000 Navy contract to provide cable assemblies for advanced anti-submarine warfare devices.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (UPI) — Sylvania Electric Products Division of General Telephone & Electronics Corp. has obtained a $4.6 million Army contract for secret research and development work.

NEW YORK (UPI)—The New York metropolitan area now is served by 430,000 trucks that haul 206 million tons of freight in three million trips a year, the Tri-State Transport Commission reported. The commission said its study was the first comprehensive survey of truck transportation ever made for the metropolitan area.

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Dines Letter regards the current stock market as in "reasonably close balance" and says it could tilt either way. The analysts suggests that with "more dynamic" opportunities for investors ahead, it favors retention of cash reserves for the moment, with less concentration on the market itself and more on some of the cross currents.

Shearson, Hammill & Co. says that barring a breakthrough in the Vietnam situation, the market seems likely to be directionless enough so that investors will be "forced to work and think very hard if they wish to make money as rapidly as they did in 1967. It says it believes that the stocks to concentrate on are those which qualify, in one way or another, as special situations.

E. F. Hutton & Co. says all technical interpretations of the market recently have been made on the assumption that the Vietnam conflict will continue over the foreseeable future. The company says any definitive move toward peace probably would be regarded as bullish since it would point the way to some relief from current monetary and fiscal stresses and strains.

Dow Jones Industrials Going Up

Special to the Progress Section

This may be the year the Dow Jones Industrial Average finally cracks the "magic" 1000 mark.

That is the collective judgment of nearly 75 business and financial writers polled by the nationwide investment firm of Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis in its second annual market forecast survey.

While the writers' forecasts cover a wide range, the "consensus" (median) is for the DJIA to hit a high of 1,001.43, a low of 828.75, and close the year at 960.

OF THE 74 editors who responded to the survey, 39 predicted that the closely followed market index would break the 1,000 barrier. By way of contrast, only 5 of the 46 writers responding to the 1967 survey forecast that the market would breach the 1,000 barrier.

The highest forecast this year was 1,236.89. Fourteen of the newsmen forecast that the index would close out 1968 above the 1,000 level, with nine predicting a year-end close of 1,170.00. The all-time high for the DJIA is 995.15, set on Feb. 9, 1966.

REFLECTING the wide range of opinions, one writer looks for the market to touch a low of 650 during the year. The lowest end of the year forecast is for a close of 833.75.

However, 53 of the 74 felt that the market would close out 1968 above the 1967 windup figure of 905.11. The high water mark for last year (on an end of day basis) was 943.08, while the low point was 786.41.

In Paine, Webber's 1967 forecast, the consensus was for a high of 890, a low of 775, and a close of 855.

New Paint Resists Crayons, Grease, Lipstick

NOTE: Richard N. Thunes is public service director for the American Building Contractors Association and Western Regional Home Improvement Council.

By RICHARD THUNES

Mrs. H.J.K. has a common problem: "My children are constantly marking our walls with crayons," she writes, "and I cannot remove these unsightly marks from the wall paint. What do you suggest that will enable me to keep these walls clean?"

A new paint job is first in order. That will cover up the old marks of crayon and whatever. But instead of using a plain paint, put on a completely new paint — a two-component polyester-epoxy.

This is a paint that will outlast the best conventional enamel paints from three to five times. It has such a hard surface that it is compared to tile.

IT RESISTS crayons, lo-dine, lipstick, fingernail polish, liquor, hot bacon grease, raspberry jam and a host of other impossible-to-remove stains.

Most stains can be removed with a damp cloth and detergent. Some harsh stains will require the use of an abrasive soap. But neither will damage the finish of this new paint.

The new two-component polyester-epoxy paint combines the best properties of both the polyester and epoxy paints.

The paint is mixed from two different containers right on the job.

OLDER versions of this paint had an objectionable odor, but the new paint does not.

It can be applied over plaster, drywall, concrete or over old paint that is tight and in good condition, using brush, roller or spray equipment.

There are 38 colors plus white in gloss, semi-gloss and semi-flat. There is also a clear finish used for kitchen cupboards and other such applications. This finish comes in a high-gloss and a low-gloss quality.

Usually in this product is that the semi-flat finish provides exactly the same degree of wear and stain resistance as the glossy finish.

FORTUNATELY for the housewife, this product has been tested in industry through use in print shops, dairies, restaurants, food processing plants and bottling plants. It has also been used in hospitals, schools and offices.

This is truly a remarkable coating — a real "breakthrough" in the paint industry.

QUESTION: We have converted a small porch into an enclosed entry hall. My wife wants to carpet the entire hall, and I feel that perhaps a slate area, about three feet square at the door, would be better. What is your suggestion?

ANSWER: Carpet the hall. A small slate slab will not prevent water and mud from being tracked in, and your entry is reasonably protected, put indoor carpet outside.

Trashless Dam

The Oroville Dam in California, highest in the United States, uses a specially engineered trash-rack system to prevent logs and debris from entering its powerplant turbines. Designed entirely from more than 700,000 pounds of nickel stainless steel, the trash-racks stretch over 70,000 square feet.

Diverse Divers

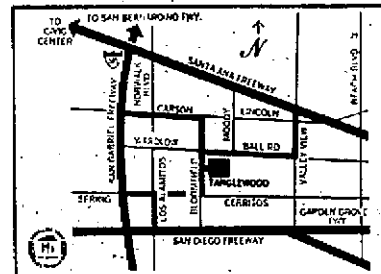

Deepsea divers, operating hundreds of miles from the nearest sea, were important to the success of a mining operation in Northern Manitoba. The divers plunged into 60 feet of swampy water to help sink a mine shaft being developed for International Nickel.

REALLY ROLLIN' IN TENNESSEE

Facial tissue in half-ton rolls feeds this automatic folding machine at Kimberly-Clark Corporation's Memphis, Tenn., mill. Tissue products are fastest growing segment of paper industry and U.S. consumption of such products will reach 3.3 million tons in 1968, company reports. Total consumption was less than half that just 20 years ago.

Huntington Beach Tops

The city of Huntington Beach, for the seventh consecutive year, led Orange County in subdivision development during 1967, according to statistics compiled by the plant services department of First American Title Insurance & Trust Co., Santa Ana.

During 1967, a total of 24 tracts containing 1,581 lots in 333,475 acres was recorded in the beach city. As runner-up, the Mission Viejo-La Paz area had 12 subdivisions comprising 997 lots in 281,869 acres.

SUBDIVISION building activity decreased slightly last year from 1966, when a sharp decline was registered from the previous year.

The 1967 totals included 147 subdivisions containing 8,021 lots in 2,251,779 acres. This compares with 138 tracts having 8,413 lots in 2,407,484 acres developed in 1966.

NAMED

Dr. William F. Ballhaus, president of Beckman Instruments, Inc., Fullerton, has been named honorary chairman of Orange County's Engineers Week banquet Thursday, Feb. 22, at Santa Ana Elks Club.

Three Road Signal Jobs in Award

Three small road-signal projects have been awarded by Orange County Supervisors.

Traffic controls and intersection improvement at Sand Canyon Avenue and Trabuco Road, near the Santa Ana Marine Corps Air Station, will be done by Sully-Miller Co. for $21,998.

WORK ON La Paz Road and San Diego Freeway will cost $16,444, and will be done by Industrial Contracting Co.

The R.J. Noble Co. got contract for $5,118.20 for improvements near Whittier Boulevard and Hacienda Road, La Habra.

ELEVATED

Raymond L. Watson, a vice president of Irvine Company's land development division since 1966, has been elevated to position of senior vice president. Watson lives in Newport Beach.

Coinage Metal

Nickel's gleaming appearance and ability to take a hard surface finish are among the main reasons for the metal's popularity as a practical coinage material.

Cerritos Offers Courses

A complete real estate education program will be offered by Cerritos College during the spring semester, beginning Feb. 5.

The program provides preparatory training for those people interested in entering the profession and a program designed for those persons already in real estate who wish to upgrade themselves or prepare for license renewals.

THREE distinct educational programs are designed to fill these needs: Business — Real Estate, leading to an Associate in Arts Degree; Business Management — Real Estate, leading to an Associate in Arts Degree, and a Certificate Program, leading to a California Real Estate Certificate.

In addition, advance real estate seminars are offered periodically as part of the Cerritos Community Services program.

While in Long Beach he consulted with directors of the chapter and reviewed the operating procedures and activities of the chapter.

RETREAT AREA IS SPACIOUS . . . In College Park Home

Roominess of College Park Homes Attractive to Buyer

The "average family" might be growing smaller, statistically, but that it demands plenty of elbow room is proved by sales of the largest floor plan available at College Park in Seal Beach, according to Jerry Henderson, marketing and sales director for S&S Construction Co.

The four-bedroom floor plan, which can be changed to a six-bedroom home later, thanks to a bonus room of generous proportions, was the leading choice of the first 14 buyers this year, Henderson reports.

"Even though we just opened a new unit, this particular floor plan might end up on a buyers' waiting list. For good balance of neighborhood appearance, to maintain a custom-built look, we can build only a limited number of each model in a unit. When this floor plan is sold out in this unit, buyers will have to wait until we begin another, which may be several months."

EIGHT COMPLETELY new models are on display. Prospective buyers are invited to inspect these and at the same time verify the quality and workmanship going into the homes under construction.

The homes offered are of three, four, five and six bedrooms, in one-story, two-story and tri-level designs. Activity areas are given special attention by College Park designers. Wet bars in family rooms are arranged as ideal "conversation centers"; flower-fresh kitchens have garden-patio service windows to combine indoor outdoor entertaining; probably the most extensive selection of fireplace designs permits the buyer to choose the desired degree of formality.

PRICED FROM $25,950, the homes are offered on VA, FHA and conventional terms.

To inspect College Park, take San Diego-Garden Grove Freeways east to Valley View Street turnoff, go north on Valley View to Cerulean, then left.

Construction Begins on Third Unit of Chateau Blanc Homes

Construction of Chateau Blanc Family Townhomes' unit No. 3 is now under-way, reports Pat Madden, sales manager of the Trans-

IN CHARGE

Donald R. McBride, associated with BankAmericard since its inception, has been named president of BankAmericard Service Corporation, the organization which licenses banks to issue BankAmericards.

Robles Corp. builders and developers.

"Unit No. 3 will consist entirely of two and three-bedroom, two and three-bath homes with all units having 420 square foot bonus rooms. It is anticipated that the selling price of the homes will be in the mid $20,000 range, with exact prices impossible to ascertain at this time," Madden continued.

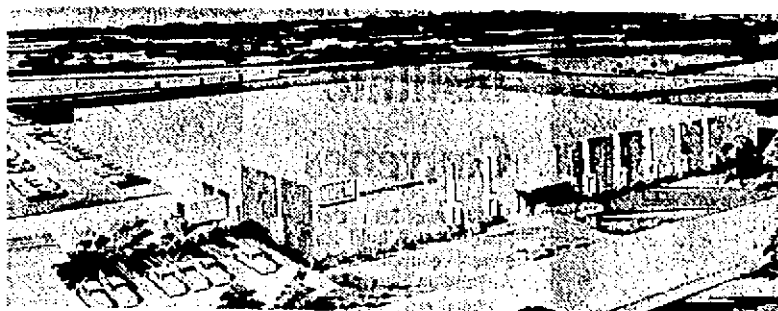

"The new construction here at Chateau Blanc will bring the total number of homes built to over 100. We have only a few homes left in the second unit and are now accepting orders for homes in the third. New modern-than-tomorrow features will be standard in unit No. 3, such as the "working wall" with built-in electric carving knife, can opener and heavy duty mixer and gas-fired freestanding barbecues in each patio," Madden continued.

THE ONE to three-bedroom, one to three-bath homes are priced from $17,995 to $24,750.

Residents of Chateau Blanc currently enjoy the area's most extensive recreational facility: pool and wading pool; 3,010 sq. ft. clubhouse with dance floor, bandstand, massive stone fireplace, billiard and card rooms, complete kitchen and sauna baths for men and women; tennis, volleyball and shuffleboard courts, picnic areas with barbeque stands and a "space age" children's playground.

From the Long Beach area: take the San Diego Freeway south to Brookhurst St., turn south on Brookhurst about a mile to the Chateau Blanc model homes open from 10 to dusk daily.

SPIRAL STAIRS... Reflected In Mirror

WORLD OF WINGS

By LEE CRAIG

Orange County Airport will have a new schedule of fees for landings, tie-downs and fueling, beginning Feb. 1.

County supervisors, feeling strongly that the airport should come a little closer to paying its own way, plan to institute charges that will be about double the present one.

For a few examples, daily tie-downs will range from $1.50 to $7; fuel flowage fees will be two cents a gallon and an extra charge of 5 cents a gallon for oil will be made. Small craft will pay a landing fee of $2.50 per month. Twins and four-engine planes will be billed $150 a month for space on the field.

SUPERVISORS ALSO HAVE GIVEN notice that the fee schedules may be further increased withing the next few months because, they said, they intend to ease the charges up gradually, then update them annually.

It will be interesting to see the general reaction to the county's attempt to wring more revenue from the airport. Our guess is that protests will be loud, long... and ineffectual.

IMPRESSIVE ENTRY

"First impressions count," says builder William Lyon, "and that's why we designed Fairmont Place to make a strong first impression." Homes, priced from $27,990 to $35,990 with no down payment to veterans, are located in Fountain Valley in the heart of Orange County. There are just 29 homes remaining in this "limited edition series" of 128 executive residences.

No Extras to Buy for Owners of Dutch Haven Marina Homes

No options. No extras. Everything is included in the price at William Lyon's Dutch Haven Marina Homes in Huntington Beach. "These are the most complete new homes in the area," says builder Lyon, "there is absolutely nothing extra for the homebuyer to purchase. We include everything in the purchase price of $22,990 to $24,990."

At Dutch Haven Marina homes, which are built on land you own, the purchaser receives wall-to-wall carpeting, fireplace, built-in GE appliances including dishwasher, landscaping, including full-grown olive tree, shrubs and sprinklers, complete yard fencing, cement driveway and shake roof.

L.B. Realtors in Tuesday Meeting

Speaker at Tuesday's 7:30 a.m. breakfast meeting of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors will be Rex T. Westerfield, public relations-western director, John Birch Society.

Westerfield's topic, according to program chairman Ed Andrews, will be "The John Birch Society — Its Principles and Programs."

Financing plans available make it easy to purchase a home here. There is no down payment to veterans or a choice of low FHA and conventional terms.

THERE ARE FOUR different one-story models available, with a selection of 15 different exterior designs. They feature three and four bedrooms and also include the beautiful William Lyon "Terrace Kitchen," which removes the walls of conventionality.

Traditional solid walls and small window over kitchen sink and work areas have been replaced with sliding walls of glass in a gold-anodized setting. Outside there is a service counter for easy patio party serving.

Three of the four models on display daily from 10 a.m. till 9 p.m. have private baths in the owners' suite.

Dutch Haven Marina Homes are located on Edwards Street just south of Slater Avenue in Huntington Beach.

Concrete Institute Convenes

The American Concrete Institute will hold its 64th annual convention in Los Angeles on March 2-8.

Plans are underway for the week-long event at the Statler-Hilton Hotel, according to convention general chairman C. Taylor Test of Southwestern Portland Cement Co.

One of the highlights of the 1968 program will be a full-day symposium on "Legal Responsibilities of Concrete Construction," in which the professional, contractual and legal aspect of construction contracts will be discussed.

THE SYMPOSIUM will include keynote addresses by architect Robert L. Durham, FAIA, of Seattle, president of the American Institute of Architects; Fred W. Mast of Waterloo, Iowa, president-elect of the Associated General Contractors; attorney Gardiner Johnson of San Francisco, and consulting engineer Raymond C. Reese of Toledo, Ohio.

2 BofA Syndicates Buy Bonds

A Bank of America underwriting syndicate has bought two Orange County school bond issues, totaling $1,565,000.

One Bank of America syndicate purchased the $1 million Huntington Beach School District issue, paying a premium of $240 for a combination of 5, 4, 4.10 and 4.20 per cent bonds. The dollar bid was 100.024. Net interest cost to the district was 4.1967 per cent.

The bonds were reoffered to yield from 3.60 per cent to a dollar price of 100 on 4.20 per cent bonds, according to maturity Jan. 15, 1969-83.

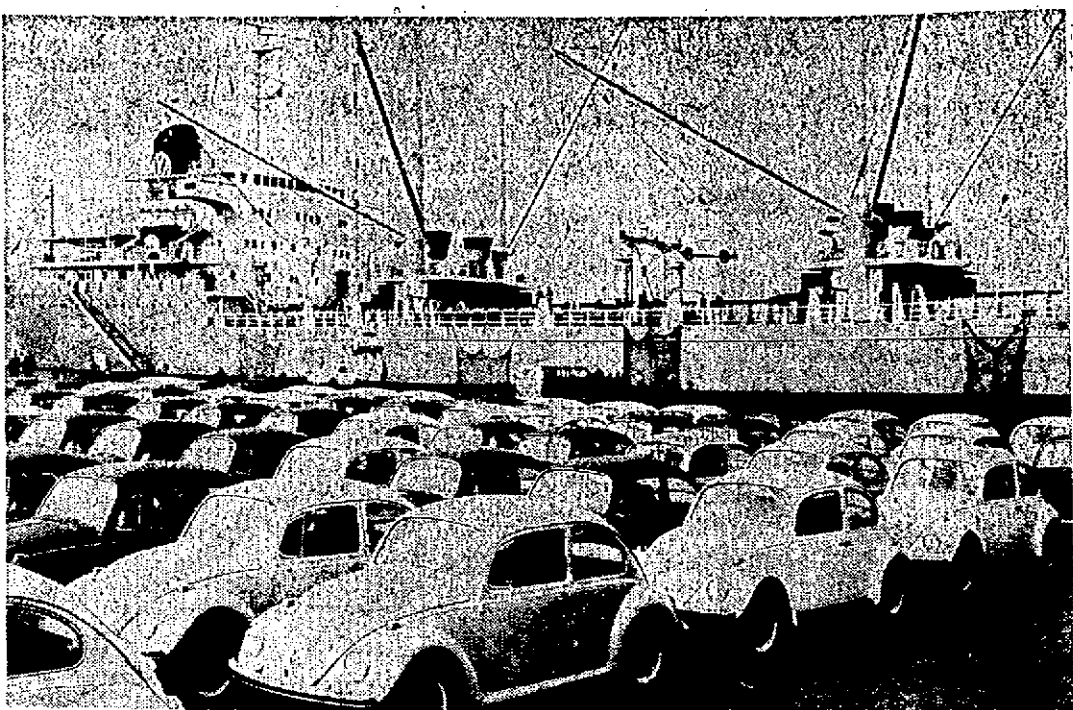

A SECOND Bank of America group bought the $565,000 Fountain Valley School District issue, paying a premium of $9 for 5 and 4.60 per cent bonds. Net interest cost to the district was 4.7053 per cent.

The bonds were reoffered to investors to yield from 4 1/4 per cent to a dollar price of 100 on 4.60 per cent bonds, according to maturity Feb. 1, 1970-83.

Nation's Shareowner Population Grows

Special to the Progress Section Robert W. Haack, president of the New York Stock Exchange, has announced that the nation's shareowner population has reached a new high of 24 million.

In disclosing the figure, Haack said the number of Americans owning stock has grown about four million since the 1965 census. The rate of growth is some six times the percentage increase in general population.

The number of stockholders has nearly doubled every eight years since 1952 when the Exchange, in the first census of shareownership, reported a total of 6.5 million.

THE GAIN of 1.3 million shareowners per year since 1965 compares with an average of about one million new investors a year between 1962 and 1965.

The Exchange said it estimates that the ratio of women stockholders to men continued to favor women by 51 per cent to 49 per cent, virtually unchanged since the Big Board's shareowner census of 1962.

The next comprehensive shareowner census, including a breakdown by geographic regions as well as analyses on shareowner income, education, occupation and other profile factors, is planned for 1970 and on a five-year schedule thereafter.

A TRANS-ROBLES CORPORATION DEVELOPMENT

This Could Be Trying Year for Business, Investors

New York Times Service

This should be another momentous year for the American economy. But it could also be a trying one — for consumers, for taxpayers, for investors and for business.

If 1967 was the year of adjustment in a seven-year sweep of expansion, 1968 may be the year of inflationary and troubled growth for a nation caught with commitments it cannot afford.

The high-soaring economy seems poised for another record this year — unless it runs aground on the shoals of continued inept fiscal and money management in Washington.

ASSUMING events unfold as most economists predict, a growth of 7 per cent — or $60-billion — is in prospect for the gross national product.

By the year-end it could be just $150-billion shy of the trillion-dollar level.

Despite the nettlesome drift in national policy last year, the economy successfully forded a turbulent stream.

It came through a difficult test in fine shape, but bears some unpleasant scars from the experience. The desire to pursue a guns-and-butter, business-as-usual policy was simply too ambitious.

CONFIDENCE over the outlook is running high in business and economic circles, though it is quite obvious the optimistic mood carries an undertone of caution and concern — more than at any time since the start of this spectacular decade.

This is an era of unparalleled prosperity, affluence and full employment, but a strange spirit of malaise is sweeping the land.

Political, economic and social challenges of supreme complexity and uncertainty have usurped the attention of the nation and overshadowed the monumental achievements of its robust economy.

War, inflation and social unrest constitute a powerful triumvirate of difficulties, but they hardly constitute the full panorama of the nation's problems.

LEADING the list are two main issues: prices, which increased about 3 per cent last year in their largest jump since the 3.7 per cent rise in 1956, and the deepening deficit in the balance of payments, a deficit that was heading toward the perilous total of $4-billion as 1967 ended.

Equally important is the effort to preserve the integrity of the nation's currency, to promote stability in the economy, to achieve more harmonious relations between business and labor and to provide leadership for aiding the less-privileged peoples of the world.

MORE THAN anything else, though, the American people are restive under the yoke of a costly and unpopular war in Southeast Asia and the inexorable rise in living costs at home.

Frustrations, anger and anxiety are everywhere — among thousands of students protesting on their campuses, Negroes demonstrating in their ghettos, hippies escaping to their psychedelic lairs, housewives depressed by rising prices, farmers reacting against tumbling prices for their produce and city dwellers manifesting concern over crime and violence in the streets.

If Washington addresses itself to these mammoth issues as resolutely as the administration moved to correct the adverse payments situation a week ago, there would be less cause for alarm.

BEFORE many weeks go by, the White House and Congress will have to demonstrate their responsibility by adopting the meaningful measures of restraint they dodged so distressingly in 1967.

A combination of sizable reductions in federal spending and significant increases in taxes — perhaps in excess of the 10 per cent surcharge advocated by summer — are vitally needed to put the nation's financial house in order.

The year 1968, also will be one of decision for businesses determined to cope with problems of rising costs, declining productivity, narrowing profitability and increasing competitiveness in world markets.

It will be a testing period as well for that segment of the business world eager to shoulder greater and broader responsibilities of a social nature.

The consumer, who traditionally accounts for some two-thirds of the nation's expenditures on the goods and services it produces, also will be watched closely again this year.

In 1967, the consumer, showing his concern about war, inflation and taxes, recoiled for a while and built up his savings inordinately, rather than pump his usual percentage into the purchase of goods and services.

Consumer savings expanded to 7 per cent of disposable personal income in the early months of 1967, against a typical rate of 5.5 per cent. In effect, this cut retail sales by some $7.5 billion.

This cutback, together with restraint in business capital spending and a drastic $18.5 billion reduction in inventory buying, caused a minirecession last spring in the private sector of the economy.

But, in the second half of last year, the self-restraint vanished — and the consumer again played his dominant role as the major propellant in the economy's surge.

The expectation is that consumers will resume their historic buying patterns — spending about 60 cents of every dollar from their record, personal income — unless the increasing tax burden induces a new mood of caution.

Taxes went up more in fiscal 1967 than at any other year in the nation's history. Federal tax collections from all sources in the fiscal year ended last June 30 touched $148.3 billion — up a stunning $19.4 billion from fiscal 1966.

And that's not all. State and local governments were busy raking in a record $60.7 billion in sales taxes and other levies during the last fiscal year, almost $4 billion more than they collected in the fiscal 1966 period.

PORTS O' PROGRESS

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Marine Editor

Officials of a newly formed multi-company combine are expected to reveal by midweek the purchase of one of the harbor area's oldest shipyards.

Executives of both the shipyard and the purchasing combine have kept details of the deal hush-hush pending close of escrow Tuesday and Wednesday.

W. TED JOHNSON, vice president of the International Division of the United California Bank, has been named chairman of World Trade week for 1968 in an announcement by Robert F. Holbrook, chairman of the Los Angeles Area Chamber of Commerce's World Trade Week executive committee.

Johnson also was recently elected president of the Foreign Trade Association of Southern California.

The 1968 WTW observance, the 42nd sponsored by the chamber will emphasize the importance of trade development.

THE SS PRESIDENT TAFT, third of American President Lines' fast new Seamaster class freighters, broke all speed records on the ship's recent run between Panama to the Port of Los Angeles.

Her captain, R. F. Fraser, reported an average of 24.89 knots during the 120-hour, 29-minute voyage.

Previous record for the run between Balboa, C. Z., to Los Angeles Harbor was well over six days.

APL took delivery of the Taft on Dec. 15 at Pascagoula, Miss.

The company is currently engaged in a $64 million ship replacement program. The program will be completed this year, claim company officials, with the delivery of the Presidents McKinley and Fillmore.

PORT OF LOS ANGELES will sponsor a booth in the Los Angeles Boat show to be held in the Pan Pacific Auditorium beginning Jan. 26.

On display will be a rendering of the proposed small boat marina at Cabrillo Beach.

A special booklet suggesting safe small boat handling practices for boaters using the port facilities is currently being printed for distribution at the show.

In addition the booklet will list various small boat facilities available in the sprawling port.

Vented rechargeable nickel-cadmium batteries can be charged and operated effectively at temperatures ranging from 65 degrees F. below zero to those near the boiling point of water.

More Nickel

To help meet the world's growing demand for nickel — up by 70 per cent in the last four years — International Nickel is spending more than $100 million in Canada for new mine and plant development in 1967.

PRODUCTION JUMP OF 400 PER CENT SEEN

Supersonic Transport Will Need Heat-Resisting Titanium

New York Times Service

If all goes well, one day a couple of years from now a test pilot will ease the throttle controls of America's first supersonic transport aircraft to a point that will thrust the machine through the sound barrier and beyond to a speed of nearly 2,000 miles an hour.

The air rushing over the aircraft's skin will cause the metal to rise in temperature to about 450 degrees Fahrenheit. Aluminum — the metal used for aircraft skins — would begin to lose strength at about 250 degrees, but the supersonic transport will have an airframe composed about 80 per cent of titanium, which retains its strength at three times the temperatures encountered in supersonic flight.

The advent of extremely high-speed aircraft and the proliferation of space vehicles is expected to lead to sharply increased use of titanium, which is expensive but unmatched in certain characteristics desired by the aerospace industry.

TITANIUM metal is difficult to extract from its ores, but Reactive Metals, Inc., which is 50 per cent owned by the United States Steel Corporation, and the Titanium Metals Corporation of America, 50 per cent owned by the Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corporation, as well as other producers, have solved most of the major production problems in the last three or four years.

Consumption of titanium in the United States last year was about 25,000 tons — perhaps 80 per cent of the total in various aerospace applications — a rise from only 5,000 tons five years earlier.

BUT consumption within a few years — once the supersonic-transport program gets under way — is expected to come closer to 80,000 tons a year.

For instance, while the airframe of the so-called SST — for supersonic transport — will be about 80 per cent titanium, the Boeing Company's 727 three-jet airliner is less than 2 per cent titanium.

Goodbody & Co., a Wall Street brokerage house, pointed out in a recent survey of specialty metals that the proposed consumption of titanium in the SST program alone was about 200 tons of metal per aircraft.

"THUS," the survey said, "an 800-plane market would use more than seven times as much titanium as was consumed in all applications in 1966. Lockheed's C-5A transport is expected to require 30 tons of titanium metal from producers just for its engines alone."

Although most persons outside the metals industries have scarcely heard of titanium, it is far from being a rare metal. In fact, among the major ores, such as iron, from which steel is derived, and bauxite, which becomes aluminum, copper, lead and zinc, titanium is the fourth most abundant.

come, it is easy to work; hard but flexible; it can readily be drawn, extruded, spun, machined and bent.

Titanium's major drawback is the price. Despite advances in technology by the producers, it still sells for about $5 a pound; down from about $15 a pound a decade ago. By contrast, aluminum, the conventional airframe metal, sells for 24½ cents an ingot pound.

Matson Offers Merger Proposal to U.S. Lines

New York Times Service

The Matson Navigation Company, a major West Coast operator of subsidized and unsubsidized shipping, has offered a merger proposal to United States Lines Company, Alexander Purdon, president of the East Coast company, announced last week.

The Matson bid, with specific offer on the stock exchange ratio, followed by less than 72 hours one made by Walter Kidde & Co.

The Kidde merger offer did not contain any specific stock exchange proposal. Matson proposed that each outstanding share of United States Lines would be exchanged into 4/10 of a share of Matson.

MATSON, a closely held company with less than 500 stockholders, is 94 per cent controlled by Alexander & Baldwin, Inc., a Honolulu-based concern with wide interests in real estate, sugar and pineapple businesses.

In 1966, Matson's net income was about $94 million, or $10.69 a share, on a stock of 8.7 million shares. An unlisted stock on the Honolulu Stock Exchange, Matson has recently sold for approximately $59 a share.

THROUGH a subsidiary, Oceanic Steamship Company, which receives subsidies from the Maritime Administration, the company operates passenger and cargo vessels to Australia.

Matson navigation, in addition to operating the passenger liner Lurline, has pioneered in the development of containerized shipping from West Coast ports.

It vigorously opposed the merger of American President Lines, Pacific Far East Lines and American Mail Lines, recently approved by the Federal Maritime Commission.

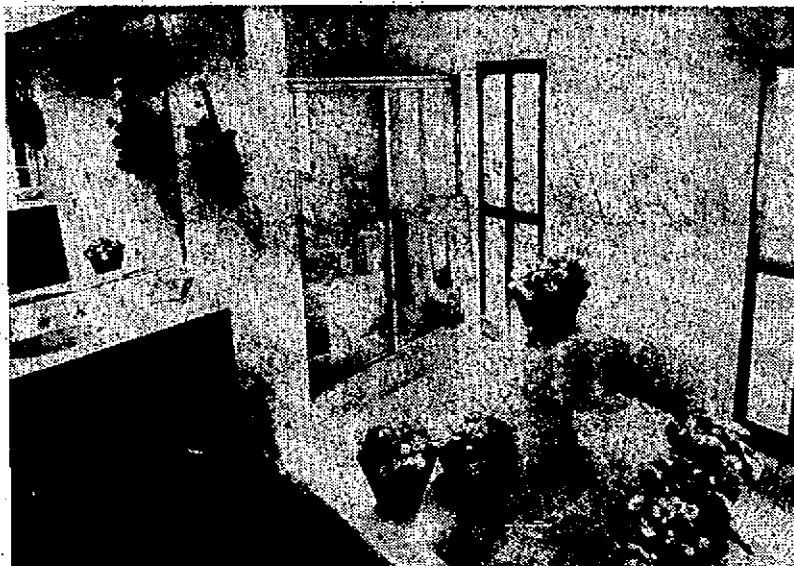

The merger of the three West Coast lines will create a formidable combine with $261 million in assets and $156 million in annual revenues from a fleet of more than 50 ships.

A MATSON-United States Lines merger would create a mammoth shipping company with more than $300 million in assets and a combined fleet of 75 ships.

Purdon disclosed that "discussions had taken place in the past" on the possibility of merger.

The merger offers further complicated an already complex situation that began on Dec. 26 when Kidde, a diversified industrial concern, sent United States Lines stock up 11 points by offering a tender for 650,000 shares at $47.50 a share.

SUNKEN ROMAN BATH

Among many luxury refinements found in Bixby Hill homes in Long Beach are sunken Roman tubs in some models. The homes, by S&S Construction Co., feature spacious elegance throughout. They are priced from $52,900.

ONE OF the major sources of supply is Australia, where whole beaches consist almost entirely of titanium ores.

The refined metal — a silvery grey substance that looks like heavily weathered aluminum — is attractive to designers of aircraft and space vehicles for a number of reasons:

—It weighs about half as much as ordinary carbon steel, but has at least two-thirds of steel's strength, which is more than adequate for an airframe.

—It is one of the most corrosion-resistant materials ever refined, much more so than even magnesium or aluminum.

—IT HAS three times the resistance to heat that aluminum has, and is about 15 per cent more heat-resistant than most grades of steel.

—Once the extracting difficulties have been over-

TO LEAD IN HOME SALES IN ORANGE COUNTY

The Sunday Progress Section of The Independent Press-Telegram & News is a leader in number of Orange County real estate advertisers and in advertising space for Orange County homes.

It didn't just happen that way. The advertisers made it happen. And again and again and again... week-after-week. This is because The Independent Press-Telegram & News brings out the buyers, the people who mean business and have the money to back up their wishes. These people get more information on Orange County homes from these newspapers than from any other source. It makes happy buyers and happy sellers. Two Communications Satellites Ordered by United Kingdom

The Air Force's Space and Missile Systems Organization in El Segundo has completed the terms of a contract for $7,535,000 with the Philco-Ford Corporation's Space and Re-entry Systems Division in Palo Alto.

The contract is for development, production and launch of two communications satellites for the United Kingdom. The launch schedule calls for one satellite to be placed in a synchronous, equatorial orbit by a Thrust Augmented Thor-Delta boosters from Cape Kennedy late in 1968.

THE SECOND satellite will be held as a backup.

Designed to satisfy the defense communications needs of the United Kingdom, the satellites will have station-keeping capability to maintain specific positions in relation to earth.

New CREA President Calls for Equal Rights

Special to the Progress Section
Robert W. Karppe of Bakersfield, incoming president of the California Real Estate Association, last week called for a united effort to encourage equal opportunity in housing for minority groups.

Speaking at an installation luncheon in Bakersfield, where the 46,000-member group concluded a three-day meeting of its board of directors, Karppe directed a plea to "members of the press, the legislature, the public, our wonderful churches," saying:

"We may differ on legislation. We'll decide those things at the ballot box in the American tradition. But also in the American tradition, we can work together to do what's right. I call this, voluntary, peaceable, fair housing and equal opportunity."

"FOR THE love of God and the United States of America, let's do it." He pledged Realtors' support of an Equal Rights Program he said CREA has had for several years, adding: "We've all suffered, haven't we, from lack of understanding and lack of communication?"

He said the association is "interested that every American will have an opportunity for education and an opportunity to obtain on an equal basis" the job he is fitted for "and whatever housing the money that he

Hughes Aircraft Machine Is Doing Human's 10-Year Job in 30 Minutes

New York Times Service

It would take a man approximately 10 years to inspect by hand the intricate maze of wiring among the 40,000 electrical termination points found in large circuit panels of today's complex computerized defense systems.

A new machine designed and built by Hughes Aircraft Company, Fullerton, does the job in 30 minutes.

To perform the task manually in a half hour, a work force of 20,800 would be needed.

These statistics, based on a 40-hour week, were compiled by the company to illustrate the speed of its new time-saving machine called FACT — for Flexible Automatic Circuit Tester.

FACT is in operation at the firm's manufacturing facility here and is said by Hughes to be "the fastest equipment of its kind available."

"Each end of more than 10,000 wires, the number found in a typical circuit panel being tested, must be checked by FACT to make sure that it has a firm attachment to the correct connector pin," Edwin H. Meier, a Hughes vice president, said. "That figures out at 20,000 ends, approximately half the number of termination points."

The 10,000 wires — averaging about one foot in length and thinner than spaghetti — would extend nearly two miles placed end to end.

"Although only half the 40,000 pins are connected to a wire," Meier said, "each must be tested against each of the other 39,999 to assure that each point is or is not wired as it should be. Mathematically, this amounts to 1,600,000 verifications.

"INCORRECT contact at just one of the 40,000 pins would mean that a multi-million-dollar electronic system could not operate." FACT equipment and pre-testing "blocks" of connector points at the same time and eliminating duplication as the machine proceeds from block to block, Meier said. "Basically, the difference between the new FACT equipment and previously used circuit testing machines is a matter of philosophy," he explained.

"Old equipment assumed circuit wiring was correct and attempted to prove that it was — knowing in advance where the wire terminations were supposed to be, and only looking for them at those points."

"FACT, on the other hand, assumes that the wiring is wrong and seeks to prove his theory. It examines every sequence, or pin, whether a wire is connected to it or not."

The circuit panels tested are automatically wired, totally eliminating human errors.

The industry standard in hand circuit wiring is 18 errors for each 1,000 connections. Automatic wiring machines are entitled to one error for each 1,000 connections, Meier said. These are mainly mechanical accidents such as crushed wires or faulty connections caused by slightly bent pins.

FACT's job is to find that one error and pinpoint its location.

THE MACHINE, with the help of its built-in computer, can check 1,000 circuit panel units a month, compared with only 50 a month possible on the earlier testing models, a ratio of 20 to 1.

Special equipment, Meier said, is designed to reduce by 95 per cent the time re-

A place to call home(town)

By MARGARET McKEAN
Staff Writer

Picture the newcomer to the Southland. She's left the midwestern town where she grew up. She's come with her husband and 2.8 children to California. It's big and fast and strange and sprawling. It's overwhelming. Our gal looks at it apprehensively — differently from the way she saw it two years ago when she was here on vacation. Then it was a fun place — a place to spend vacation dollars at Disneyland, Knott's Berry Farm, the Pike Marineland — a place to be a guest. She had visited some relatives on that vacation trip out here — and heard the Lakewood people proclaim their pride in Lakewood, and the San Pedrans claim they'd never live anywhere but in San Pedro.

BUT WHERE you live in a personal thing. Our gal and her husband, anxious to establish their identity, strike out on their own, to find their hometown. He goes to work for North American, they buy a lovely two-story place at 35097 Tillman Place. Now they have a house, a mortgage, an address. They still don't have a hometown. Their mailing address is Compton, Wilmington, Torrance or Gardena, but they don't really live within limits of any of the four cities. Their children attend Los Angeles City Schools, but they are not Los Angeles city residents. Their phone numbers indicate that maybe they live in Long Beach or Wilmington... their trash is picked up by some outfit in Lomita... and they pay taxes to Los Angeles County. Our bewildered newcomers ask a "native," who'd moved in two months earlier, "Where do we REALLY live?" With a shrug, the lady next door says, "Oh, this is Dominguez really," or "Out here they call this Carson."

THE STATE has recognized the Dominguez area — they put a college there and named it California State College at Dominguez Hills. The Catholic church knows the Dominguez name — the old hacienda on historic Dominguez Rancho (not included in the proposed city, however) has been a seminary since the days when there were real live Dominguezes walking around. There is one public utility called Dominguez Water Company.

But the post-office, the telephone companies, the gas and power companies, the tax assessor, the school districts never allude to a real place called Dominguez — or Carson.

It's taken almost 10 years for people "to get up off their apathy" and bring the issue to an incorporation vote, says Paula Boughner. She's militant for cityhood. "I just have to care" she wails, and her voice is joined by a chorus.

During the past 10 years, the residents have successfully skirted annexation by Long Beach and by Compton.

They know that should the incorporation vote on Feb. 6 fail, they'll be up for grabs again by any bordering community.

They know that should incorporation pass, their hometown could be named either Dominguez or Carson. More crucial to them, though, than what the new town may be named, is that there BE a new town.

THERE ARE dissenters. The Concerned Citizens Committee opposes incorporation.

Among their reasons are that "incorporation adds another layer of POLITICIANS — and more fingers in the till. There is no way to guarantee there will not be added PROPERTY TAXES."

Their literature reiterates that "MONEY HANDLERS DON'T COME CHEAP."

"Baloney!" says Paula Boughner. "We are now paying for all services that we receive. The proposed city is financially feasible without any additional property taxes."

She and others interested in city autonomy realize that "any time you discuss home, children and pocket-book, you're hitting 'em where they live."

They're assured they can make the Dominguez-Carson area a better place to live if it's a "SOMETHING and not just a SOMEWHERE."

RECOGNIZED AS AMONG the most concerned is Laura C. Bragunier, a candidate for city council. She has attended as many as three meetings per week of the 12 homeowners' associations and two taxpayers' associations.

"As far as I know, no women are actively organized in a campaign against incorporation, though some may not be particularly happy about it."

"The Concerned Citizens Committee generally opposes it, but is doing a good job of educating the residents on both sides of the issue. They have endorsed certain candidates, including me, for council, and have chosen to endorse a man for city treasurer."

Mrs. Bragunier combines homemaking with a career as a buyer for Industrial Tectonics Inc., a firm located outside proposed city lines. She believes that "selection of five competent people to serve on the council matches in importance the issue of incorporation."

"Remember you're discussing a place where 60,000 people live" says soft-spoken, gracious Letha Cruse. She and her husband, Emilio (head of Jefferson High School's science department), and their three sons live at 19433 So. Cliveden — in Compton, says the post office.

"Is it logical anymore for a 15-square-mile area, a place that could rank 9th in size among the county's incorporated cities, not have an identity? We could be 20th in population. Our property valuation is more

PAULA BOUGHNER... a militant campaigner for cityhood, says "it's taken 10 years for people to overcome apathy."

DEE ZAMPAGOLINI... is second president of autonomous parent-teacher group, says "night meetings have included dads."

WILL THIS BE LOS ANGELES COUNTY'S 77TH CITY? Residents of Dominguez-Carson area (indicated by broken line) will go to the polls Feb. 6 to decide whether area will be incorporated — and if so, whether it will be named Dominguez or Carson.

They're going under the hood to prevent being hoodwinked

By JOYCE CHRISTENSEN

"By the way, dear, did you know it's a four-stroke cycle — intake, compression, power and exhaust — that keeps old Betsy's motor running?"

If that bit of information doesn't get your husband's attention at dinner, nothing will.

And it's precisely that type of knowledge, along with certain basic physical skills such as changing a tire, adjusting a carburetor and getting a honking horn to stop honking, that enrollees in a new class at the YWCA will be sharing with their families over the next six weeks.

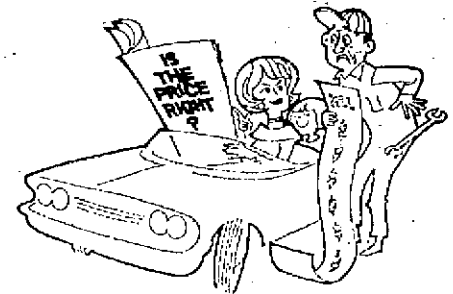

Titled "Auto Mechanics — a basic course in what every woman should know about her car," the course is being conducted for the YWCA by Harry Faulk, instructor in auto mechanics on the Business and Technology Campus of Long Beach City College.

Wearing white shirt and tie, dark suit and horn-rimmed glasses (clean fingernails too!) he looked as unmechanically-minded as his all-female class which spanned in age from retired school teacher to mother of toddlers.

But their thinking was the same.

HIS QUESTION, "do you think you've ever been 'taken' by a service station or garage?" brought a unanimous "yes" from his audience and his ready agreement that their "yes" was justified.

"An automobile shouldn't be an all-masculine domain. Maybe you're the only one around to maintain your automobile. It's both a safety and an economic factor to know how," he told the class.

A desire to "not be taken" was underlying reason for enrollment in the course, but there were others:

"I want to know for myself what those funny noises mean. No two mechanics will tell you the same thing."

"I don't know anything about a car but how to put the key in the ignition. With two small children and all the driving I do, I want to know more."

"My husband knows very little about cars, and I think I should know as much as he does."

"My husband is in business for a company that uses heavy equipment and I'd like to be able to understand what he's talking about."

OPENING session dealt with "just what is a gasoline engine." Subsequent sessions will go into such areas as tune-ups, why, how and when; tools to have in the car ("pliers, screw driver and a socket wrench set as starters"); auto insurance, what you should have and what the law requires; engine noises — "are they dangerous or not; buying a used car (advance information — "look at pedal parts and check to see if it smokes. You may not be popular with the lot salesman, but you'll save money").

The class meets from 1 to 3 p.m. Thursday at the YWCA, 550 Pacific Ave. Information on enrollment in this — or any of the Y's classes — may be obtained by telephone.

WILD WAVES SAY

Tops for Toppers was lively January dance

By IOLA MASTERSON
Society Editor

DON'T KNOCK being an active member of your youngster's PTA, in case you are one of those. It can lead to friendships formed when the kids are in grammar school which extend through the years until they're long out of college.

I know of a number of groups, which now meet just for fun, whose members became acquainted through PTA and who have continued to get together for various pleasurable activities because they formed other common bonds of interest.

The Toppers Dance Club is a good example — and a good example of how they enjoy it is a monthly cocktail party and dance with one couple offering their home for a pre-dance happy hour and several other couples co-hosting.

This time it was at Marian and Bill Carls' home and sharing hosting and serving duties with them were Carl and Mary Bartlett, John and Nina Harris, George and Vera Kerns, Bill and Thelma Stewart.

The whole gang, 72 in all, went by a couple of charter buses to the Golden West in Downey. This was their first trip to this ballroom, usually they hold their parties various places around here, and they were flabbergasted and delighted at the size of the dance floor — about 5,000 square feet. That gave them room to swing around and enjoy their ballroom-style dancing.

Dancers included Don and Rosemary Ashley, Bob and Madeline Burroughs, Ronnie and Mae Bell, Chuck and Harriett Dorans, Wes and Helen Grisinger, John and Nina

Harris, Vic and Irene Hetzel, Gene and Rosanna Moore, Ken and Alice Patterson, Wellington and Ann Phillips, Noel and Gertrude Guertin, Dave and Noel Hodges, and Jim and Camilla La Greys.

About those two Noels — Sir Guertin and Lady Hodges — he pronounces his name with an accent on the no but she pronounces her's just like the Christmas-time version.

AFTER ABOUT a year in their new home at 157 Yale Lane, Seal Beach, Kenny and Dorris Martinson decided to give a 'heave-ho' to individual householders' duties. This week they moved into Leisure World, Seal Beach, to join about the youngest of its "young set."

Their new address is 1981 McKinney Way-Apt. 14-K. To celebrate, Kenny is going to buy Dorris a bicycle, a favorite and carefree mode of transportation in the area, for her birthday. Although they haven't had time to get acquainted, they were delighted to learn that nearby neighbors include Mrs. Nicholas Furjanick and Bruce and Alta Mason.

Just before Kenny and Dorris moved, former neighbors Vince and Nancy Buonocore asked them if they would pop over to their house to have dessert with them as a farewell. When they arrived, all their immediate neighbors were there as a surprise. These included John and Dolores Houghton, Ron and Barbara Linford, Ken and Janet Post and Carl and Jean Stone. They gave them a handsome planter for their new apartment and all the way around it was a sweet evening.

RE-DANCE COCKTAIL PARTY

Other important news in the Martinsons' lives is that daughter, Linda Westphal, has signed a contract with Long Beach Unified School District and will be teaching second grade next month.

EVEN THOUGH historical, it was hysterical when LB Historical Society met at Birney School Auditorium. Good natured Dr. Ward DeWitt was the star attraction there, to show movies of his and Florence's trip on the Queen Mary from Southampton to Long Beach.

Everything was going swimmingly until about two-thirds of the way through, his projector's light burned out — and he didn't have a spare. No amount of hemming, hawing or jiggling of the projector parts could cure the mishap, which the crowd (standing room only, matter of fact) found increasingly funny, as much as they missed seeing the balance of the film.

Fortunately, Bob Metzger, president of the society, there with wife, Francine, was prepared to show a 16-mm film (Ward's was 8-mm) of the actual homecoming to our port.

Audience members, who made Ward swear on a stack of reels that he'd complete projectionist school and finish the showing, were Gus and Cassiata Walker, George Geiger, Dr. Homer and Leamel Comparette, Max and Genevieve Bramble, Ruth Craig Rawn, Blaine and Diveda Davidson and Max and Dorothy Durham.

Let it be known that Florence DeWitt remained serene, loyal — and laughed as hard as anyone — throughout her husband's theatrical travails.

BELIEVE IT or not, Christmas came again this week to Beth and Tom Newton's place with arrival of her brother and sister-in-law, Ray and Emily Pierson of Colorado Springs. Others exchanging late, late gifts (planned that way) were Ray's other LB sister and her husband, Melba and Dorian Fickling.

Ray, a real golf buff, is getting in his whacks at our various courses because the ones in his home town aren't much good for golf balling right now, just snow balling. The Newtons and Piersons are in Palm Springs this week-end to put a sunburst topping on the Coloradans visit. They'll depart for home about mid-week.

WHILE SOME come here to escape snow, others go elsewhere to find it. Sallie and Mike Deeble, for instance, Judy and Dan Erickson and Rosalie and Bill Kosiek. The three couples went to Mammoth to ski, staying at the Deeble family cabin. Fresh snow fall made it perfect for these skiers to enjoy an active, informal and elegant week in the high country.

HAPPIEST TABLEFUL of people at Petroleum Club this year was occupied by honorees Bud and Irene Warren, and a group of friends helping them celebrate their silver wedding anniversary.

Starting out the evening, all had cocktails at Joyce and Bob Carter's home before moving along to the club. During cocktails, the Warrens were presented with a handsome silver tray. It will never come in more useful than it did that night. It was good for kisses all around.

Other party kissin' cohorts were Bill and Carlene Brewer, John and Pat Cockriel, John and Claudia Eperjesi, Scotty and Marilyn Louk and J.B. and Mary Lou Dixon.

GETTING READY to go north and mind their very own one redwood tree are Don and Marilyn Hummel and their four children. They got fed up with smog, traffic and, about two months ago, bought four acres just out of Santa Cruz complete with house and that lovely one redwood.

They sold their home here and will be heading up to big tree country about next Friday. To bid them a very fond farewell, Dr. Bernie and Thelma Teitel had a great, informal putluck party. There were over 50 there and every couple brought food. (Thelma's kitchen was ceiling high with casseroles, salads, desserts) and gag gifts.

Marvin and Veronica Tischer gave them bottles of polluted air. The hosts presented the honorees with a dozen roses (that's the kind of gag I'd like to get!), Nat and Phyllis Kroneberg gave them a tin butterfly because of their free souls and that's the way it went.

Others there were Milt and Betty Cantor, Tom and April Griffin, Mac and Carol MacOwen, Harry and Lael Hughes, Harry and Renee Simon, Walter and Iris Boule, Dr. Lowell and Rick Bowton, Betty Crittenden, George and Pat Underhill and Ralph and Sylvia Gordon.

INSTALLATION CEREMONIES

New leaders take office

COMMUNITY AUXILIARY

Mrs. Scott Dobbins, 240 Termino Ave., will assume duties as president of Long Beach Community Hospital Auxiliary Wednesday when installation luncheon is held in the Marseille Room of Golden Sails Inn.

She succeeds Mrs. Carleton Peters to leadership of the 240-member organization. Newly elected officers and governing board members to be installed with Mrs. Dobbins are Mmes. S. Tedman Gould, Donald Burke, Albert LaRue, Ralph E. Russell Jr., Wallace B. Rowley and Peters. Also Mmes. Robert Nichols, Salvatore Gincelli, Evar Peterson, John Huffman, Lloyd Thornton, Norman Hathaway and Dave Mosher. Mrs. Russell Plato will be installing officer.

LADIES OF GAR

Abraham Lincoln Circle 44, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, will hold installation of officers at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday in

MRS. SCOTT DOBBINS

Veterans Memorial Building. Betty Manalatos, national president, will seat Laura Kerr as president.

Others serving on her staff will be Irene Willis, Lois Guthrie, Myrtle Thompson, Florence Tallman, Mae Bloomer, Frances Franklin, Ofa Ona Nelson, Margaret Pichowsky, Jessie French, Mabel Henning, Mabel Fisher, Leola Kirby and Nellie Foulk.

ETHERIDGE TENT

The 1968 officers of Anna Etheridge Tent 58, Daughters of Union Veterans, headed by Mabel F. Fisher, will be installed by June Harrison, past department president, at 12:30 p.m. Monday in Veterans Memorial Building.

Other new officers are Margaret Forhan, Mae Bloomer, Tyrone Richardson, Laura Kerr, Nellie Foulk, Jayne Crane, Irene Willis, Ofa Ona Nelson, Elsie Chase, Margaret Pichowsky, Jessie French, Effie Berry, Anna Worthington and Edna Bivens.

Because the tent's regular meeting date falls on Lincoln's birthday, the next event will be a potluck luncheon Feb. 26 at Veterans Building.

American-British club to meet

Newly organized Dundee Entertainers — an American-British social club — will meet at 8:30 p.m. Saturday in the ballroom of the Mayfair Hotel, 1256 W. Seventh St., Los Angeles.

There will be dancing to Roy Pickett and his orchestra and the Dundee Entertainers will present a stage show during intermission. Dundee Entertainers was a volunteer USO troupe during World War II.

Interested persons are invited to participate in the new organization.

Foasberg's January Almanac

A variety of things and stuff published with the hope of amusing, informing, advising and convincing our readers that the Foasberg family's laundering and cleaning establishments will always give you the perfection you want at remarkably low prices.

January is named after the two-faced Roman god, Janus. One of the principal deities in Roman mythology, Janus is the god of the beginning of things.

The big day this month, of course, is January 1 with the Rose Parade, the Rose Bowl, the Sugar Bowl, the Orange Bowl, the already-broken New Year's Resolutions and recovery from the night before.

There's usually a chill in the air this time of year: time for sweaters. Take your sweaters to the extra-care cleaners, Foasberg. This month's special is a low 69¢ for all sweaters except jeweled or cashmere.

It was on January 19, 1949, that Congress raised the salary of the President of the United States from $75,000 to $100,000, with a tax-free expense allowance of $50,000. At that time, shorter hours or better working conditions were not mentioned.

Would you like more information on fabric care or do you need a speaker for your next club meeting? Call Betty Blake, Foasberg's Fabric Care Counselor. AT WIT'S END

It's leapyear- 'Look alert, group!'

By ERMA BOMBECK

With only a scant eleven months left in Leap Year, it is with heavy heart that I report to my unmarried sisters, "Look alert, group!"

"You are in the throes of a marriageability gap that has not been equalled since World War II."

The high ratio of women to men has come about through the usual saturation, that is, the weaker sex is leading the stronger sex both in births and longevity.

Sitting around worrying about how to foist her feminine wiles on an eligible man is enough to make a woman swallow her cigar. I don't pretend to hold the key to the problem, but I've known a few bachelors in my time and their contention is that women don't bring anything tangible to a marriage.

"And if that isn't enough," complained a young husband, "a woman falls apart after she's married. Take Dorothy. Just 18 days after the wedding, her bridge fell out in a popcorn ball. That cost a couple hundred dollars. Then she had to have her tonsils removed. I always thought that was Mommy's and Daddy's expense."

"Then she was tired all the time. Needed iron. She should have married the president of U.S. Steel. After that she became pregnant. That was another bundle. Following the birth, she needed a holiday. You ready? She went skiing and broke her leg. If she were on Medicare, the government would fold. Frankly, I'm ready for the resurrection of the 'dowry.'"

A DOWRY to me has always seemed a bit vulgar. On the other hand a hope chest filled with head dollies and demitasse spoons has seemed rather useless. To sweeten the pot, so to speak, a woman might just bridge the marriageability gap with a few practical possessions like:

A car — preferably one that is paid for and runs.

A sewing machine and a typewriter — don't bother to mention you don't sew or type. Before you were married, you probably never fertilized a lawn, flushed out a sewer pipe, jumped a battery or oiled a power mower either.

A good fur coat — hang onto it honey. It'll make your new husband look like he's on his way up and it'll be the last fur you'll see until he is.

A SET OF encyclopedias: You won't need these unless you plan on a family. In that case, they're a must for children who have to know which president invented the folding chair and who succeeds to the presidency before Betty Furness gets a crack at it.

A bag of wild oats: You'll never be sorry. They make arguments more interesting.

A rich father: A girl never looks as attractive as when she's wearing a rich father.

You can devise your own list, of course. But don't set traps this Leap Year until you intend to bait them!

Brides-elect, fiances tell of future wedding plans

Klein-Hayes

Mr. and Mrs. James E. Klein, Long Beach, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Janice Inez, to Richard R. Hayes, son of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Hayes, Lakewood. The wedding will take place in June.

Miss Klein is a senior at Millikan High School. Her fiancé, an alumnus of Lakewood High School, attends Long Beach City College.

Link-Rephan

Barbara Judith Link will become a May bride when she exchanges wedding vows with Ronald Maurice Rephan. The betrothal has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Link, Long Beach. Her fiancé is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph D. Rephan, Cypress.

Braun-Ratzlaff

California State College at Long Beach alumnae Diana Kay Braun and Brian Michael Ratzlaff will be married in late June, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon J. Braun of Lakewood, have announced. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Ratzlaff, Long Beach.

The bride-to-be attended UCLA; she is affiliated with Zeta Tau Alpha. Her fiancé attended Long Beach City College and will attend U.S. Air Force Officers Training School at Lackland AFB, San Antonio, Tex., from February to June.

Thomas-Gilchrist

Linda Sue Thomas will become the bride of David D. Gilchrist May 18, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald M. Thomas, Long Beach, have announced. The future bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Gilchrist, also of Long Beach.

A graduate of Millikan High School, Miss Thomas attended Long Beach City College, then received her degree as medical assistant from Long Beach Valley College. Her fiancé is a graduate of Lakewood High School and California State College, Long Beach. Now stationed at Ft. Ord, he will complete his U.S. Army service March 7.

Lynda Mullin recites vows with Robert A. Hardwick

More than 400 guests witnessed nuptials Saturday in California Heights Methodist Church uniting Lynda A. Mullin and Robert A. Hardwick, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Hardwick, 3881 Weston Place.

The bride, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Carroll B. Mullin, 716 W. 29th St., was attired in a gown of peau de sole and Alencon lace with a Watteau train.

MARY MULLIN was maid of honor for her sister. Bridesmaids were Jill Beamon, Mrs. Alex Jamille, Judy Pope and Mrs. Howard Lockyer. Wendy Jamille and Laurie Hardwick were flower girls.

Kenneth Hardwick was best man for his brother. Ushers were Donald Hardwick, Raymond Hardwick, Richard Trey and Alex Jamille. Jimmy Hardwick was ring bearer.

A reception followed in the International Club. Upon returning from a wedding trip to Northern California and Las Vegas, the newlyweds will live at 16254 Grand Ave., Bellflower.

Program to feature student performance

"Theatrically Yours" is title of a one-hour show to be presented by students of Bebe Carpenter Talent School Monday at 8 p.m. during a community program in Long Beach Auditorium.

Featured soloists will be Virginia Harker doing "The Creed," Diane Morey, tap dancer, Jerilyn Jorgenson, modern dancer, and Elaine Watles dancing to "Second Hand Rose."

Ensemble numbers will include "Dance of the Fireflies," "It's a Grand Old Flag," "Walking Happy," and "Hawaii Calls" by a group of teen-age and pre-teen dancers.

Frank Van Ee will lead community singing at 7:30 p.m. with Regenia Beam as accompanist. The Tyo Orchestra will play for old-time dancing with Joe Marshall as caller.

Hil Happy Sunday. Here's your store-clogger with today's horoscope: Good week to get things in shape for future well-being. Let's shop the town.

Everyone's talking about organ transplants, but look who's doing something about them. ORGAN & PIANO CENTER recently transplanted one from their location at 400 Long Beach Blvd. to a friend's home, and the operation was a complete success. My previously non-musical friend was playing recognizable tunes in two weeks! The new organs make it all so easy and fun with their simple, easy to follow, do it yourself instructions, that everyone should try it. Let's organ-ize.

The time has come, the walrus said, to think of air conditioning. Echoing the thought, LONG BEACH HEATING & AIR CONDITIONING, 5173 Long Beach Blvd., tells me that planning ahead — like now — before the summer push, can mean actual dollars in your pocket. Call them tomorrow — GA 3-4985 — and ask them to send out an expert to discuss the precise needs of your home and family. Then look forward to the long, cool summer ahead.

Did you ever try to get a certain recording and go from store to store with no luck? Why waste time and effort, when you can go to BIXBY KNOLLS MUSIC CENTER, 4508 Atlantic Ave.? Through their special order service, they're able to offer the entire catalog of recorded music still in print, within four to five days, at no extra charge. Phone them at 423-1888. Incidentally, their mono sale is still on, at $2.59.

The difference between antique and old is style and charm. Authentic antiques are in a class by themselves, and authentic antiques may be defined as AUDREY'S ANTIQUES, 827A Ocean Blvd. Seal Beach. Excellent pieces you can live with, or conversation pieces you can have fun with, in jewelry, silver, glass and china — AUDREY has them all. See her exhibit at the Antique Show Jan. 25 through 28 at the Municipal Auditorium. Try antiques for sighs.

January is a month when many of us become infected with a bit of post-holiday pip. I heartily recommend a shot in the wardrobe. GEORGIA WILLIAMS SHOPPE, 2013 Pacific Ave., is a place where I always feel welcome to shop and browse. And the collection of skirts, shirts, sweaters and capris — sportswear of all kinds — is sheer delight. Darlene, Wondamere, Hedy, LeRoy, Sebastian — she stocks top brands to mix or match. Go in tomorrow.

Driving down Atlantic, I saw something new. BELL'S BIXBY KNOLLS FURNITURE window, 382 Atlantic Ave. Curious, I stopped. They have a new franchised line of Holland Imports called Simpla-Lux. This is teak furniture for living room, dining room, and complete wall systems. As the name implies, it's easy to assemble and oil, and is quite reasonable for this type of furniture. For those who like European modern, you simply must go in and see it.

Proof positive that children don't need retouching are the adorable children's proofs I saw at VERL'S PORTRAITS, 631 E. Seventh St. And contrary to most photographers, VERL'S does sell proofs, in sets only. Given this kind of deal, we all should have a year by year record of childhood growth. As for portraits, you can get seven finished portraits — one 5x7 and six wallet sized, for $9.95. Call HE 7-3577 for sittings, by appointment only.

Have you ever stepped on a carpet so thick, knurled that you had an irresistible urge to take off your shoes and sink your bare ankles in it? I did. ATLANTIC RUG & CARPET, 5152 Atlantic Ave., whose quality reputation stems from 12 years of service. Any style, color and fabric, most major manufacturers are represented. Some run as low as $2.95 a square yard, or you can go as high as your tastes dictate.

'Bye for now. Have a good week and remember the phone number — HE 6-1161, Ext. 249.

High price of living in New York high enough to curl your hair ... but then, curly hair is back in style

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON
Director, Women's News

NEW YORK — Curly coifs will be going around in all the most fashionable circles this spring.

Stylists in the nation's fashion and beauty capital have a variety of names for the new styles, but — whatever the moniker — they add up to curls, curls and more curls.

There are short, short Janet Gaynor curls (small, fat and uncombed) ... stand-up Little Orphan Annie curls (also uncombed) ... Shirley Temple curls (smooth and bouncy) ... ante-bellum Scarlett O'Hara curls falling lengthwise and piled one on another from crown to shoulder or longer (brushed, perhaps, but not combed).

Mr. Christian, 22-year-old Dutch hairstylist at Bergdorf's (a Coiffures Americana salon) says "there's no definite trend — wear what's best for you, just so it's feminine."

To look with-it, however, he says hair must have movement. "That means no sharp shingles ... no severe necklines. That's out, no matter how long or short you wear your hair."

Stylists at Charles of the Ritz are brushing up on "the ruffle" ... a lavish flourish of whisper soft curls and waves reminiscent of the 30s.

Mr. Adrian, style director for the beauty firm, keeps the shape small and contoured by cutting the hair 4½ inches at the crown, tapered to 2½ inches at the nape and 3½ inches at the front.

IF YOU DON'T have your own curls, there are plenty of pin-on coiffure attachments — in all shapes and sizes.

Newest thing in hair coverups is the stretch wig — an expandable head of hair that fits snug as a bathing cap.

And if you've ever worried about the way your hair looks under a hat, Saks Fifth Avenue beauty salons have the answer — a fringe of hair that frames the face and lets your own hide away. It consists of a band of hair, two inches wide, with an elasticized back!

Meanwhile, Clairol — which for years has insisted blondes have more fun — this season is promoting the redhead, giving titian-tressed woman her first real whirl since Clara Bow days.

Also in the 30s vein, Vidal Sassoon — that scissor happy British stylist whose severe architectural haircuts made many a femme look more like a fella — has joined the femininity brigade. His styles are frizzed to make modern women look like boob-boop-a-doop cuties.

Could be the straight-haired girls who grew up with the Watusi may soon look like the curlytops who kicked through the Charleston!

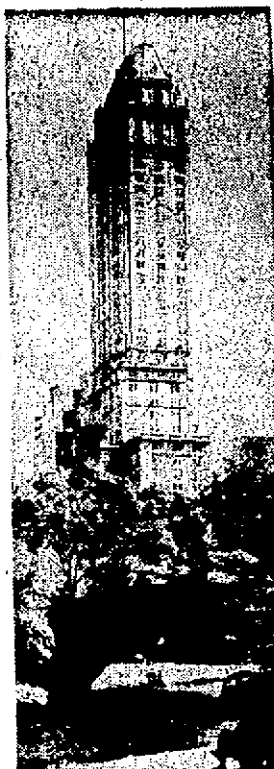

COME TO THINK OF IT, most cliff dwellers here may never have to visit a beauty salon. The cost of living in Manhattan is high enough to curl their hair.

Take the famous Pierre Hotel on Fifth Avenue, where our press showings of New York designer collections are held twice a year. Adding 44 expensive stories to the New York skyline, the living there is high.

In addition to 327 guest rooms, there are 373 apartments, averaging four or five rooms each. For his patch of elegance in the sky, the purchaser pays anywhere from $50,000 to $200,000. Some apartments take up an entire floor — which can up the price to $750,000!

Talked to a smart young housewife who shares a three-bedroom apartment on the fashionable East Side with her hubby, son, a collie and a live-in couple who work as housekeeper and butler-chauffer. Per month they pay $630 rent on the apartment ... $750 to butler and housekeeper ... $65 a month to park their car ... plus $20 a day for a laundress who comes once a week.

All that money and no garbage disposal! They're not allowed in crowded Manhattan!

HIGH LIVING ... the Pierre Hotel (familiar sight to TV viewers when the action is in Central Park). Cooperative apartments in the famous hostility have run as high as $750,000.

IN DOMINGUEZ-CARSON AREA ...

Women want hometown they can call their own

than $166 million dollars."

WITH BUDGET estimates of more than 2½ million dollars of 1968-69, the cityhood proponents feel they can afford to contract with Los Angeles County for municipal services, while the new city and a five-man council retain legislative, budgetary and planning controls.

The County Sheriff's Department cityhood for the Carson-Dominguez inhabitants.

"I will readily admit that we give the bare minimum service to unincorporated territories," said Inspector J. D. Denis. "Contract cities are served first, and they get what they pay for. It is relatively inexpensive because revenues obtained from gas taxes, liquor fees and traffic tickets revert to a city."

Lakewood initiated the contract service in 1954. For many reasons, cityhood battles in Dominguez-Carson pattern the city they want after Lakewood.

"We have an affinity for Lakewood. For one thing, we shop at Lakewood and Los Altos shopping centers. We know that the Lakewood area grew to tremendous size before incorporation, just as we have," said tall, attractive Lee Ricker, mother of six, whose husband, Charles, owns Medical Data Research in Downey and contracts with Long Beach Memorial Hospital.

Carson-Dominguez women are vocal, sprightly and, in a sense, mavericks.

BECAUSE THEY'RE not hidebound by tradition, the 60,000 residents of the nameless place integrated without incident.

"We are possibly 18% Oriental, maybe 12% or more Negro. We have many Mexican-American families, lots of Hawaiians, Samoans, Filipinos. Our kids play and fight together as though they were one race," said Jean Brunelli, wife, mother, registered nurse, Red Cross volunteer, and chief den mother. She and husband, Mike, bought their home at 19102 Galway Dr. because it was built from a floor plan they loved.

Roughly, the would-be city is bordered on the south by Wilmington, on the west by the Harbor Freeway, on the north by Compton and on the east by Long Beach and old Dominguez (excluded from the proposed incorporation by vote on June 28 of the county's Local Agency Formation Commission).

"WE'RE ALSO bordered by junkyards and trash dumps," ruefully says Mrs. Edison Daniel. The Daniels and their three children want cityhood so "we have a chance to make decisions for ourselves. Right now we have to run to the county board of supervisors."

Mrs. Daniels is active in the Judson Baptist Church activities. There are two Baptist churches, one Baptist mission, one interdenominational church and St. Philomena's Catholic church in the area.

"We understand a Lutheran church and a Methodist church also have bought property. This could be a marvelous community of homes, schools and churches," says petite and dark-haired Terry Santa Maria.

MRS. BOUGHNER names the tracts where these people live. They're called Dominguez Hills, Victoria, Park, Centerville Estates, Galaxy West, Stevenson Village, Del Anjo Hills, Del Amo Highlands, Leadership Homes, Redwood Estates, Greenacres, Victoria Estates, Casa Dominguez and Scottsdale.

If they favor city incorporation, they'll choose five councilmen, (from a whopping slate of 48 candidates), a city treasurer, a city clerk and a name for the city.

"We'd like to hear it called Dominguez," says Maxine Peltowany, "but we'll be happy to hear it called anything."

"We expect the vote will favor the name 'Carson'—after all, 67% of the voters live in the Carson area," explains Mrs. Boughner. "But even if Dominguez is more difficult to spell, it has so much tradition and the family is historic."

"The original Carson was a mere in-law!"

Assistance League to sponsor gourmet cooking series

Chefs to share secrets

If the quickest way to a man's heart is his stomach, then Long Beach Assistance League is playing Cupid again by sponsoring the second annual, "Adventures in Gourmet Cooking," series.

During the series tricks on how to become a gourmet cook at home will be fully explained and demonstrated by master chefs representing five of the Southland's finest restaurants.

OPEN TO the public, the series will consist of five lecture demonstrations at League House, 394 Roswell Ave. Cooking school sessions will all be held on Mondays at 9:45 a.m. The dates are Feb. 5, 12, 10 and March 4 and 11.

Donation for the series is $20. Although reservations are limited, registration is still open. Checks may be sent to Mrs. Max E. Nichols, 47-66th Place, Long Beach, 90803.

Five eminent chefs will present recipes of their restaurants' specialties and demonstrate preparation. A commentator will assist, describing in detail the steps toward creation of a culinary triumph.

DEMONSTRATIONS are done on a specially equipped dais. By the clever use of tilted mirrors, everyone attending can see the chef's hands as he works.

Food, donated by the participating restaurants, is for demonstration only, although light refreshments will be served during a recess period. Menus, with copies of recipes featured, will be distributed to patrons at each session.

Chefs and restaurants they represent in order of their appearance are:

George Lim, co-owner and master chef of Kowloon Cantonese Restaurant, Los Angeles, who will demonstrate three of his most famous dishes. They are Gar Doo Gai, a Chinese shredded chicken salad; Lobster Cantonese; and Special Walnut Chicken. Kay Ringe, public relations representative for Lim, will commentate.

ON FEB. 12, Ulysses K. Yanis, master chef of Francois', Huntington Beach, and artist at French cuisine will appear. Among specialties he will prepare is a particular favorite of patrons, Stuffed Baked Oysters. Frank Richmond, co-owner with his father, Jimmy Richmond, will commentate.

Next to be featured will be chef Diamond Daramparis of the Embers Shoreline, one of Long Beach's newest show-place restaurants, 1900 E. Ocean Blvd. Continental cookery is his forte and it is announced he will show patrons how to prepare Beef Wellington or Filet of Sole Veronique. Leonard Lombardo, Embers' co-owner, will explain the procedure.

Leading off the March lecture-demonstrations will be Edward H. Shin, chef of the Five Crowns, Corona del Mar. Five Crowns is noted for its English specialties and Shin, with the restaurant's managing director John Ondike commentating, will show how to create an epicurean Sunday morning brunch.

Hans Prager, general manager and executive chef for all of the Lawry's restaurant chain, of which Five Crowns is one, will be present.

LAST OF the series will be presented by Willie Mattice, co-owner and supervising chef of Villa Fontana, located at Town and Country Square, Orange. Co-owner Henry Grum will assist. How to make a truly superlative chocolate soufflé as well as the puff pastries for which the restaurant is renowned will be featured.

Committee in charge of the series is composed of Mrs. Reginald Barden, chairman, Raymond Peterson, co-chairman, and Max E. Nichols, William Yankie, Carl Brooks and David N. Eagleson.

Benefits will go to the league's fund in support of the 12 girls' clubs it sponsors in Long Beach elementary and junior high schools as well as scholarships.

BUT WHAT of the background of these chefs, who are donating their time, and how did they master the tricks of the gourmet trade?

George Lim, who moved here from Canton, China, while still in his teens returned to his native land to study with one of the greatest of Chinese chefs. For two years he cooked and studied 18 hours a day in order to bring back his knowledge of China's cooking.

Yanis, who was born on the island of Crete, apprenticed in Athens, Greece. He first came to this country to serve as chef of the Dutch Embassy, Washington, D.C. Shin, a native of Korea, moved here 11 years ago. He attended San Jose State to earn a degree in home economics then DEMONSTRATING intricacies of authentic Chinese food to his children, Bobby, 7, and Dorothy, 8, is George Lim (above). Lim, co-owner and master chef of Kowloon Cantonese Restaurant, Los Angeles, will appear on Assistance League gourmet series.

DEAR ABBY

Invite excludes wife, she pouts

DEAR ABBY: My husband has many business associates whom I know casually or not at all. Recently he received a wedding invitation from some business friends. It was addressed "MR." only.

I've met these people, so I know they are aware of my existence. I thought it was in very poor taste to exclude me but I put it down to ignorance and let it go at that.

When my husband bought an expensive gift and attended the wedding alone I was floored.

What would have been the proper way to handle this? My husband is the "infallible" type, so naturally I didn't offer my judgment in the case.

CIRCUMVENTED

DEAR CIRCUMVENTED: Your husband isn't responsible for the boorishness of his business friends, but he is responsible for his own. If you offered no judgment when your husband went solo to the wedding, don't be surprised if he trips on you.

DEAR ABBY: I'm too old for love problems, but my problem is very important to me all the same. What ever happened to the machine permanent wave? I used to get a beautiful wave in my hair that really held, but those days are gone.

Now all I can get is a machineless permanent. It doesn't take so long, but what good is it when the wave doesn't hold? I have very straight hair and need a permanent that won't wash out with the first shampoo. Thank you.

PROBLEM HAIR

DEAR PROBLEM: Perhaps there is an old-fashioned permanent wave machine gathering dust in the basement of a beauty parlor somewhere, but I haven't noticed one lately. Ask your beauty operator if she knows of one. And if she does, I hope she knows someone who is old enough to remember how to operate it.

DEAR ABBY: I have a neighbor who doesn't care what she asks you. She is so tactless, you wouldn't believe it. Yesterday when my sister was visiting here from out of town, this neighbor asked, "If you have been married for six years and don't have any children, whose fault is it, yours or your husband's?" She is always asking me how much I paid for things, and she's even asked me how much my husband makes, and what my grocery bill runs me a month.

First aid

Calloused heels? Then take these simple tips from a leading choreographer. Every time you bathe, gently rub the affected area with a pumice stone and, after drying, massage thoroughly with your favorite oil or cream. During cold winter days feet shrink, causing shoes to slip and rub your heels. Prevent this by applying strips of first-aid tape to each heel. The smooth surface will prevent rubs and runs.

I wrote you a while back and asked you how to answer her when she kept asking me if I thought my 26-year-old son was a virgin or not. You said, "When she asks you a question that is none of her business, say, 'WHY DO YOU ASK?'"

Well, I tried that, and she says, "Because I want to know." What can I do to stop such personal questions?

NEIGHBOR

DEAR NEIGHBOR: Haul out the heavy artillery and tell her it's none of her business.

Trademark Write to Abby, Box 970, Long Beach, Cal. 90801. For a personal reply, include a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Smooth Beauty Into Your Skin

The colder months can give your skin a lovely youthful bloom, but guard against any tendency to wrinkle—dryness that may be caused by over-exposure to cold air. Even mildly crisp air causes the skin to contract, preventing moisture from reaching the surface cells. Ask your druggist for oil of Olay and before making-up, smooth it over your face and neck, being careful to pat it in generously around the eyes. This beautifying moist oil will soon ease away every trace of dryness and give the skin a healthy bloom throughout the winter season.

'TREASURE OF THE TAMARACK'

---musical theater in miniature

Youngsters in Sutter Elementary and Hughes Junior High Schools will enjoy a special musical program Monday, Jan. 29, when the Festival Players of California bring them "Treasure of the Tamarack."

Ginny Tyler will be story teller. She is former Head Mouseketeer for the Mickey Mouse Club at Disneyland and now is featured story-teller on Disneyland Records.

Members of the Festival Players are Irving Katz, violinist; Dorye Roettger, oboist; Abraham Weiss, violinist; Vito Mumolo, classical guitarist; and Kenneth Lowman, bassoonist.

Lowman, on the staff of Walt Disney Studios for many years, has composed numerous works for chamber ensembles. Musical director of the Players, he has written the music for the Jan. 29 program which is billed as Musical Theater in Miniature. It combines music with dramatic narrative and is presented with costume and a simple stage setting as an introduction to the form of opera.

These, and other performances in Los Angeles County, are sponsored by the county Music and Performing Arts Commission.

Dr. Raymond Kendall came to Long Beach this week to discuss the program which Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra will play tonight at 8 p.m. in Lakewood High School Auditorium, to speak briefly about his new post at The Music Center and to survey the musical dimension of Southern California.

Dr. Kendall told members and guests of Long Beach Auxiliary to Southern California Symphony Association Tuesday in Assistance League House:

"Take a tip from the Chinese. This is their formula for listening to music: Don't try to listen to the whole thing — pick out one filament and follow it. You can't hear all of an unfamiliar work the first time — don't put such a heavy obligation on yourself. If you don't like the overall effect, don't listen again. We have the freedom not to listen, thank goodness! But keep an open mind. If you hear everything in a composition the first time, it's probably a very thin work."

LAWRENCE Foster will conduct the orchestra, opening the program with Mozart's "Symphony No. 32."

"Mozart wrote 600 compositions before he died at the age of 36," Dr. Kendall said. "Things were different for composers in the 18th century. They were employed as church or royal musicians and a noble might say, as he would to his cook, 'I'm having a small party Friday night. Do something suitable.'"

"This symphony is really more of an operatic overture. It is healthy, predictable, harmonic music."

CHARLES IVES (1874-1954) of Danbury, Conn., was different.

"He was a strange fellow," explained Dr. Kendall, who took the only picture of Ives made during the last 20 years of the composer's life. "He was as original in music as Mark Twain and Walt Whitman were in literature. He had a relentless integrity and dedication. He went to Yale on a baseball scholarship, but he really wanted to compose. Because he believed artists should bear their own economic burdens, he went into the insurance business — built one of the most successful agencies in the United States.

"Meanwhile, he composed. He used the tunes he knew — college music, evangelical hymns, dance hall tunes, patriotic songs — changing and blending them for his own purpose. He was one of the most capable composers this country has produced."

ON THE program tonight will be Ives' "Decoration Day."

Another work which reconstructs themes, a fact acknowledged in the title, is Hindemith's "Symphonic Metamorphosis on Themes by Weber." "Hindemith took eight little pieces by Weber that nobody ever heard of and metamorphosed them into this work," the speaker commented.

The program will conclude with Schumann's great "Symphony No. 2." Dr. Kendall described it as "a work immediately approachable."

DR. KENDALL recently left his position as dean of the school of performing arts at USC to become the first president of the Performing Arts Council of The Music Center in Los Angeles.

"The council has two purposes. First, to coordinate relations between the six resident companies. Second, to build a premium academy for the training of very gifted young people. For a few with very great talent, the university is not the ultimate. If a person doesn't have the basic technique of his art by the time he is 16, he will never acquire it. We want to help these few, very talented, train with the best — already Piatigorsky and Heifetz are teaching in this program. We will add a great composer, great teachers in drama and dance.

"We want to build a facility near Hope and Grand. This will be the final crown of The Music Center. This project is very exciting and challenging. I will devote my time to it until I retire."

— ELISE EMERY.

Lowman, on the staff of Walt Disney Studios for many years, has composed numerous works for chamber ensembles. Musical director of the Players, he has written the music for the Jan. 29 program which is billed as Musical Theater in Miniature. It combines music with dramatic narrative and is presented with costume and a simple stage setting as an introduction to the form of opera.

These, and other performances in Los Angeles County, are sponsored by the county Music and Performing Arts Commission.

Kathe Kollwitz' Art: Titanic cry of tragedy

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

It seems an impertinence to attempt a review of the major showing of works by Kathe Kollwitz, now at California State College at Long Beach Art Gallery. The collection of graphics, sculpture and drawings by this magnificent artist traces her work from 1892 until her death in 1945. The experience is comparable to the pity and fear excited by Greek tragedy.

Kollwitz lived in and through the great terrors of our century: revolutionary plottings for social justice; the ravaged, losing side in two wars; the deprivations of the intervening period; and the awfulness of Hitler. Her theme again and again is Death taking the child. Her eldest son died in the early days of World War I, and his namesake, her grandchild, in World War II.

The power of Kollwitz's draughtsmanship and the exquisite control of textured light and shadow recede behind the Titanic cry of her message. Her drawing is sculptural in the way of Michelangelo and Rembrandt. Her social commentary is in the vein of the sombre Goya and Daumier. Her work is timeless, simple, classic and contemporary.

IN OUR AGE of abundance and sophisticated terrors, we are remote from the peasant caught in the heavy earth he tills, or the utter dependency of "Unemployment." Yet, the human emotion carries. The earth mother clutching the dead child, the despair of her massive bronze "Pieta," are repeated on a different scale and different color in current newsphotos.

Kollwitz is surely the epitome of PROTEST against all inhumanity, yet it is protest with heels dug in and survival determined.

Hours at the gallery, 6101 E. Seventh St., are noon to 4 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, and from 1 to 5 p.m. Sundays. This exhibit continues through Feb. 2.

Ormandy to conduct, Tucker to sing in Pavilion

Eugene Ormandy, conductor of the Philharmonic Orchestra, will appear as guest conductor with the Los Angeles Philharmonic Thursday at 8:30 p.m. and Friday at 2 p.m. in The Music Center Pavilion.

The program will include Richard Strauss' tone poem "Don Juan." Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler" and Brahms' "Symphony No. 1."

Next Sunday at 3 p.m., Metropolitan Opera tenor Richard Tucker will sing in The Pavilion. The program is one of the Columbia Celebrity Series.

Historic, primitive, folk and contemporary fabrics make up "The Intersection of Line" at California State College, Fullerton, Art Gallery.

"This exhibition," said Mrs. Dextra Frankel, gallery director, "effects a comparative juxtaposition of ancient, native and folk traditions of fabric construction with the same processes that are employed today by leading designers and craftsmen."

"Throughout the exhibition, unique and historic textiles are shown against the contemporary craftsman's reinvestigation and reinterpretation of the same basic structures. Thus, a technical reference is established among the 97 pieces rather than a stylistic comparison — the inter-relatedness of essential fabrication processes."

The construction processes include weaving, knitting, twining, plaiting and knotting, all derived from the element of line for structure.

The exhibit will continue through Feb. 29. Hours are 1 to 4:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, 1 to 4 p.m. Sundays.

SATURDAY and next

Sunday, Pico Rivera will mark its historical background with the second annual Pico Pico Festival Arts at the City Hall grounds, 6615 Passons Blvd.

The two-day event will honor Pico Pico, last Mexican governor of California.

From noon to 5 p.m. both days, artists will demonstrate various techniques and art items will be displayed for sale. Awards will be made Sunday at 1 p.m. Top prize is $500. Judges will be Roger Armstrong, art instructor at Laguna Beach School of Art and Design; Curt Opliger, art coordinator for the City of Los Angeles; and Yoshio Nakamura, chairman of fine arts department at Rio Hondo Junior College.

CLAIRE FALKENSTEIN and Virginia Ferrari will attend the opening of their joint sculpture show today from 2 to 4 p.m. at Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd. The public is invited to meet the artists at the reception which will be hosted by Friends of the Museum. There is no admission charge.

RECEIVING AWARDS In this area is becoming routine for Theo Witsil, featured artist of the month at Palos Verdes Community Arts Association, 405 Via Chico, Palos Verdes Plaza. He has garnered 10 prizes and is known for a technique that produces acrylics with the texture of oils and the tones of watercolors. Witsil studied with Lada Hlaska and Rico Lebrun. He is art director for Northrop Northronics. The association invites visitors to its art rental gallery, also. Hours are 1 to 4 p.m. Thursdays and Fridays, 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays.

MARK FLORIAN will be honored at a public reception today from 2 to 4:30 p.m. at Anaheim Art Association Rental and Sales Gallery, 2660 W. Broadway, Anaheim. The show will continue through Feb. 24 Mondays through Thursdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturdays from 1 to 4 p.m.

THURSDAY at 8 p.m. in Dutch Village Bowl Dining Room, Lakewood Artists Guild will install Bev Schreiber as president. Members of her board will be Verna Haggerty, Bonnie Noble, Olivia Williams, Al Kramsky, Al Dawson, Evelyn Carpenter, Ruth Eyrich, John Bratt, Ron Whitacre, Maud Davis, Carolee Bartlett, Bonnie de Noi and Virginia Corbett.

After installation, Lany Colin will give an art demonstration and lecture.

THROUGH Feb. 1, the Carl Frye Gallery, 3805 Atlantic Ave., will show a one-man exhibit by Rex Hadcock, resident of Whittier.

'Otello' on stage Friday

"Otello," Verdi's operatic version of Shakespeare's great tragedy, will open Pasadena Opera Company's 1968 season in Pasadena Civic Auditorium with one performance only Friday. Cast in the title role is tenor Brian Sullivan. Maralin Niska and Alan Gilbert sing Desdemona and Iago.

Because of the strong emphasis on the villainous secondary character, Verdi originally titled his opera "Iago," but the title reverted to "Otello" for the premiere at La Scala Feb. 5, 1887. It was greeted with great anticipation by an audience eager for Verdi's first opera in 15 years since "Aida."

ALLEN JENSEN is conductor of the Pasadena Opera.

Second production will be the West Coast premiere of "Deseret," Feb. 13, 15 and 17, which will be directed by the composer, Leonard Kastle. The libretto, by Anne Howard Bailey, is a romantic saga based on the conflict between the Mormon leader, Brigham Young, and his prospective 25th bride, Ann Louisa, who loves a Union officer. The opera first was seen on television in 1961. The cast includes Lila Gage, Robert Paul, Mauro Lampi, Rosemary Kuhlmann, Dorothy Dallas and Brett Hamilton.

Final opera will be Puccini's "Tosca," Feb. 28 and March 2.

Lakewood MTA to hear Nies

Lakewood Branch of Music Teachers Association will present pianist Craig Nies in recital today at 3 p.m. in Studio C, Long Beach City College.

He will play sonatas by Mozart, Brahms and Ginastera.

Now attending California Institute of the Arts on a scholarship, Nies has won numerous awards, including first place in the Southwestern Youth Music Festival in Long Beach. He has been soloist with many Southland symphonies and with the Los Angeles Philharmonic.

PAMELA WAGNER

FRED WARING

DEBORAH TRUXAL

Waring's 'Next 50 Years'

"Giving the public what it wants" is the formula of Fred Waring, leader of The Pennsylvanians, who began his musical career as banjoist in a four-piece band more than 50 years ago. This was in Tyrone, Pa., and "We kept a finger on the popular pulse — the taste and rhythms of the times," says Waring.

The veteran musician will bring his new musical show, "The Next 50 Years," to Long Beach Municipal Auditorium Feb. 28.

Longtime favorites in the orchestra and choral group are Leonard Kranendonk and Ralph Isbell, banjo-humorist Bobby Day, the Klinger Twins, the Gentry Trio and the Herald Trio, drummer Poley McClintock and sopranos Janice Zoch, Deborah Truxal and Pamela Wagner.

WARING remembers the rage of ragtime, boogie-woogie, be-bop. The Pennsylvanians dip into classics and have spoofed a lot of opera. Now, says Waring, folk music and novelty songs are in. His list of more than 8,000 arrangements is topped by the all-time best-selling "Battle Hymn of the Republic," which has sold several million copies.

Bolet to preview Symphony concert

Alberto Bolet, permanent conductor of the Bilbao, Spain, Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the Long Beach Symphony next Sunday at 8 p.m. in Long Beach City College Auditorium.

Guest artists will be Long Beach musicians, duo pianists Joanna Hodges and Frank Ahrold.

The public is invited to hear Bolet give "Program Notes" on the concert at a preview Tuesday in the home of Mrs. Stephen A. Locks, 26 Lindero Ave. There is no charge.

Until 1958, Bolet was music director and conductor of the Havana Philharmonic Orchestra. Since then, he has resided and conducted extensively in Europe. Among his recent engagements were 20 performances with the London BBC. Other assignments have taken him throughout Europe and Latin America.

ALBERTO BOLET

"We are seeking women in the Los Angeles area who are not only skilled in their profession but have a commitment about world peace and how to achieve it."

Routine dull? Try Vietnam

Tired of dull routine?

A life of adventure and travel awaits you in Vietnam — provided you are able and willing.

This week (Jan. 22-27), the U.S. Agency for International Development (A.I.D.) will take calls from perhaps 5,000 persons in the Los Angeles area to full urgent jobs in Vietnam. And a good many of the calls will come from women, according to William A. Platt, Public Affairs Chief for Vietnam.

The women are needed for work as civilians to assist the pacification program in the villages and hamlets of Vietnam, explained Mr. Platt, who has just returned from a mission to that country. He said that women who can qualify as registered nurses, nurse education advisors, public health midwives-nurses, nurse anesthetists, teacher education advisors, personnel officers, and secretaries, are in immediate demand.

THE PAY? Not too bad. The range is from $5,000 to $19,000 per year, depending on the position and the candidate's experience. Then there is a 25 per cent hardship bonus added to the basic salary, plus furnished quarters, medical care, liberal vacations, and other benefits.

Social life? Many girls will get more invitations and find more things to do than they ever enjoyed at home, Mr. Platt promises. There is opportunity to build lasting friendships with both American and foreign associates, he adds.

But, there is opportunity to travel, Mr. Platt points out. Travel to and from post is free and you may elect to take stopovers enroute. Vacation periods can be spent in nearby countries, or in safe areas of Vietnam itself.

Travel, adventure, social life, self-development, a career — all of these are just fine. But there is more to it than just that.

"THE WOMEN who choose to go to Vietnam want to take part in history," Mr. Platt says. "They want to share in one of the greatest humanitarian endeavors of our time. They want to help build the peace." He adds:

Candidates must be United States citizens at least 21 years. They must be single, with no dependents, and must agree to serve in Vietnam at least 18 months.

If you're tired of dull routine, if you have the necessary skills, and if you want to contribute to the peace in Vietnam, you can find out more about it by calling a special number in Los Angeles, (213) 688-3476, beginning Monday. Collect calls will be accepted.

NEWLY ARRIVED in Saigon, Joanne Hessick of Los Angeles (right) and Sue Delby of Seattle take in the local street scene. Young women, both secretaries, are assigned to U.S. Mission Headquarters of the Agency for International Development.

Scrivner-Lieb link names in marriage

A wedding trip to Big Bear followed Saturday nuptials of Kathy Lieb and James Scrivner in St. Pancratius Church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lieb, 5919 Hayter Ave., Lakewood, and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Scrivner, 5873 Walton St.

A traditional lace gown on train was worn by the bride who was attended by: Bonnie Kealer, maid of honor; Julie Scrivner and Diane Dyer, bridesmaids; and Roberta Lieb, flower girl.

Pat Dougherty was best man; Peter Raymen and Michael Lieb were ushers.

A reception in Lakewood Gardens Civic Association Clubhouse followed the ceremony.

Military servicemen, fiances announce plans

An August wedding is planned by California State College, Long Beach, graduates, Janet Diane Lonski and Jerry Robert DeGiorgio.

Their betrothal has been announced by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Lonski of Long Beach. The prospective bridegroom, who is serving a tour of duty as a jet pilot in the U.S. Navy aboard the USS Enterprise in Vietnam, is son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe DeGiorgio, Long Beach.

Both are graduates of Polytechnic High School. At CSLB, the bride-to-be was a member of Delta Gamma and her fiancé affiliated with Sigma Alpha Epsilon. Miss Lonski is an elementary school teacher in Los Angeles.

Spencer-Allen

Wedding vows will be exchanged March 31 by Sandra Jean Spencer and James Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Allen, Long Beach. Parents of the bride-elect are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur D. Spencer, Seal Beach.

Miss Spencer is a member of the June graduating class at California State College, Long Beach. Her fiancé is serving a tour of duty in the U.S. Navy.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard R. Dalton, Long Beach, have announced that their daughter, Janet Catherine, will become the bride of William Michael Hayes, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Hayes Jr., Lakewood.

Miss Dalton attends Milikan High School. Her fiancé, a graduate of Lakewood High School, is stationed in Vietnam with the U. S. Marine Corps.

Girl Scout Council sets annual meeting

Speaker at the fifth annual meeting of Greater Long Beach Girl Scout Council will be G. B. Gordon, vice president of Pacific Christian College. The dinner meeting will be at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday in Lakewood Country Club.

"Without You — Nothing" is topic of Gordon's address. Election and installation of officers and board members will follow a report by Mrs. Donald C. Wallace Jr., nominating committee chairman. Outstanding volunteer service awards will be presented.

The public is invited. Reservations may be made at Girl Scout headquarters, 4040 Bellflower Blvd.

Alice Schweitzer

DESIGNER PATTERN

This shape subtly slants into flare

Shaped seams widen subtly to the hem to give an A-line flare to this dress. Flaps turn inward to narrow the neckline — one of the fine and meaningful details typical of an Alice Schweitzer design.

Notice, too, that the smooth back is uninterrupted for the zipper glides along a back seam. Count on Printed Pattern A845 to make the most of your figure — a dress that is suitable to wear anywhere and almost any time of the day or evening, according to your selection of fabrics. We suggest: knits, blends, linen, silk, wool, crepe.

Printed Pattern A845 is available in NEW Misses' Sizes 8, 10, 12, 14, 16. Size 12 (bust 34) requires 2 1/4 yards 35-ounce fabric.

Send ONE DOLLAR for Printed Pattern A845 to Independent, Press-Telegram, Pattern Department, P.O. Box 59, Old Chelsea Station, New York, N.Y. 10011. (Add 15c for each pattern for first class mailing and special handling.) Please print plainly YOUR NAME, ADDRESS with ZIP, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

OF PUBLIC INTEREST Clubs plan panel, film, card benefit

"What Benefit Pre-School?" will be topic of a panel discussion by four pre-school teachers in the Long Beach "co-op" system at 8:30 p.m. Monday at Los Altos Library.

The public is invited to hear the discussion and to participate in a question and answer period. The program is being hosted by Long Beach Council of Parent Participation Nursery Schools.

Mrs. Van E. Corum, teacher at Marina Co-op and assistant at Long Beach Guidance Center, will be aided on the panel by Mrs. Louis Musgrave, Sun n' Fun; Mrs. F. H. Streetz, North Long Beach; Mrs. Roger Sutton, Wardlow Park.

EAST LONG BEACH JUNIORS

A film and demonstration on artificial resuscitation will be presented by Long Beach Fire Department at 9 p.m. Tuesday in Belmont Room, 6300 E. Spring St., under sponsorship of East Long Beach Junior Women's Club. The public is invited.

NORTH LONG BEACH WOMEN

Annual benefit card party given by North Long Beach Women's Club will take place Wednesday at Houghton Park Clubhouse, 6301 Myrtle Ave. Mrs. Ruel Hird, chairman, will be assisted by the Gavalcers, past president's organization headed by Mrs. John Garrels.

Noon luncheon will be followed by bridge, canasta and pinochle. All proceeds will go to the March of Dimes. Reservations may be made with Mrs. Hiram Edwards, 5840 Olive Ave., or Mrs. Garrels, 372 Harding St. The public is welcome.

P&O offers dividend for group travel

An opportunity to organize group travel parties on P&O's 1968 Run Away to Sea Adventure voyages has been announced by Richard Evans, general sales manager at the steamship company's North American headquarters.

One free passage ticket for travel agents or individuals who organize groups of 15 or more and two free tickets for 35 or more adult passengers will be offered, Evans said. This is a modification of P&O's previous policy and is designed to be attractive to organizations, clubs and parties.

The Run Away to Sea Adventure voyages include escort, all shore excursions, land transportation, hotels and the steamship fare in the total price. Evans explained that the free passage concession will include sea travel for the organizer, but will not include land arrangements or shore excursions.

Eleven round-the-world Adventures and Circle Pacific holidays are scheduled this year. Organizers of group travel parties should submit their plans to P&O's sales department in the One Wilshire Building, Los Angeles.

Crafts Center Packs 'em in at Montreal

MONTREAL, Canada — Just as California has its traditional handcrafted art works, so does this most cosmopolitan Canadian city, the center of French-Canadian culture.

Here, displayed on three floors, is a spectacular display of handcraft works including ceramics, jewelry, textiles, ironwork, cloisonne, wood sculpture, pewter, silver and goldsmithing. Everything is for sale at prices virtually impossible to find elsewhere since the center handles all work direct from the creators.

The center was established by the provincial government of Quebec in 1950 to encourage Quebec talent and to establish a ready market for this talent. In its early days, gross annual sales were $1,800. Today it is a million-dollar business with more than 1,200 craftsmen from all parts of French Canada on its roster of suppliers.

Wood carving is Quebec's most traditional art, covering subjects ranging from 15-foot religious statues to delicately designed brooches and necklaces, lamps and three-dimensional representations

Big Douglas jets fly to Hong Kong

As evidence of faith in the political stability of Hong Kong, Canadian Pacific Airlines will introduce 199-passenger Spacemaster jets on its Far East routes in early February. These will be the first aircraft of their kind to serve the Crown Colony.

The DC-8-63s will serve Hong Kong three times a week from California, via Vancouver and Tokyo, on the short Great Circle route.

More visitors

Travel to Yosemite National Park in 1967 showed an increase of 20 per cent over the previous year, Park officials announced. The visitor count through Dec. 31 was 2,180,000 as compared to 1,817,000 in 1966.

S.F. Chinese New Year opens Feb. 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Festival tours of Cathay-by-the-Bay will be a special feature of San Francisco's Feb. 3-10 Chinese New Year celebration, according to the San Francisco Convention & Visitors Bureau.

For the seventh consecutive year the Y.W.C.A.'s Clay Street Center will conduct its popular behind-the-scenes walking tours of Chinatown.

But, first, the Chinatown Y.M.C.A. will herald the Chinese New Year, which arrives Jan. 30, with a Year of the Monkey Flower Festival. The Chinese floral show and azalea plant sale will be held Tuesday through Jan. 29 at the 965 Clay Street Center.

The festival tours, which last year attracted hundreds of out-of-town visitors, take sightseers deep inside the West's most exotic city-within-a-city.

The public celebration begins Feb. 2 in Chinatown with a 10-day street carnival in Waverly and Braham Places and reaches a peak on Saturday, Feb. 10, the night of the big parade.

During the week there will be outdoor performances by Chinatown's colorful lion dancers; a festival pageant in Union Square; spectator events along Grant Avenue, Chinatown's mainstream, and a series of entertainments featuring the Chinese-American beauties who come here annually from all over the country to vie for the title of "Miss Chinatown USA."

INDIAN HIEROGLYPHICS REBORN Canada's totem artist

VANCOUVER, B.C. — It is difficult to believe that the unobtrusive, almost dingy little building at 4316 Fraser St. represents 21 years of dedicated craftsmanship, and is the focal point of a movement that is slowly spreading throughout British Columbia.

This movement, oddly enough, began perhaps 10,000 years ago among the first native dwellers of what is now Canada's Pacific Coast, who scrawled their designs on the walls of caves. It has only become popular with the present day white men during the past 25 years or so, but it is now reverting once more to the native Indians who are themselves making commercial use of the lovely symbols and signs and totems of the coastal tribes.

The master potter, and the leader of this movement, is a quietly-spoken man in middle age, who talks with great authenticity of the craft which he clearly loves, who has a rather wry sense of humor and who (like the tentmaker who lived a long time ago) intersperses his conversation with flashes of philosophy.

HIS NAME is David Lambert and he is the head of Lambert Potteries, Ltd., an establishment unique in Canada which operates along the lines of the best traditions of the 17th century English pottery shops.

Like these, his is a family concern (with 11 branches on the lower mainland between Vancouver and Sardis, where he lives), and the techniques and methods of manufacture are the very same simple ones that were developed, and used by craftsmen potters from the earliest days of ceramics.

The results of this lifetime of dedication to an ancient craft have exceeded his finest expectations in terms of commercial, as well as artistic, success. Originally a ceramic engineer (a man who understands WHY these artifacts are made) he became primarily a craftsman who simply makes these articles, and he seems to prefer the less pretentious title. In any case, Lambert products (small multi-use bowls, seven-inch plates, nine-inch and 12-inch plates, jugs, wheel-thrown mugs, steins, small coffee mugs, tumblers and jerry mugs, thrown bowls, egg cups, cream and sugar sets) are known all over the world.

THEY HAVE a character of their own as distinct and distinguished as the world famous potteries impart to their own products — as Spode, Crown Derby, Wedgwood and Worcester in England, and the porcelain of Sevres in France.

This singular achievement is attributable, not only to the quality of the work done by Lambert and his dozen or so assistants (who are themselves distinguished craftsmen and women and work on a part-time basis in his various workshops), but also to the designs which mark all their pottery products as indigenous to the soil of British Columbia.

Many spindle whorl designs come from the Salish Indians of the coast, others are liable to carry the Bear Crest of the Tsimshien people who live along the Skeena, the Beaver symbol of the Haida warriors, the Cannibal Bird, the Frog, the Grizzly Head, the Growing Nose Mask and the Killer Whale, the symbol of fearlessness to the Haida — who inhabit the Queen Charlotte Islands. There are many other designs, too numerous to mention, but it is of some interest that in David Lambert's opinion, the loveliest Indian designs are not those of the Haida, but of the lesser-known Kwakwaka'wakw.

PERHAPS the most interesting of all the designs, and perpetuated in British Columbia Christmas Cards and other products of particular, tourist appeal, are taken from the earliest artifacts.

ONE OF CANADA'S master craftsmen, David Lambert works at his trade, transferring Indian designs to his famous pottery.

L.A. Passport Agency

QUESTION: Please tell me how I can be certain my passport is okay and has not expired. It is a bit confusing. The passport I now have was issued in 1963 and I don't want to let it expire. LS

ANSWER: If your passport has been renewed, and you can be certain of this by checking the lower right hand corner of Page 2 for the multi-colored renewal stamp, it will expire in 1968 if issued in 1963, five years from date of issue. If it has not been renewed, then you may renew it at any time before its expiration in 1968, although in your case,

$1 buys more in New Zealand

The American tourist in New Zealand now receives more for his money.

N. F. Gouffe of San Francisco, senior New Zealand travel commissioner in the United States, explained that the November devaluation of the country's currency by 20 per cent means that the American tourist visiting New Zealand now pays 20 per cent less for everything — internal transportation, tours, hotel accommodation, food, services, sight-seeing and retail purchases.

Under the new official exchange rate NZ-$1 equals U.S. $1.12. The old rate was NZ $1 to U.S. $1.40.

DELAPLANE'S TRAVELS

Ski slopes hum at Lake Tahoe

By STAN DELAPLANE

LAKE TAHOE, Calif. — The latest thing on powder snow is the Shortee, a mini-ski 33 inches long. "Anyone can learn to ski on these in a couple of hours," say the ski instructors. "Later, if you want, you can graduate to the big boards."

The ski resorts are full now around this blue lake, a mile high in the Sierra. Since many skiers are young (and on short money), they've developed ways of cutting costs.

They come in rented camper-trucks. Hamburgers-and-chili is the snow diet. "If you buy beer in the big resorts, you'll be tapoca — tapped out," says Poor Richard, the skier. "What you must do is buy a few pop-top cans at the store. Cache them in the snow outside. Now find an empty glass at a table. Go out and pop a can and fill your glass. Go back inside and mingle."

"We are planning a trip to Europe this summer. But since the President has said he may tax foreign travel, we wonder."

ALL AGENCIES expect some discouragement of travel to Europe. But how much, no one predicts. The U.S. overseas airline investment in new planes is enormous — Pan Am and TWA have just borrowed a new half a billion dollars. They must fill seats. But I'd have an alternate plan in mind.

The inexpensive fares are to Mexico and Hawaii. If the travel ban goes on Europe, South American will boom.

"Do you tip tour directors? What if the director is the man who runs the travel agency?"

'Backside of Nowhere' an adventure in fishing

Fishermen in this space age are always dreaming of the day they can fish "the backside of nowhere," hoping to find untouched waters teeming with a variety of line-stripping, rod-anapping game fish yet to feel the sting of a treble hook.

The Braniff Outdoor Council has a suggestion for this rugged class of anglers. It's a jaunt to "nowhere" that's really "somewhere" when it comes to raw fishing adventure.

Imagine freshwater fish like the monster valentia that weigh more than 500 pounds. The payara, silver, high-jumping acrobat with fang-like teeth protruding above its upper jaw. Peacock bass, a regular bull of the water, as gaily colored as a parrot. Razor-jawed piranha on every cast. And last, but not least, a man-eating catfish nearly too large to boat.

These fabulous fish, and more, are the quarry on a safari beyond the Andes Mountains in Colombia, South America. This is the Llanos region, an almost endless plain stretching from the eastern slopes of the Andes to the mysterious Orinoco River jungles in Venezuela.

TWA excursion fares continue

Trans World Airlines announces it plans to continue its transcontinental "Discover America" excursion fares substantially at present levels until April 28. Increases originally were scheduled to become effective Jan. 1.

Under the proposed increases, a roundtrip jet flight between Los Angeles and New York, for example, would be raised from its present rate of $200 to $217.

COUPLES SAY 'I DO'

Vows read in weekend ceremonies

Souza-Anderson

A home in Long Beach awaits Mr. and Mrs. Fredrick M. Souza (nee Janice K. Anderson) who exchanged vows Saturday in Bethany Lutheran Church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Anderson, 3452 Elm Ave., and Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Souza, 2242 Poinsettia Ave.

The bride wore an empire gown of satin brocade with flowering train.

MIRIAM JOHN was maid of honor; Barry Buchmiller was best man. Ushers were James Rowe and Harold Purce.

A reception followed in the church hall. The newlyweds are graduates of Jordan High School. The bride attended Long Beach City College.

William Sweeney stood as best man for the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard P. Boutelier of Cypress and formerly of Long Beach. Judith Sweeney was maid of honor for her sister, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hope Sweeney of Melbourne.

The bridegroom is an alumnus of Millikan High School and attended Long Beach City College. He has completed a tour of duty in the U.S. Navy in Vietnam and will return to the U.S. in February. The bride will arrive in California in March.

Childs-Wiegner

A home in North Long Beach awaits Mr. and Mrs. Steven Allen Childs (nee Linda M. Wiegner) upon their return from a wedding trip to Big Bear.

Nuptial vows were exchanged by the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Wiegner, 320 E. 45th St., and son of Mr. and Mrs. William Childs, 4249 Redline Drive, Lakewood, Saturday in First Orthodox Presbyterian Church.

The bride was attired in a lace gown with train. Her attendants were Gloria Infante, Irene Young, Denese Steed and Sharon Smith. Terry La Valley was best man. Ushering guests were Elton Pearson, Jim Walker and Jerry Conrad.

The bride is an alumna of Jordan High School and attended Long Beach City College.

Antique show ready to open Thursday

REMINISCENT of the era of the Russian czars is carved Walnut lion sleigh chair to be exhibited at Antique Show and Sale. Betty Jean Gammel holds a rare glass vase, also among the unusual items for display.

DAILY DECORATED, carved wood horse is item that would fit into today's modern home as attractive reminder of years gone by. To be shown at Antique Show and Sale.

Antique buffs who like to shop through a wide variety of furniture, wall decoration, knick-knacks and other items from years gone by, can circle Thursday on their calendars... opening of the Long Beach Antique Show and Sale.

The event, scheduled for a four-day run at the Long Beach Municipal Auditorium, will have items on display from antique dealers throughout the Southland.

Hours will be 1 to 10 p.m. Thursday through Saturday; noon to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Air Force pair reveals engagement

A romance between two Air Force captains, Janice I. McKechney and John E. Howell, will be culminated in marriage.

Their engagement has been announced by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton McKechney of Lakewood. Parents of the prospective bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. John A. Howell of Bloomfield Hills, Mich.

Capt. McKechney was graduated from Bellflower High School and Pacific Lutheran University School of Nursing at Tacoma, Wash. She is stationed at Merced.

Her fiancé was graduated from University of Michigan School of Law at Ann Arbor and is a member of the California Bar Association.

May chosen for wedding

May 19 has been selected as their wedding date by Shirley Lorrain Burck and Noel Keith Newman, according to announcement by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wally D. Burck, Lakewood. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Newman, Old Glory, Tex.

The bride-elect attended Jordan High School and Long Beach City College. She is presently a stewardess with TWA. Her fiancé, an officer with the California Highway Patrol, graduated from CHP Academy with highest honors and was named valedictorian of his class.

JACOBY North's errors increase

The play at five hearts doubled was short but not sweet. South ruffed the spade lead in dummy and played ace and another high diamond in order to discard a spade. West ruffed and played a second high spade in order to force dummy again.

South cashed dummy's ace of trumps and played the king of clubs. West won and led a second club which East ruffed. West still had to make his king of trumps.

South was down two. There was no way to get five diamonds, and North and South got into a heated argument about the bidding. North said, "I don't need a nursemaid. When I bid five diamonds, I don't need trump support."

SOUTH SAID, "Why did you double with a one suit hand?" Eventually they turned the matter over to us for adjudication.

Before getting into the North-South bidding we want to call attention to East's two spade call. East and West were playing that they showed strength over a takeout double by redoubling.

Hence, East's two spade bid showed a weak hand but West could still afford to raise to game. Incidentally, four spades would have made with careful play.

NOW FOR the adjudication. We charge North 80 per cent and South 20 per cent wrong doing. We don't like North's takeout double at all. He couldn't stand spades and he didn't really like hearts. What he held was a good hand with solid diamonds.

He might have merely overcalled with two diamonds or he might have jumped right to five diamonds but he had nothing to gain from his double.

Where does South's 20 per cent come in? If South had thought things over carefully, he would have seen that if North wanted a choice between hearts and diamonds, North would have bid four not rump over four spades instead of the five diamonds he did bid.

MISS RULE: What is the background on SCHMID, SMITTER?—L.S., Paramount; R. S., Long Beach.

SCHMID and SMITTER were originally the German surname Schmidt, translated as "smith." The ancestor of both lineages was a worker in metals, since these names were shortened from artisan-titles such as "iron-smith," black-smith," "gold-smith," or "copper-smith." There were over 100 different "smith" trade names in medieval Germany. The Schmid armorial shield from Nurnberg, Bavaria, is black on the right half; gold on the left half, overlaid with the figure of a "smith" dressed in black and gold, holding a metal-hammer in his hand.

MISS RULE: Would appreciate data on HARVEY. —E.H., Artesia; P.H., Long Beach; C.H., Garden Grove.

HARVEY may be either Gaelic Irish, English or Scottish. The Irish origin was the Clan O'Hairmeadhaigh, meaning "Descendants of the cattle owner." This family goes back to a 4th century leader of Connaught. The Gaelic name was modernized 300 years ago to O'Harvey and Harvey. The English and Scottish Harvey ancestor was an early Englishman named Herwig, deciphered as "army warrior." The Scottish Harvey shield is gold, emblazoned with three silver crescent moons. OUR COVER

Pageants featuring attractive girls are commonplace nowadays. But coming up Saturday night in Garden Grove is a pageant "with a difference," as the sponsoring Jaycees advertise it. It is the statewide final of California's Junior Miss Pageant, with more than a score of regional winners competing. And it is not a beauty contest, the sponsors insist, but an event to select the ideal high school senior girl in California. From the looks of our cover photo, though, it is obvious that beauty is no handicap. For the cover girls are Rosemary Dunaway (left), America's Junior Miss of 1967 (she's from Arkansas), and Kay Kingsley of Salinas, the 1967 California Junior Miss. The picture was taken recently in Garden Grove. For more about the Junior Miss Pageant, turn to page 8.

STREAMERS of light from the rising sun pierced the mist as our Hanoi-bound passenger plane received the all-clear signal — "to come in fast and land at the designated field." This was recently when I — a Canadian businessman for an export-import firm — paid a brief visit to the capital of North Vietnam in company with others in my line of work from Great Britain and France.

Our tensions eased for the moment — convinced, as we were, that no American air raid on Hanoi was afoot or expected immediately. Soon after our arrival, however, Radio Hanoi informed us that pilots of MIG planes and crews for anti-aircraft batteries had those grinning couples let go! Even my two companions snapped their fingers in tune with the fast-beat music. Then it happened — Hanoi's secret police burst in, grabbed a total of 27 young couples, and shoved or dragged them toward the two exits.

That sudden interruption created much commotion and set tongues to babbling. After a certain measure of calm had been restored, the manager of the club went over and whispered to the leader of the musicians. In response to this, the leader gave the signal for the band to play slow, authentic music (North Vietnamese in its flavor).

After a brief exchange of North Vietnamese morals on "hateful American influences" — meaning, movies, songs, music and girly pornographic material. But some checking I did, quietly on the side, brought to light this fact: That nude photos, sexy publications and risqué movies are smuggled into Hanoi by BURMESE and INDIAN peddlers — definitely not by Americans!

On my third day in Hanoi eight traitors (two young draftees and six civilians) were executed near sunset (not at daybreak, as in some Oriental countries). This occurred at an isolated spot on the northern outskirts of Hanoi — only a short distance from where American planes have accompanied by much destruction, would bring Red China and Russia into the war "on a full-scale footing."

Some other smaller countries also have diplomatic, trade and religious missions housed in the heart of Hanoi. There can be no doubt about it; their presence there serves as a shield for central Hanoi. For if American planes were to damage or destroy these friendly properties, an outcry would go up around the world.

Since my country (Canada) maintains friendly relations with North Vietnam, my business contacts in Hanoi felt free to share two or three military secrets with me. One was:

As Told to Hoyt McAfee

"performed bravely for the Fatherland." This, it developed, had come to pass two hours earlier.

That same source added: "They pounced on the imperialist American raiders and drove them off. Six of the enemy (American) planes were shot down and four pilots captured."

Incidentally, Radio Hanoi and other sources close to the government insist that 2,217 American planes have been destroyed during air strikes on North Vietnam. U.S. Air Force officials, on the other hand, concede that only 709 have been lost up to this writing.

On my first night in bomb-damaged Hanoi, two of my North Vietnamese business contacts (I had corresponded with them for months) decided that "a spot of fun" would be in order. It was a club where mostly young people and free-wheeling diplomats in Hanoi hang out.

As we entered, one look told me that the place was jumping. Moments after we'd seated ourselves in a corner booth, a North Vietnamese band (its musicians wore bright, multi-colored garb) began playing lively music. To my ears, it had a decidedly rock-and-roll flavor.

Soon, the dance floor was crowded — and how with the manager, one of my business escorts returned to our booth. He confided in a low voice that the secret police had pulled off their raid because, in their sights, those 27 couples had "performed an obscene version of the American Twist!"

On my second night in Hanoi, at a lecture hall in the heart of the city, I heard the secretary of Lao Dan (Communist Party of North Vietnam) denounce "the spread of moral degeneracy among our young people." He singled out North Vietnamese soldiers, guerrillas, and the veterans of Ho Chi Minh Trail as the worst offenders.

Many of them — he seemed at pains to admit — "make a joke of marriage and let the opiate of free love warp their lives." Then his voice rose to a pitch of scorn and indignation as he described the "swarms of harlots infesting our city." His final accusation was that the "immoral throng" had "fallen for a pastime invented by the imperialist Americans."

(In the translation for my benefit, my two escorts identified it as "the term American GI's use" — shacking up!)

Everyone I spoke with, during my short visit to Hanoi, blamed the breakdown bombing oil deposits on their fast-swooping raids.

An eyewitness to it all told me that the executions were carried out in Red Chinese style. Each victim was blindfolded, then his hands were tied behind his back. After being thrust into an open field, he was forced to kneel. Then an officer of the North Vietnamese army stepped forward.

He placed his pistol against the back of the doomed man's head and, in response to a command from his superior, fired. With clenched fists and frenzied shouts North Vietnamese soldiers and a few select civilians acclaimed the grisly deed.

A "rejuvenated" Ho Chi Minh, Foreign Minister Nguyen Trini and other high-ranking officials of the government have spoken out loud, several times, about one "secret hope." To identify it: That American raiding planes, in their strikes against key targets in the Hanoi area, would become "overly bold and reckless."

And, in the process, bomb some of the buildings and quarters occupied by Red Chinese, Russian, Indian and other diplomats. All the wily North Vietnamese leaders are convinced that such a mistake,

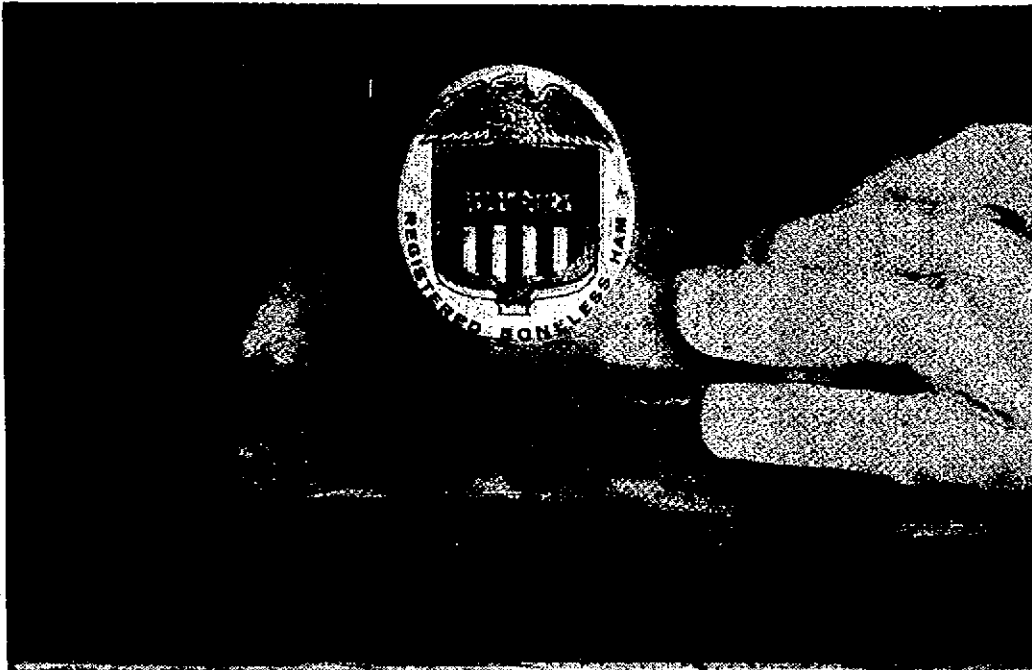

That North Vietnam's oil reserves and other war supplies have been carted off and stored in mountain hideaways.

They boasted, in conversations with me, that American photo reconnaissance and bombing planes will never locate these secret hiding places. With almost fatalistic calm they contended that North Vietnam can hold out, and wage hit-and-run warfare, "another 10 years — if our leaders so choose."

But I also heard hints, freely voiced about Hanoi, that Ho Chi Minh — "heeding a chorus of friendly voices" — might agree to a truce and peace talks with the Americans "soon." All those who made comments on the subject were convinced this would, in the long run, benefit North Vietnam — "her destiny and objectives as a nation." Recently, Foreign Minister Trini revealed in a Hanoi speech that 150,000 trained fighting men are ready to replace "those who've given heroic service to our Fatherland (North Vietnam) on jungle and fighting fronts in enemy territory." In a low, conspiratorial voice, he almost whispered that "our agents — armed with terror bombs

Murder's Her Game

By Jolee Edmondson

A DEAR, UNASSUMING old lady plotted her last murder two years ago.

Ninety-three-year-old Lee Thayer of Coronado, Calif., has been caught red-handed 61 times by Doubleday, Century Co., Page & Co., Joseph Sears & Co., and Dodd, Mead & Co. — not detective agencies, but book publishers.

The prolific writer of mysteries took to the pen when she was 45 "just as a lark." A friend encouraged her, saying, "There's nothing to writing a murder story — all you need is a plot."

So Lee took a holiday from work in New York City and visited her sister on Long Island. There she bought a tablet of ruled yellow paper and began planning.

For years she had tucked away in her mind an excellent murder plot and the title to go with it — "The Mystery of the 13th Floor." But the many intricacies of the story were yet to be worked out.

The name? What would be a good, catchy name for her hero-detective? She delved into her past, thought about the names she often had heard in New York and came up with "Peter Clancy." Clancy's partner would be his valet, Wiggan, a friend's friend's name. Both would wage a never-ending war against crime à la Sherlock Holmes and Watson.

Lee Thayer . . . She has plotted many a murder.

An intriguing sentence opened Lee's first book: "In God's name, amen," muttered an old lawyer dictating his will to his secretary." The secretary left the office only to return moments later to find her boss clutching a knife in his heart. Lee called upon Peter, and he took it from there.

"The Mystery of the 13th Floor" was grabbed by Century Co., and ever since the late-starting author has produced a novel, sometimes two a year, amounting to 61 killings. When her first attempt was accepted, she "still thought it was a joke, but they were serious and pretty soon so was I."

Mrs. Thayer, who never has had a book manuscript rejected, never has had a short story accepted. "That shouldn't be curious at all," she said. "It's like a portrait painter who can't do a miniature."

Lee's world has always been creative. Before she ventured into writing, she was an interior designer and then a highly successful artist in the now lost craft of stamp-case designs for book covers.

Before illustrated dust jackets took over in the book world, designs were imprinted right on the cloth cover. Lee and her husband owned a company in New York that catered to publishers, called Decorative Designers. Mrs. Thayer worked there as art director in her office — on the 13th floor.

The petite writer, her hands gesturing gracefully, implied that her writing technique was slightly unorthodox. She never outlined a story beforehand, she said, and never used a typewriter while figuring out a plot. Ever present was her trusty yellow pad of paper. It has remained her trademark.

Lee did, however, exhibit one trait that many other writers have. She wrote on scraps of paper ideas that popped into her head any time, any place. Her surroundings were so cluttered with fragments of potential stories that when it came time to write a new book, she had a bountiful source to draw from.

The little lady is amazing. She's 93, but could pass for 60. Few wrinkles crease her olive complexion, and glasses are something unheard of. A cane and a hearing aid are the only clues to her age. Lee's coiffure is always stylish, and her dress is particular. She stressed her wish not to "look like an old bag." Her conversation is sharp and her sense of humor is lavish. She even laughs an elfin laugh at the drop of a stale joke.

Asked if she had a secret formula for staying young, she straightened up and proudly stated, "Yes, they say I have a good constitution."

Lee Thayer is actually Mrs. Emma Reddington Thayer, known as Auntie Em to her friends. She lives with her niece, Mrs. Ira C.

Paralyzed Student Hopes to Fly Again

By Jing Ling Dai

HOPE TO FLY AGAIN.

"Without hope, there is not much purpose in going on in life. I think of my handicap as a temporary difficulty.

"If I thought otherwise, I would start feeling sorry for myself.

"I don't honestly believe that I'm going to get better. It'll be one chance in 10 million that I would.

"I try to disregard my disability and adjust to it."

Thus, Capt. Henry L. Thomas, a 1964 West Point graduate and a former pilot, soared above the clouds of uncertainty concerning his future as quadriplegic.

Thomas was an Army helicopter pilot trainee when he was injured in a water skiing accident in Mobile, Ala., on June 11, 1966.

The 27-year-old veteran has joined the increasing number of determined students attending California State College at Long Beach in wheel chairs.

The spinal cord of the boyish looking sportsman was injured at the level of the fifth cervical vertebra when he fell off the skis and struck his head in shallow water, paralyzing him from his chest down. Thomas has use of only the shoulder and arm muscles. He wears an adaptive hand brace, which enables him to write, using arm movements. He also has an electric hand grip, a new medical discovery, which he wears to pick up objects.

Thomas spent 15 months in hospitals — six of them at Letterman General Hospital in San Francisco, before he was transferred to the spinal cord injured section of Long Beach Veterans Administration Hospital.

When he was discharged from the hospital last September, Thomas decided to take the path forward, to return to college for a master's degree in aerospace management engineering. He could easily have taken the path of least resistance — inertia.

However, one thing almost prevented the West Point graduate from enrollment at Cal State: He did not have the strength to surmount the hills on the campus in his hand-propelled wheel chair.

Determined to attend the college, Thomas took his problem to Dr. Ernest Bors at the VA Hospital, although he knew Dr. Bors, known as "the father of the spinal cord injured in Long Beach," is opposed to the use of electric wheel chairs. The VA doctor advocates that spinal cord injured patients make optimum use of their muscles to prevent their deterioration. Patients with electric wheel chairs tend to get lazy.

"Since Dr. Bors did not want to prevent anyone from going to college because he couldn't get around, he let me have an electric wheel chair," said Thomas. Displaying the adventurer in him, the former Eagle Scout took a "test run" in his new wheel chair from the corner of Seventh Street and Bellflower Boulevard to the Marine Stadium.

"I almost caused a traffic jam. I just wanted to see if it would really hold up. It did," he said with a mischievous grin. His electric wheel chair operates on two 6-volt automobile batteries and can run for seven hours without recharging.

Again with characteristic alacrity, Thomas enrolled at the college for 11 units instead of the six units recommended by Dr. George Rhodes, VA counseling psychologist.

"Thomas was highly motivated even when he was first admitted here. He is extremely bright and alert," said Dr. Rhodes. "He is a good example of the success of the Veterans Administration's rehabilitation program, especially since he is severely disabled."

(The Long Beach hospital is the nation's center for the treatment of the spinal cord injured; it has a 205-bed unit in the newly built wing. The hospital, now the second largest general medical and surgical hospital in the VA system, will, when completed, have a 1,700-bed capacity.)

Thomas, who was discharged from the Army in February, can be seen whizzing across the college campus in his wheel chair, stopping to ask a student to open the gate leading to the VA Hospital grounds, and disappearing behind the bushes.

He must return to the hospital every other morning for medical care and twice a week for both passive and corrective physiotherapy. This consumes about four hours each visit. He was able to schedule his classes around his treatment periods.

If you were to follow Thomas from morning to night,

California's Junior Miss Fete —a Pageant with a Difference

By Jean Ludlow

TURN ON TELEVISION. Open the newspaper. Chances are you'll see something about another beauty contest winner.

There's Miss International Beauty, Miss America, Miss Universe, Miss World, Miss See Georgia First and scores more.

In an age when beauty pageants are so prevalent, why all the excitement in Garden Grove this week over the California Junior Miss Pageant, to be held Saturday at 8 p.m. in Garden Grove High School Auditorium?

Pageant officials are quick to explain there is a difference in the Junior Miss program. It is not a beauty pageant. This program, sponsored by various local Junior Chamber of Commerce organizations, seeks to honor the "ideal high school senior girl" for qualities of scholarship, mental alertness, poise, appearance, youth fitness and talent in the creative and performing arts.

The Junior Miss Story began in Mobile, Ala. America's Junior Miss Pageant grew out of Mobile's famous Azalea Trail Court. Originally, it only recognized senior high school girls in that city. Later it was expanded to include girls from other southern communities. The response was so enthusiastic that it has become a national effort. Jaycees and other civic organizations sponsor community and state pageants in search of the Junior Miss who will represent their state. The Garden Grove Junior Chamber of Commerce was awarded the franchise for the California Junior Miss Pageant from America's Junior Miss Pageant in 1962. The pageant has grown in importance each year, and for the last three years has been cited by America's Junior Miss organization as the "most outstanding pageant in the nation."

In search of the state's "ideal high school girl," a panel of eminent judges will spend the better part of three days in Garden Grove to judge the Junior Misses in depth. They spend many hours with the girls in formal interviews and informal social occasions. They also score all on-stage competition. This year's panel of judges includes: Dr. Richard Clowes, superintendent of the Los Angeles County Schools; Ed Meador, outstanding Los Angeles Ram football player; Sally Sherbin, Disneyland's world ambassador for 1968; Dr. Tod Anton, superintendent of the Hillsborough School District and a past president of the California Junior Miss board of directors; and Glenellen

The 1967 California Junior Miss, Kay Kingsley of Salinas, with Garden Grove's Vice Mayor Kathryn Barr and Mayor George Honold.

1966 winner, Naomi Kohatsu of Santa Maria.

1965 winner, Karen Frank of Oakland.

1964 winner, Stephanie Lee of Anaheim.

1963 winner, Kim Carnes of Pasadena.

1962 winner, Glenellen Cooper of Garden Grove.

Cooper, 1962 California Junior Miss and a first runner-up in the national competition.

The purpose of the program is to find the "ideal high school senior girl" in order to emphasize the highest qualities and ideals of our youth. To do this, the judges will be scoring the girls with the following emphasis:

Judges' Conference (35%). Each girl has a private interview with the judges during which time she is asked a number of questions on a wide variety of subjects. She is scored for her breadth of knowledge, her ability to think and reason, and her ability to express herself verbally. These "mental alertness" interviews will be sandwiched into the rehearsal schedule.

Scholastic Achievement (15%). This category is handled by a separate panel of prominent educators, this year including: Frank Starnes, associate superintendent of instruction for the Garden Grove Unified School District; Dr. Edward Beaubier, superintendent of the Fountain Valley School District; and Charles Kenney, superintendent of the Capistrano Valley Unified School District. These educators will determine the degree of scholastic achievement by reviewing transcripts, by analyzing the academic subjects, by studying scores received on standardized tests and by other related criteria.

Poise and Appearance (15%). Junior Misses are judged for ease, dignity, grace and composure, grooming, and good taste. Each girl appears in an evening gown during this part of the pageant.

Youth Fitness (15%). Each girl, attired in sportswear, will do a simple routine developed by Marlene Martin, official choreographer. It is designed to test coordination, dexterity, balance, agility and stamina, correct posture and carriage, and will reveal the girl's personal appearance in the sportswear.

Creative and Performing Arts (20%). Talent presentations for the Creative and Performing Arts category are judged on originality, technical ability, appropriateness of selection of costume, performance, and presentation.

Twenty-two Junior Misses will arrive in Garden Grove Wednesday from as far north as Del Norte County and as far south as San Diego. Their biographies read like something out of a "Junior Who's Who." They are honor students and cheerleaders, queens and editors, singers and social workers. They represent virtually every spectrum of student activity. They are the "top," the "ideal" girls from their high school, their local community and their greater county area. Already, they have won the Junior Miss crowns in their own local and district pageants. These pageants throughout the state have involved some 1,000 girls who have competed in approximately 100 local and 22 district pageants.

"You are in for a whirlwind week of luncheons, dinners, rehearsals and more rehearsals, and meeting many new friends," wrote reigning Junior Miss Kay Kingsley of Salinas to the girls participating in the 1968 pageant.

As an incentive and a reward for accomplishment, the winner is provided a scholarship to further her education. The 1968 California Junior Miss will receive a $1,000 scholarship from the Coca-Cola Bottlers Council of California-Nevada.

From Chevrolet Division of General Motors, she will receive a $500 savings bond and a matched set of luggage for her trip to the national finals in Mobile, Ala., in mid-March. She also will receive a Kodak camera and a Breck Beauty kit in addition to special gifts donated by "Friends of Junior Miss."

The reigning California Junior Miss appears at a number of public affairs throughout the year, including State Jaycee board meetings and conventions, local and district Junior Miss pageants, and various parades, including the Garden Grove Strawberry Festival Parade.

The first four runners-up will share $1,000 in savings bonds (based on their respective finishes), donated by Chevrolet as well as cameras given by the Ko-

New Zealand Collectors' Coins

By Maurice M. Gould

FINALLY A COUNTRY is thinking of its coin collectors.

Great credit should be given to the government of New Zealand, which is giving free to each registered coin club member of the country a 2-cent piece which has sold as high as from $45 to $280 each.

This coin is a New Zealand error coin on which the striking of Bahama's 5-cent piece over the New Zealand 2-cent piece made an unusual error. It was discovered on the decimal changeover day in New Zealand last July 10.

An estimated 60,000 of these pieces were recovered by treasury officials, most of which will be melted down after the collectors receive their numismatic prizes.

One of the reasons this was done by the government was to stop profiteering and speculation on this unusual coin.

While the government declared these so-called "mules" are not legal tender, they may still be exchanged at banks for a genuine 2-cent piece, if anyone is foolish enough to do so.

Not many got into circulation because most were stored in the reserve bank of New Zealand.

One of the reasons these coins are so unusual is that they were struck at London's Royal Mint, where the striking of coins is done for many countries and every precaution is taken to avoid such a situation.

Wouldn't it have been fantastic if our government had given each U.S. collector one of the 1955 double-die cents which are now selling for $200 or more?

THE AMERICAN Numismatic Authentication Trust is being established. Serving as trustees are three of America's best-known and most reliable numismatists.

A $50,000 fund is required to set up the service, to be located in Washington, D.C., or New York City, both of which have access to the coins and reference libraries needed for this project.

This service will mean that those purchasing rare and valuable coins can have them checked as to their genuineness, and a permanent record and photo will be kept in the files of the organization, with a pedigree given to the piece checked.

Behind the Scenes in Hanoi

and devices — circulate freely, at this very moment, in Da Nang, Hue and Saigon."

During my abbreviated stay in bomb-plagued Hanoi I saw several giant-like and obscene caricatures of President Johnson, Gen. Westmoreland and others described, invariably, as "American war mongers." They are displayed prominently on public buildings in the heart of the city. People walking the streets often pause in front of them, then jeer and make insulting gestures.

A business acquaintance in Hanoi admitted to me that there are two "very important, interlocking air-raid shelters" within the city. They're reserved for Ho Chi Minh, Gen. Giap (the fighting leader of North Vietnamese forces), Foreign Minister Trinh and other government bigwigs — for their use in case of a "desperate emergency." My source of information insisted that these underground fortresses are stocked with enough food and other essential supplies to last six months.

ON THE DAY that eight captured American airmen were paraded through Hanoi, the government's paid propagandists and hecklers shouted: "Death for these war criminals!" But droves of plain, everyday people standing near me lowered their heads sadly and refused to join the outcry.

I heard several of them murmur: "Their war leaders are to blame — not these pilots who carried out their orders." My two escorts, in their translations, were honest enough to repeat exactly what the "dis-senters" said.

That was beyond question the most hopeful note I observed during my stay in Hanoi. For if enough of those clear-thinking, everyday people make their voices heard, North Vietnamese leaders will, increasingly, be more receptive to peace-talk proposals. Those advanced by prominent world leaders and neutral diplomats.

(Reporter's Note: After Malcolm Wilson's return from Hanoi recently, he stopped off for a one-day visit with a close friend of mine in Yuma. I hurried down there and had him describe what he saw, heard and observed in the North Vietnamese capital — impressions as set forth in this article.)

To Become Immune, Just Breathe a Mist

By Ben Zinser

Southland Magazine Medical-Science Editor

A CHICAGO RESEARCHER has developed a new method of immunization.

Groups of people are immunized against tuberculosis by inhaling a vaccine in a mist-filled room.

Dr. Sol R. Rosenthal, who perfected the method, believes it now possible to immunize children painlessly as they sit in a classroom or movie theater. The youngsters simply inhale vaccine droplets floating in the mist.

Dr. Rosenthal is professor of preventive medicine and director of the Institution for Tuberculosis Research at the University of Illinois.

He thinks that the inhalation method can be applied eventually to other diseases — such as measles, whooping cough and influenza — in which the respiratory tract is the natural route of infection.

A report on Dr. Rosenthal's work appears in Medical World News, newsmagazine for physicians.

His subjects, mostly children more than 5 years old, were vaccinated in groups of 15 in a room in which a nebulizer sprayed a mist containing BCG tuberculosis vaccine suspended in water droplets.

Droplets were so small they could carry the vaccine to the tiniest and deepest recesses of the lung.

Subjects sat in the room for 45 minutes, breathing the vaccine spray for 30 minutes and fresh air for 15.

A TEMPLE University physician says that at least 20 years of research are needed before birth-control pills can be prescribed "without some reservations as to safety."

Dr. Michael B. Shimkin, who formerly was a cancer researcher for the U.S. Public Health Service for 25 years, notes that The Pill contains estrogen, a female hormone which has produced breast cancer and leukemia in mice.

"This does not mean it will produce breast cancer in women," he says, "but does indicate the need for more research before anyone is foolhardy enough to recommend its use without reservation."

He was challenged by Dr. Robert B. Greenblatt of Medical College of Georgia who asserted that hormones do not cause cancer.

THE AMERICAN Thoracic Society has issued a strong statement concerning the hazards of cigarette smoking.

The statement says in part: "There is abundant evidence that the life span is reduced and risk of dying from lung cancer, bronchitis and coronary artery disease is significantly greater among cigarette smokers and can be related to duration and intensity of cigarette consumption."

"Furthermore, the increased risk of dying of coronary heart disease diminishes when smokers stop cigarette smoking, and falls to normal during 10 years of abstinence."

"Therefore, a clear argument can be presented to intelligent smokers, well supported by available data, that their well-being and life span will improve progressively during abstinence from cigarette smoking."

TWO NEW STUDIES show that a relatively new antibiotic, dicloxacillin, is proving to be a highly effective treatment agent.

In a total of 128 patients treated with the drug, eradication of the infecting organism was accomplished in 97 per cent.

This was reported by Dr. Nathan Firestone of Tulane University Medical School to the Seventh Interscience Conference on Antimicrobial Agents and Chemotherapy.

Separate studies were conducted at the Keesler Air Force Base Hospital in Mississippi and at Tulane in New Orleans.

The drug, developed in England, was mainly beneficial against "strep" infections of the upper respiratory tract and of "staph" infections of soft tissue.

It is not yet available for general prescription.

ANOTHER kind of mushroom has been found able to produce "mind-shaking" effects.

Called Pholiota spectabilis, the mushroom is generally not eaten because of its bitter taste.

A researcher reports in New England Journal of Medicine that a Massachusetts resident discovered the mushroom's effect by accident.

Mistaking it for a good-tasting type, the person fried a few and ate them. Within 15 minutes the subject said he felt woozy and that objects looked "shimmery" with peculiar color changes.

The subject's wife and a neighbor also ate some. The wife felt "giggly" and the neighbor felt as if she had a jag on.

The agent in the mushroom that caused these effects has not been identified.

A PORTABLE DEVICE that will measure the amount of injurious noise a person is exposed to during a day has been developed. Called a noise dosimeter, it can be worn on the job or carried in a coat pocket.

Doctors are becoming increasingly concerned about noise pollution.

Dr. N. G. Torénalm of Malmö General Hospital, Malmö, Sweden, inventor of the dosimeter, says:

"The exact dose of injurious noise that a person is exposed to during a day or week is of great importance in evaluating the potential risk for hearing loss."

West Point Graduate Hopes to Fly Again

you would discover that he has an unusually busy schedule, which begins before 7 and ends usually well into the evening.

After a patient is discharged, the amount of physiotherapy depends chiefly upon his own initiative.

"Hank is very cooperative and always cheerful. He is well liked by everyone," said Sylvia Rosenberg, VA physiotherapist, as she gave Thomas passive exercises. These exercises, given him without his aid, are important to maintain range of movement, prevent muscle contractions and prevent muscle deterioration.

Thomas grimaced as Mrs. Rosenberg performed kneechest exercises so his body would not get stiff, enabling him "to be bent into a sitting position."

In corrective therapy, Thomas pulls 20-40 pound weights. A strap is placed around each gloved hand and hooked to a pulley, anchored by the weights. He also does "standing" exercises. He is lifted to a standing position, a strap is placed around his waist and hooked to a podium-like stand. "It is important that I stand to prevent my body from absorbing the calcium, causing possibly brittle bones, kidney and bladder stones."

Taking this rigorous daily regimen in a matter-of-fact manner, Thomas kibitzes with his hospital buddies and jokes about his return to college: "You've heard of the Student Prince? I'm the 'Student Clod.'"

A clod he is not. Much to his own surprise, he scored 96, out of a possible 100, in an engineering exam, which he took in the same time allotted the rest of his class, in spite of his handwriting handicap.

An honor student while at West Point, Thomas hopes to take all his tests competitively with other students in the same given time. In his statistics course, he had planned to have a "neutral" student transcribe for him at the midterm exam because it involves many computations. Just before the exam period, his "pinch hitter" was unable to show up so Thomas did it himself.

Is his statistics course jinxed? Just before a previous exam, he discovered his slide rule had become warped from being under the sun. Bending with the wind, Thomas takes in his stride these little kinks in his path forward. Like an inventor enthused with each new discovery, Thomas finds with surprise that he is able to do more and more things by himself. He has improvised short cuts. He designed the rod on which his slide rule is mounted.

The friendly and modest graduate student, who hopes to complete his master's degree at either Stanford or UCLA, finds professors and students very cooperative and helpful. He usually finds a friend to take lecture notes for him. He supplies the note taker with carbon-backed paper so he can take notes on the top sheet and give Thomas the duplicate. "This works out very well," he said, explaining that it takes him twice as much time to do his homework because of his handicap.

"I would encourage anyone who hesitates to continue his education because of his handicap to disregard the disability and continue, especially at Long Beach State. The college is specifically equipped to handle the handicapped," Thomas said.

Most of the buildings at Cal State have elevators or ramps for wheel chairs. There is also a special counseling service to help the handicapped with rehabilitation.

Self-acceptance and indomitable courage, flavored with a keen sense of humor and an art of communication, have hallmarked Thomas' successful rehabilitation.

But this does not mean Thomas did not have moments of despair. "At first I thought, 'This isn't so bad. Tomorrow I'll get better.'" Then, in the second or third months he realized terrifying moments of stark reality. "I knew then that I was honestly paralyzed — that my chances for recovery were remote."

Dr. George Rhodes, VA Hospital counseling psychologist, chats with Thomas about his studies in front of the new unit of the hospital.

His morale was at its lowest ebb then. He didn't think he could see his way out of the labyrinth of paralysis.

"At that same time my West Point classmates passed through San Francisco to go to Vietnam. I wanted so much to go. I felt like a football player threatened with retirement. It was a real blow. I was in training so long to serve my country. I had always pictured myself as having a career in the Army."

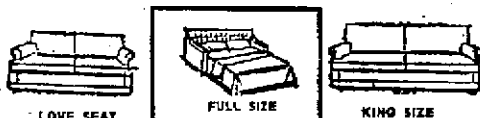

The Army is no stranger to Thomas — his father served 30 years as an Army doctor.

Now, Thomas is determined to become an aerospace engineer. And, if his hopes are realized, he will fly a glider with a servotype system. He has already written to two glider companies seeking a sponsor.

A pilot's most valuable asset might be his manual dexterity, but Thomas may prove that artificial dexterity is as efficient.

Henry L. Thomas, Army captain, member of the National Ski Patrol, cross-country skier and ski jumper, scuba diver, soccer player, sky diver, lacrosse champion, and pilot, may someday conquer the skies again.

Beef With Foreign Airs

By Mildred K. Flanary Southland Magazine Home Economics Editor

BECAUSE CALIFORNIA beef is so versatile, adaptable and ever popular, it's the hostess' choice when planning parties. And to give extra interest and distinction to party menus, try these ideas borrowed from some of the world's greatest culinary traditions.

Oriental dishes with their harmonious balance of color, texture and spices are always fun to serve guests. Here we've marinated flavorful flank steak in ginger accented soy sauce before broiling. Slice the steak into thin diagonal strips and serve over rice with a fragrant, colorful sauce of canned pineapple chunks and syrup combined with the marinade. The beauty of Oriental entrees for parties is the quick preparation time.

A favorite of visitors and skiers in the Austrian Tyrol is this unusual version of beef fondue. Choose lean top sirloin to cut into chunks for cooking in a boiling herb and wine flavored broth. After a minute or two, the beef is ready to dip into a trio of piquant sauces. It's a wonderful idea for intimate little dinners and a nice change from the usual cooked-in-oil beef fondues.

ORIENTAL PINEAPPLE FLANK STEAK

Broiled strips of steak mingle with a colorful pineapple sauce in this quick to do party dish.

- 1 (1½ to 2-pound) flank steak
- 1 clove garlic
- 1 tblsp. grated onion
- ¾ cup dry sherry
- 1½ tblsp. soy sauce
- 1½ tblsp. catsup
- Preserved ginger
- 1 beef bouillon cube
- ½ cup water
- 1 (1-pound, 4½ ounce) can pineapple chunks
- 5 tsp. cornstarch
- 2 tsp. wine vinegar

Score flank steak and place in shallow pan. Combine crushed garlic with onion, wine, soy sauce, catsup and 1 tablespoon syrup from preserved ginger. Pour over steak. Turn beef to coat both sides. Let stand 1 hour or longer. Drain well, reserving marinade. Broil steak about 5 minutes on each side or to desired degree of doneness. Dissolve bouillon cube in water and combine with marinade and ½ cup syrup drained from pineapple. Heat to boiling. Add cornstarch mixed with remaining syrup from pineapple. Cook, stirring, until mixture thickens and clears. Stir in vinegar, pineapple chunks and 1 tablespoon slivered preserved ginger. Heat thoroughly. Cut steak into thin slices diagonal to grain. Top with pineapple sauce. Makes about 6 servings.

BEEF FONDUE

This unusual fondue dips beef chunks in herb flavored broth instead of oil—the broth may be used as soup after the beef is cooked.

- 1 (10½-ounce) can beef broth
- 1½ cups white table wine
- 1 thinly sliced onion
- 1 halved clove garlic
- 1 cup coarsely chopped celery and celery tops
- 3 sprigs parsley
- 1 whole clove
- ½ tsp. salt
- ½ tsp. cracked pepper
- ½ tsp. thyme
- ½ tsp. tarragon
- 2 pounds lean top beef sirloin
- Horseradish Sauce
- Mustard Mayonnaise
- Sweet Sour Sauce

Combine all ingredients except beef and sauces; simmer 5 minutes. Cover and let stand 2 hours. Strain. Heat to boiling in fondue pot. Trim fat from beef and cut into bite-size cubes. Spear beef with fondue forks. Cook in hot broth 1½ to 2 minutes. Serve with sauces. Makes 4 servings.

HORSERADISH SAUCE: Combine 1 cup dairy sour cream, 1 teaspoon prepared horseradish, 1 tablespoon chopped chives and ¾ tsp. seasoned salt.

MUSTARD MAYONNAISE: Combine ¾ cup mayonnaise, 1 tablespoon chopped green onion, 1 teaspoon prepared mustard and 1 drop liquid red pepper seasoning.

SWEET SOUR SAUCE: Combine 1 cup catsup, 3 tablespoons wine vinegar, 1 teaspoon sugar and a dash salt.

Junior Miss Pageant

dak Co. In addition, Chevrolet presents to each participant a medallion as a remembrance of her trip to the state pageant.

The pace is brisk for these young visitors. They arrive Wednesday at Pageant Headquarters, the Holiday Inn in Orange, to be met by their host families. They will leave that evening with a cortege of supporters for the Forum in Inglewood where John Kent Cooke is sponsoring "Junior Miss Night" at the Kings' ice hockey game.

Thursday the girls will rehearse their youth fitness routine, have lunch at Pacifica High School in Garden Grove, and then go to the home of California Junior Miss board member Mrs. Lon Peek, Huntington Beach, to prepare party tables for a Friday party in their honor. At the same time, the girls will tape short messages about themselves for use during the Saturday pageant. At 3:30 p.m. Thursday they will hold a press conference and at 7 p.m. they will attend the Garden Grove Evening Kiwanis Club dinner.

Friday it's more rehearsals and mental alertness interviews until the Exchange Club luncheon in their honor. It's back to rehearsals in the afternoon with only a "break" to see Kay Kingsley and Garden Grove Jaycee President John Long appear on the Tom Frandsen Show (Channel 4, 3:30 p.m.). That night, "Friends of Junior Miss" will be invited to the Pecks' elegant home for an open house in honor of the girls. Each girl will have prepared a Scott Paper Party Plan and her party table decorations will be displayed around the Pecks' indoor swimming pool. This and a hair style they have developed for the Breck contest will be judged by women of the press and the fashion world. Both the Scott Paper Co. and the John H. Breck Co. are national sponsors of Junior Miss along with Chevrolet and Eastman Kodak Co.

The Junior Miss contestant submitting the winning entry in the Scott Hostess Contest will receive a $250 scholarship and an engraved silver tray. Winner of the Breck Hair Styling Contest will receive beauty and grooming aids, an encyclopedia-dictionary and a year's supply of Breck products. Both winning entries will be submitted for national competition, also.

The girls will be up early Saturday morning to attend a breakfast in their honor sponsored by the Active 20-30 Club of Garden Grove. More interviews and rehearsals follow.

More than 100 couples already have become "Patrons of the Pageant." They will receive invitations to Mrs. Peek's open house and to a pre-pageant reception, and will be provided "blue ribbon" seating, reserved parking, recognition in the state program and, according to ticket chairman Mrs. Sam Sparks, "the satisfaction of knowing they are supporting an outstanding program for youth." Patron seats are available at $12.50 a person.

Several hundred more persons are buying reserved seats, located directly behind the patrons' section, for $5. General admission seating is being sold on a "first-come, first-served" basis for $2. Tickets may be available at the door, but Mrs. Sparks suggests that anyone wishing to attend contact her in advance to avoid disappointment. She can be reached at the Garden Grove Chamber of Commerce.

When the curtain rises at 8 p.m. Saturday on the California Junior Miss Pageant finals in Garden Grove High School Auditorium, the hearts of the 22 girls will be filled with promise and hope. The program they'll be appearing in is being produced by Greg Killingsworth of Long Beach, who has worked closely with the sponsoring Garden Grove Jaycees and the board of the California Junior Miss Pageant.

Half of the judging will be over. Results of scholastic achievement and mental alertness will have been determined already by the judges. The deciding factor is now their participation in the pageant itself. Each girl participates in a youth fitness routine and a talent presentation and makes a "poise" appearance in an evening gown.

When the presentations are concluded and the judges' votes are in, an accountant armed with an adding machine will tabulate the results. The big moment arrives.

The individual category winners are named. The winner of the "Spirit of Junior Miss" scholarship is announced. The "Top Ten" finalists become known. The first four runners-up are declared, and then comes the electrically charged moment when the envelope is opened and master of ceremonies Steve McAndrew says, "Ladies and gentlemen, meet California's ideal high school senior girl, California's Junior Miss for 1968."

Happy Hallaians at Home

By Ellen Krec

Mrs. Ronald G. Hallaian and son Gregory share floor of family room.

—Staff Photos by BOB SHUMWAY

THE Hallaians all are happy! They received equal time in the decorating scheme and will all share the balance when the home in Rossmoor is completed.

When the Ronald G. Hallaians purchased the home in Rossmoor, it was sorely in need of improvement — where to begin was a problem.

The decision to buy was easy; they liked the Golden Estates model and they had wanted to move to Rossmoor from Seal Beach. After that everything changed and they wonder occasionally "why we bought it."

The large 100-by-150-foot corner lot allows for a well-placed "white house."

Contrast comes in landscaping and texture change with a wide slat overhang surrounding the front exterior which allows an interesting shadow form on the white double-door entry. A low pebblestone porch contains urns of azaleas and a white wrought iron love seat. The pebblestone continues in a path to the rear of the home.

The only exterior remodeling to date was the removal of the long narrow window and the addition of a solid white combed brick panel chimney. The combed brick also forms the side rail for the porch. A white rock roof tops the house.

Hahn's ivy borders the house and the street garden with a wrap of low juniper at the driveway. Cluster palms mix with flax and bamboo at the entry.

A rise at the house corner is planted with ornamental grass and flax.

In fairness the Hallaians decided to decorate the bedrooms first since Rhonda, 10, and Gregory, 3 months, each needed a room. But before they could start the bedrooms, they redecorated the guest bath on the way!

Everything changed in the bath "that needed the most help." Walls were torn out, new fixtures were added, as were shell pink vinyl flooring and pink flocked wallpaper. The gaping bathtub was enclosed with etched glass doors. Touches of hot pink were included and the Hallaians were on the way down the hall to the bedrooms.

The master bedroom was developed from the gold hibiscus branch mural above the contemporary inlaid walnut bed. Avocado carpeting provides a cool base for the room with warm gold silk tiebacks covering the white silk draw draperies.

A high ceiling in the bedroom leaves a single beam at one end of the slope.

"One of our best changes was added here," says Mrs. Hallaian. "A louvered door exit to the garage. With an electronic garage door and an entrance to the house from the garage, we never get wet in the rain."

Bright green and yellow print wallpaper in the companion bath coordinates the rooms. A scalloped green with gold braid shade closes the window and the peninsula sink leaves space for comfortably sharing the dressing room-bath.

Hearts and flowers, birds and butterflies abound in Rhonda's dream room. All little girl but thoughtfully planned for big-girl transition is the white French provincial canopy bed and fixed unit.

Fluffy pink carpet underfoot is the same shade of pink as the "hearts of love" pattern wallpaper, matching bedspread and draperies, but the print also includes a bit of lavender and gold.

Rhonda really is a dream girl, according to her parents, since she is sole custodian of her own room and "she is more fussy than any of the others in the house!"

She likes to keep her room in order with every doll ever owned accounted for on the shelves and still in perfect condition.

A ballerina by Malo has the right hot pink leotards to match the room colors. Other art is changed according to taste, and so far "The Beatles have been replaced by the Monkees — and who knows who will be next?" says her mother.

Swimming pool dominates large patio.

adults since it is played very easily by number.

Rhonda's worry at the moment is not the upkeep of her lovely room but her little brother's growth. At this point her plans include a lock on her door as soon as he begins to walk!

"I REALLY had fun with the nursery," says Mrs. Hallaian who also takes credit for all the room changes. "We wanted a boy and I just went ahead and decorated for one."

Powder blue walls with royal blue carpeting and draperies are the basic decor, but added touches are the single wallpapered wall with stylized dark green dogs and ducks, red cows and blue elephants. The dark blue elephants with red flowers were applied to a blue felt valance that is outlined in citron and ball fringe.

White French provincial canopy crib has blue and white check quilt coverlet. The three-tier matching dressing table "saves many a backache," says Mrs. Hallaian.

Little boy accents are a pole lamp turned clothes rack and the pull-away Raggedy Ann and Andy toy chest in the red and blue colors used in the room.

The shades of blue room overlooking the pool and bordering the kitchen is a softly pleasant family room. The small room was furnished carefully with a blue-green tweed sofa and floral print chair. Two hexagonal tables serve as coffee tables as well as additional seats when the silk pillows move from bottom shelf to top. A long narrow table was placed under the window away from traffic flow. The sloped ceiling above the Roman mural drops low to the glass door exit.

Royal blue carpeting base gives depth but blends with the antique satin draperies. The valance topping the draperies was influenced by the mural with gold tassels at the edge of the scalloped trim.

The U-shaped kitchen required little change from the birch cabinets to the copper appliances, but the Hallaians added white shutters to the wide windows over the pool. An unusual carved-urn-top on each shutter brings the Roman influence into the food-preparation center.

"COOKING isn't quite so bad from this kitchen," says Mrs. Hallaian. "I have a special view of our 'pregnant kidney pool' with the Individual waterfall flowing into our fish pond."

A cinder block fence bordering the neighbor's yard and a grapestake fence at the street side posed only a temporary problem when the Hallaians decided to incorporate both textures in the rear fence. Columns of cinder blocks divide panels of grapestake giving continuity with face change.

Contoured gardens of tropical shrubs and trees surrounded the wide concrete patio.

The pool equipment is hidden from view in a green and white metal house.

"Most of our entertaining is outside so we added a grass-roofed tiki hut for outdoor refreshment facilities," says Mrs. Hallaian. The bar and furniture are all rattan with the natural elements fitting snugly in the tropical foliage.

A terrazzo floor in the foyer turns to become the fireplace hearth and wall. A grille divider gives light privacy to the entry.

The A-frame living-dining room is the "stopping place" temporarily.

With color decision made, royal blue carpeting was added but the balance of the decorating will wait until the "happy Hallaians" firm up plans as well as budget!

Students saw this redwood, about 250 feet tall and 6 feet in diameter at base, fall to chainsaw of Simpson Timber Co. logger Cliff Edwards.

Youngsters, Lumberjacks and Redwoods

Photos by Ted Hamilton

By Don Carlton

EUREKA — In the minds of most children, lumberjacks are story-book characters something like Paul Bunyan.

But for thousands of children here in the forested northwest corner of California, lumberjacks are flesh-and-blood men who get a "Hi, dad," when they come home after work.

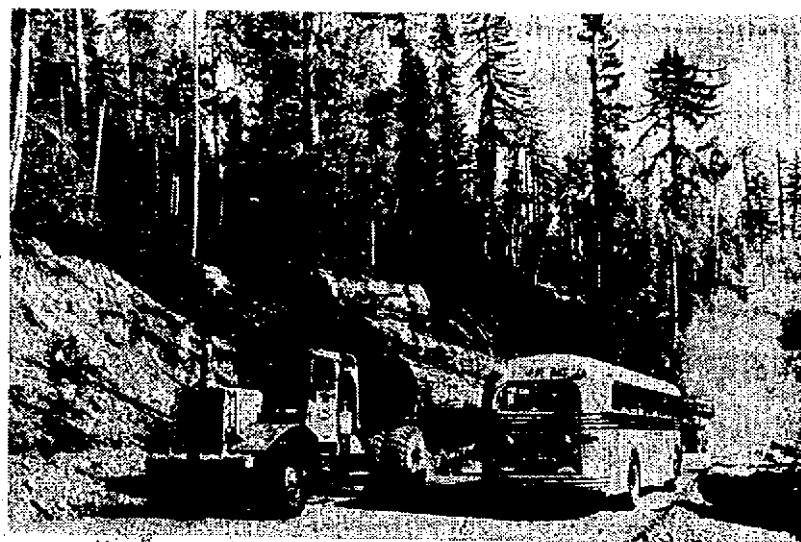

Sixty Eureka elementary school students had a chance to see the world of chainsaws and logging trucks in action, when they rode a school bus into the woods of Humboldt County.

The scene was Simpson Timber Co. land northeast of Eureka, in the heart of the Redwood Empire. The logging they witnessed was occurring just a few hundred feet away from the boundary of the redwood national park proposed by the Sierra Club.

The two classes of sixth graders boarded their big yellow bus minutes after arriving at school in Eureka. From there they traveled to the Simpson Timber Co. plant at Korb, near Arcata, for a brief introduction to what they would see during the day.

Huge "cold decks" of logs, piled for winter cutting, dwarfed the bus. Some 17 million board feet of redwood timber is stacked at the Simpson yard, nearly all of it in virgin, old-growth redwood hundreds of years old. Many of the logs are eight feet thick and contain enough lumber to build a small home.

After Simpson logging superintendent Lou Blaser explained why the logs are stockpiled (to carry the mills through the wet winter weeks when logging is impossible) the bus trip

It's a wide road, but school bus driver and timber truck driver are extra cautious. The trucks are used only on company roads.

En route to a cutting operation the bus passed logging trucks carrying pyramid piles of timber to the mill. Often the bus had to stop on narrow turnouts as the loaded trucks rumbled by, taking up most of the roadway.

Sixteen miles from the Korb mill and cold deck, the trip ended. The site was overlooking a creek valley near famed Redwood Creek, the heart of the national redwood park now being debated in the halls of Congress. Where the children were, however, cutting of virgin redwoods continues.

A LOGGING "landing" was the first stop. There trees which have been felled and bucked (cut into shorter sections) are dragged by bulldozer tractors, picked up by claws on the end of cables, and gently lowered onto the backs of trucks.

The equipment is big. Some redwood logs weigh 10 tons or more; five or six may be stacked on a truck for shipment to the mill. Such loads are not permitted on state highways but, on logging roads, anything goes. So important are the loaded trucks, in fact, that they have the right-of-way and always take the inside lane on mountain roads. The result is that many logging roads are left-hand drive, a new experience for most motorists and bus drivers.

Leaving the landing, the children were taken back down the road a short distance, then detoured for several miles along a secondary logging road which made the driver dream of freeways. They got out of the bus at another landing, and started climbing — and climbing and climbing.

Logging skid trails, the tractor paths down which logs are dragged for loading on trucks, are often just as steep as a bulldozer can handle. This trail was no exception. All the kids made it up, but several adults had second thoughts and sat out this phase of the expedition.

For those who made it to the top the results were worth the toil. Not only did they have a magnificent view of a redwood landscape, but they were able to see a virgin giant, some 250 feet tall, felled by a veteran logger.

Armed with buzzing chainsaw, he first made an undercut on the side of the tree in the direction of fall. Redwood loggers must drop the trees exactly in place, on soft dirt beds prepared by bulldozers. This prevents the brittle wood from shattering as the tree whips to earth.

After the undercut was complete the logger moved to the other side of the tree and started his felling cut. Anticipation mounted as the tree began to lean, ever so slightly. Then, with a prolonged groan, it toppled.

The rest of the stop was play, as the sixth graders climbed up the bark surface of the fallen giant, then raced down the skid trail to the bus. The long trip back to school and home ended a memorable field trip.

But for those children whose dads work in the woods, there was a little extra bonus that night. Instead of just "Hi, dad," they could proudly say, "Hi, day, I saw what your job is about today."

After the big tree was felled, students climbed onto it. The redwood was dropped into a dirt bed prepared in advance by bulldozer.

Schoolchildren had long hike up logging skid trail to reach site where cutting was done.

Frail Foundation of Golden Age

"GOLDEN TIMES." Human Documents of the Victorian Age. By E. Royston Pike. Praeger, $8.50.

"A small girl of 12 . . . struck me by the earnest way in which she was doing her share of work . . . The kiln, containing 17,000 bricks, of 7¼ lbs. each when dry, was to be emptied by ten persons in a day and a half; i.e. this girl had to catch and toss on to her neighbour in a day of only the usual length a weight of more than 36 tons . . . while raised from the ground on a sloping plank. When called down by me she was panting." (From a report on the metal manufactures of Birmingham District, 1864.)

E. Royston Pike has drawn his human documents, a good deal of the time inhuman documents, from the reports of parliamentary commissions, magazine pieces, sometimes from little known novels. The time is the mid-Victorian era; England is at the peak of her greatness, and some Britons were fattening themselves and their purses on that greatness. But it was on the breaking backs of little factory children, working mothers with little ones at home, and ground-down laboring men that these people climbed. "Golden Times" deals, movingly, with those at the bottom of Victorian England's heap. — N.H.

THE GYPSY BALLADS OF GARCIA LORCA. Translated by Rolfe Humphries. An Indiana Poetry Paperback. Indiana University Press, $1.45.

The most characteristic work of the most powerful of modern Spanish poets, in a beautiful translation by a first-rate poet in his own right, Rolfe Humphries. Federico Garcia Lorca was martyred by the Fascists in the Spanish Civil War.

SELECTED POEMS OF GABRIELA MISTRAL. Translated with an introduction by Langston Hughes. An Indiana Poetry Paperback. Indiana University Press, $1.75.

Outside of anthologies, this is the first English translation of verse by the late Chilean poetess, whom Waldo Rank called "the laureate of her vast American earth" and who, in 1945 was awarded the Nobel Prize for literature, the first Latin American to win that honor. In Langston Hughes, leading Negro poet, she has found a worthy translator.

Phlegm as a Virtue

LETTERS ON THE SHORT STORY, THE DRAMA, AND OTHER LITERARY TOPICS. By Anton Chekhov. Selected and Edited by Louis S. Friedland. Dover, $2.

Chekhov was always ready with a word of good advice to a young author. To Lidiya Avilov he wrote in 1892: " . . . you must be unconcerned when you write pathetic stories . . . You may weep and moan over your stories, you may suffer together with your heroes, but I consider one must do this so that the reader does not notice it. The more objective, the stronger will be the effect."

A year later he told the same young author: " . . . write with more phlegm, more coolly. The more sensitive the matter in hand, the more calmly one should describe it — and the more touching it will be at last."

Here is Chekhov describing the first night of "Ivanov," in 1887:

" . . . there was such excitement among the audience and on the stage, that the prompter, who has served at the theatre for thirty-two years, declared he had never seen the like. They made an uproar, yelled, clapped and hissed; at the refreshment bar they almost came to blows, and in the gallery the students wanted to throw someone out, and two persons were ejected by the police . . . The actors were in a state of nervous tension . . . It turned out that the actress who was doing the chief part in my play had a daughter dangerously ill at the time — how could she be in a frame of mind to act?"

"The artist," said Chekhov, "should be, not the judge of his characters and their conversations, but only an unbiased witness."

To read these letters is to know Chekhov better, and to love him more. — N.H.

That Pesadilla Last Night

IF YOU wake up screaming, you've had un cauchemar if you're French; una pesadilla if you're Spanish; pesadelo if you're Portuguese, or Brazilian; incubo if you're Italian; Alpdrukken if you're German, and koshmar if you're Russian. We Americans and our English-speaking cousins around the world have had a prosaic, but no less frightening, nightmare.

If someone steps on your corns and apologizes, you should, if you're a polite Frenchman, say "n'importe"; if you're Spanish "no importa"; Portuguese "nao importa" (and that "o" at the end really has the sound of a nasal "n"); Italian "non importa." A German says "schon gut," just as we say "that's all right." (We also say "It doesn't matter," which is literally, in translation, what the French, Spanish, Portuguese and Italians reply.) The Russians exclaim "nevazhno!" — although they're somewhat more touchy and less polite about it in international affairs.

Where you might buy your wife a negligee, a Frenchman will buy his mistress a peignoir; a Spaniard or a Latin American buys her una bata; a Portuguese purchases um roupao; an Italian, vetaglia; a German, Morgenrock; and a Russian, penyuar (they stole the word from the French, not, apparently, having known such niceties until a relatively late period). Let it be noted that the word for negligee is masculine in French, Portuguese and German.

These are thoughts inspired by "The New College Multilingual Dictionary," by Dr. Edwin B. Williams and Dr. Alfred Senn, published by Bantam Books, $1.25, in which each word is given in seven languages.

Incidentally, if you'd rather be solving a crossword puzzle than reading this, you would, if you were a Frenchman, be doing mots croises; crucigrama if you were Spanish; it's palavras cruzadas in Portuguese; parole incrociate or cruciverba in Italian; Kreuzwortratel in German. Again, the Russian language does a bit of legal swiping: they call it krossword.

LISZT. By Sacheverell Sitwell. Dover, $2.

For a Sitwell, the remarkable character of Franz Liszt is made to order. Liszt was born early enough to have been kissed by Beethoven, and he was still around to mourn the death of Wagner. Sacheverell Sitwell, brother of Edith, possessed the touch of the poet and great musical knowledgeability, making his life of Liszt of lasting importance.

THE NEGRO IN 20TH CENTURY AMERICA. A Reader on the Struggle for Civil Rights. Edited by John Hope Franklin and Isadore Starr. Vintage Books, Random House, $2.45.

An objective view of the key question in the United States of today—the Negro and civil rights. The editors have brought together a unique collection of material by sociologists, historians, writers, cartoonists, Negro and white, and polls, statistics and documents on the vital question of the Negro and America since the start of the 20th Century.

THE THREE CHRISTS OF YPSILANTI. By Milton Rokeach. Vintage Books, Random House, $1.95.

Three patients in the state mental hospital at Ypsilanti, Mich., believe they are Jesus Christ. Electrician, farmer, clerk, each has been impelled to deny his real identity for that of Him who is symbolic of the best in man. Milton Rokeach set out to find out why, and whether, if confronting each other, they would give up their new identities. It is a major and remarkable psychological study.

THE HUMAN FACTOR IN CHANGING AFRICA. By Melville J. Herskovits. Vintage Books, Random House, $2.45.

The late, great anthropologist Melville J. Herskovits, having studied African tribalism in Dahomey and elsewhere, and written classics on the Negro in Haiti and Trinidad, here turned to a description of Africa's cultural evolution from prehistory, through the coming of the European and his domination, to the rediscovery of African cultural identity of recent years.

BOOKS IN BRIEF

STRUCTURAL ANTHROPOLOGY. By Claude Levi-Strauss. Anchor Books, Doubleday, $1.95.

The leading structural anthropologist, the Frenchman Claude Levi-Strauss, wrote the definitive work on this field in the book now reprinted by Anchor Books. Structural anthropology contrasts to cultural anthropology in that it does not study the contents of the items of social behavior but their relationship. Levi-Strauss here applies this method to such matters as religion, mythology, social organization, kinship, etc.

A FILM TRILOGY. By Ingmar Bergman. Translated by Paul Britton Austin. An Orion Press Book, Grossman Publishers, $5.95.

The great trilogy of Bergman films that focused on the obsession with God are here translated by Bergman's brother-in-law. Stills from the three films — Through a Glass Darkly, The Communicants (Winter Light) and The Silence — illustrate the book. Bergman's writing is as powerful as his film direction.

TRISTAN. By Hannah

Closs. Vanguard, $5.95.

Mrs. Closs, daughter of a famous British medievalist, in her novel, gives a new psychological insight to the 13th century poem "Tristan," a tale of love that inspired countless Celtic folktales and the genius of Richard Wagner. Mrs. Closs paints the wild landscape of Brittany and Cornwall like an artist.

Origin of Dogs Is Mystery

By Eleanor Avery Price

The dingo of Australia is a wild dog that most nearly approaches type of a domesticated dog. —SAN DIEGO ZOO Photo

IF, ON A VISIT to a zoo, you see the wild dogs, you may be inclined to be satisfied with the old theory that the dog is a progeny of the wolf. A number of scientists will be on your side, but a lot of them disapprove, among them Darwin who wrote, "A breed, like a dialect of a language, can hardly be said to have a distinct origin."

The whole picture is quite confusing. Bones of various types of prehistoric dogs, some differing from anything we know today and also some that bear a close affinity to certain present-day varieties, have been unearthed, and speculation has ever since mounted over what their presence really indicates. Evidence so clearly shows that a number of different kinds of dogs existed in early days. And certainly there are remarkably divergent appearances in today's dogs—the short-faced Oriental canines, the droopy-eyed bloodhound, the mastiffs, the Irish wolfhound, the fox-like dogs, and many others.

These facts would seem to point out that there never has been a common denominator among dogs. Yet the fact that man himself has created new breeds within a relatively few years might just be the evidence that at one time there was a progenitor of all dogs. The pieces of the puzzle have never fallen into place, and undoubtedly all research in the matter will remain in a badly muddled state indefinitely.

Some dogs still live in a state of wildness, unassociated with man. The wild dog most nearly approaching a domesticated type is the dingo of Australia. He is smaller and more slightly built than a wolf, and not as strong. Tail is bushy, coat heavy and either yellow or soiled-white in color. His mouth widens toward the rear with teeth, in the position of molars, resembling fangs. Natives have succeeded in taming some of the dingos for hunting. And some of the kelpie-like dogs may have dingo blood by deliberate cross-breeding.

The most ruthless wild dog is the Cape, or South African, hunting dog. He resembles a hyena, has a short, pointed muzzle, and unusually broad, egg-shaped ears.

MISS RULE: Would like information on BEEBE. — F. B., Long Beach.

BEEBE represents the Anglo-Saxon English root-name "Bee-by," meaning "owner of a bee and honey farm." This home location name determines that the ancestor was an enterprising beekeeper. There is a village called Beebe in Lancashire, England. The Beebe armorial shield is blue, emblazoned with a gold chevron set between three symbolic golden bees. Modern descendants include the noted American writer and naturalist William Beebe.

DE CORTE in medieval Spain deciphers as being used by an ancestor "from the place where the king resides." In Italy this name meant "owner of an enclosed field." The shield for this lineage from Padua, Italy has a large palm tree on a silver background.

Fun for Valentine's Day

A Valentine Castle

By Steve Ellingson

House That Hearts Built

Card parties are ace-high entertainment. For the hostess who wants a trump card up her sleeve, here's a card castle that doubles as a table or buffet centerpiece, a child's project, or a home decoration. And, of course, with winter upon us, it's not at all surprising that the ladies — and men too, as well as couples — are putting their cards on the table in spirited games of Bridge, Canasta, Poker and Gin Rummy. A more appropriate decoration you could not find. Furthermore, with Valentine's Day ahead, the castle shown, all made of hearts, exactly fills the bill.

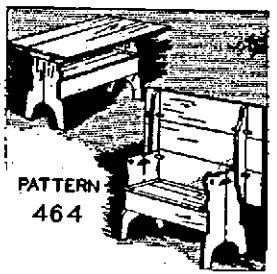

This is a decoration that can be completed by any hostess in only a few hours. The full-size pattern includes a list of needed materials along with easy-to-follow, step-by-step directions. The cost is slight and you'll find it to be a fun project.

To obtain the full-size card castle centerpiece pattern number 441, send 75 cents (add 25 cents per pattern for airmail delivery) by coin, check or money order to:

PATTERN 464

TABLE has a top 46 inches long which raises to form the back of a bench. There is a box-like storage space under the hinged seat which was called a hutch in early American times. Pattern 464, which gives actual-size guides and directions, is 35 cents. This pattern also is one of four full-size patterns in the Old-Time Furnishing Packet for $1.

Southland Pattern Dept.
P.O. Box 50
New Windsor, N.Y. 12550

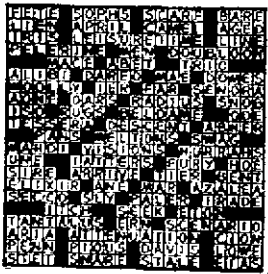

ONE OF THE holidays of the year which lends itself most easily to entertainment is Valentine's Day, Feb. 14. All ages of the family can join in simple games if friends are invited in for dinner, and there are easy ways to make corsages of garden flowers to take to elderly friends or shut-ins, using the heart motif.

Purchase the inexpensive, tiny candy hearts with phrases of two words inscribed on them, such as "love me" or "be mine." Each year the inscriptions are a little different, but the old favorite candies are always good for games as well as eating at refreshment time. Let each guest have an ample handful and provide a piece of cardboard or a television tray on which he is to arrange the hearts in a readable sentence. Sometimes the grammar is incomplete, but often the meaning is hilarious. A simple prize such as a marshmallow or chocolate heart may be given to the one who provides the longest list of words in a sentence from the individual heart phrases.

A variation of this game involves providing slips of white paper on which has been printed with red crayola at the top the simple phrase "Be My Valentine." Allow 10 minutes for the guests to make as many words as they can from this combination of letters. The particular sequence of letters including both a V and a Y permits unusual words, and the fact that the usual R and S are not in this series makes the game a little harder. Lists of 50 words within the 10-minute allotted time are not uncommon, however.

Another project for home or party use calls for the making of Valentine Hats, which can be worn by waiters and waitresses, if any of the group are to serve at a club Valentine dinner. Start with a piece of red construction paper approximately 9x10 inches in size. From this cut a large red heart. Halfway down on each side make two holes and insert a piece of red ribbon and tie it in place. Let this ribbon hang down on each side, long enough to tie under the chin of whoever is to wear the hat.

On top of the heart where the holes were made for the ribbon insertion paste a few inexpensive, lightweight, white plastic or artificial flowers. If used as a game, provide a prize for the fanciest decoration, which may include tiny birds folded from white paper, as guests use their ingenuity as milliners.

Adding hearts to flowers to prepare Valentine nosegays also is a happy occupation and provides corsages for honor guests at a Valentine party. One of the simple means which professional decorators use to give seasonal touches to their flowers is profuse reliance on lengths of wire covered with white chenille, which can be easily bent into shape.

The easiest way to fashion a heart from such chenille wire is to first make a triangle, and then press in the heart indentation at the top. Allow this outline heart to show beyond the edge of the corsage flower petals.

If making a bouquet instead of a corsage, use two or three of the hearts, and let them extend about an inch above the top of the highest blossoms to allow maximum exposure and suggest the Valentine's Day theme. If the chenille wire is not long enough for this, tape the wire outline heart to a longer wire, or it can be taped to a durable flower stem. The chenille outline heart is cherished by the recipient long after the flowers are gone, and can be used in other corsages or bouquets.

"Everything in One Beautiful Place"

Because the funeral and burial center concept eliminates the need for processions through heavy traffic on overcrowded highways, family and friends alike may now pay their full respects by attending the burial service, as well as the chapel service, all at one beautiful place, at less cost and more convenience.

Flowers Beloved by Mary and Eve

By Joe Littlefield

LILLIUM (SCALE LILY) candida. — meaning white and shiny, was considered the choice flower of the Holy Virgin. Ancient Semitic legend believed Eve's tears caused the lily to sprout forth, due to her banishment from the Garden of Eden.

There has been remarkable improvement of the Easter lilies we now have. The spectacular blooms appear in a wide range of colors including white, rose, vivid orange, bright yellow, maroon, bi-colors and red.

The happy news for gardeners who haven't had the pleasure of growing these lilies is the fact they can leave them in the ground for several years without disturbance, and annually harvest increasing crops of delightful flowers, as the lily bulbs multiply. Eventually they should be dug up, separated, then replanted.

These lilies are not bulbs such as daffodils, tulips and others that we know. The lily bulb is composed of a number of scales like a pine cone but all joined together at the base to form one bulb. They are planted in a nearly sunny location with the scale tips upward. The stem rooting bulbs are set down 8 to 9 inches deep whereas the base-root types are placed about five to six inches deep. Check with your nurseryman as to the depth. Have him help you select several varieties so you'll have some bloom in June, several weeks later another group will begin to flower, and finally the last group will blossom, so you'll have around three months of these beautiful flowers! Also pick up some bone meal and planter mix mulch if you have no composted organic material on hand, because you'll put two hands cupped together full of the organic material into the plant hole mixed with the soil, plus tablespoonful of bone meal thoroughly mixed throughout the hole bottom area. Put a thin but firm stake in the hole beside the bulb when planting it. The stake serves as a marker, warning you later when the bulb foliage has died off, "don't dig here!"

HYBRID amaryllis and gladiolus are sun-loving bulbs that should be planted out now. Set the hybrid amaryllis bulbs properly, by having the tops an inch or so above the ground level, whether they are planted in the ground or in pots.

Gladiolus bulbs too may be left in the ground for several years if the gardener doesn't mind progressively shorter stalks and smaller flower spikes. It is possible to improve this condition by fertilizing the plants as they begin to flower. The bulbs absorb the plant foods and store them for the next year. The fertilizers used to feed bulbs should contain less nitrogen and more phosphoric acid, whether of granular form or a liquid type. The specific flower-maker fertilizers contain equal amounts of phosphoric acid and potash, and none or minimal amount of nitrogen. They may be used for bulbs, flowering and fruiting plants.

Gladiolus bulbs dug up annually when the bulb foliage has just about died back to the ground, and stored for next planting season grow much taller than those left in the ground for several years. Plant the gladiolus bulbs about four to five inches deep in clay or a loam soil, and around six inches deep in sandy soil. Such depth plantings encourage sturdier base growth of the flower stalks, hence, they don't topple over from overhead waterings as do shallowly planted bulbs.

The hybrid amaryllis and gladiolus, just like the other planted bulbs, need lots of water for best growth and flower development. Several wholesale bulb growers say the reason for shorter flower stalks are due to lack of enough water.

Two other bulbs you may find at the nursery are yellow and pink callas. Both of these bulbs need around half a day of sun to bloom. They rarely bloom in dense shade on the north side of your house.

Garden Clubs

Mrs. W. E. Tickell will speak on garden design at the Lakewood Garden Club after a buffet luncheon Thursday at the Clark Bowl, Alondra Street and Clark Avenue, Bellflower.

Genealogy Society

Speaker for the Orange County Genealogical Society at the Bowlers Museum, 2002 North Main Street, Santa Ana, 7:30 p.m. Thursday, will be George Key, member of one of Placentia's pioneer families.

Gardening Tips

DON'T LET the bulb area become dry. Bulbs that get lots of water produce longer flower stems.

TURN OUT at least a third or more of old willowy oleander branches, and cut back faded flower branches.

CONTINUE quarter-turning container plants in order to have even shapely growth all around.

TERNSTROEMIA (no common name for it) with shiny green also bronzy leaves is an attractive container plant for the patio or porch area. It forms a shapely plant if hand-pruned carefully. The shrub foliage turns a reddish color in the sunny location.

DON'T CULTIVATE around stocks and control the watering. Water as the plants thirst, then no more till they need it again. Keep a close look out for the aphids on the young leaf growth, and insecticide spray if any found.

HURRY UP and get those Pacific hybrid delphiniums planted out in your sunny flower bed if you want taller flower spikes come spring season! The plants need a long root growing season in order to produce such blossoms.

THERE IS an herbicide in a powder form that may be mixed with water to spray those winter annual blue grass weeds to kill them in a dichondra lawn. The winter annual blue grass is a cold weather growing weed, hence the herbicide properly applied (mist spray the foliage only), should prove effective.

WRITER, AGE 93

Nichols; and Dr. Nichols, in Coronado.

The walls in her small, cozy room are decorated with mementos; the most eye-catching memento being her bookcase displaying all of her 61 works. On top of the bookcase sits a thick book entitled, "Poisons: Their Chemical Identification and Emergency Treatments."

"My reference," she explained with a smile.

She sat at her old-fashioned, louvered desk and talked about her life in long, descriptive sentences. With her cane she pointed out several of her books that had jackets designed by her. One, "Still No Answer," showed a man's arm reaching from out of the ocean, and seagulls flying above.

A world traveler and an avid reader is Mrs. Thayer. She has visited Europe, the West Indies, Mexico, has lived in Japan twice, and has seen all of America. She recommended traveling for everyone, especially the writer, for it helps when deciding on an effective background for a story, she said.

She reads an average of two books a week. Mrs. Nichols makes frequent trips to the library and often checks out four novels at a time for her aunt. Not counting herself, Lee's favorite mystery writer is Marjorie Allingham, an English author.

Weary of plotting, Lee Thayer wrote her last murder-mystery, "Dusty Death," two years ago. "When I was writing I was always afraid I wouldn't think of a plot. Somehow I always did, but that was hard work. Writing itself was not so hard, but plotting took a lot out of me."

Now the lovely little old mystery maker spends her days thinking about the past, and writing about it too. She's working on her memoirs, diligently putting down the words in long-hand on her ruled yellow tablets. She discovered, she said, that she has total recall. When asked if she had selected a title, she expressed doubt as to whether her memoirs would ever be published. They will.

Lee wanted to make it clear that her books always had pleasant endings. "I would not write a book that left a bad taste in the reader's mouth."

When she thinks about the past, she can't help but remember and treasure a compliment paid her by a great publisher:

"Mr. Doubleday told me once, 'Lee, you commit the nicest murders.'"

Miss Thayer looks over one of the 61 novels she has written; the others are in bookcase.

Recipe of the Week

MRS. E. A. RYDGREN, 4812 Boyar Ave., Long Beach, is the winner of this week's recipe prize.

DATE AND ORANGE BREAD

- | | |
|------------------------|-----------------------|
| 1 orange | 1/4 tsp. salt |
| 1 cup pitted dates | 1 cup baking powder |
| 1/2 cup sugar | 2 cups flour |
| 2 tbsps. melted butter | 1/2 tsp. soda |
| 1 egg | 1/2 cup nuts, chopped |

Put orange pulp and unstrained orange juice in a cup. Fill with boiling water and put into a mixing bowl. Put rind and dates through grinder and add the creamed sugar and melted butter. Add 1 egg. Sift the salt, baking powder, flour and soda then add chopped nuts, if desired. Mix into the liquid ingredients and pour into a greased 8x4x3 pan. Let stand 20 minutes before baking. Bake in 350-degree oven for 1 hour and 20 minutes.

What's your favorite recipe? For each recipe published in this space, Southland will pay $5. Men are urged to submit their recipes along with the ladies. Send yours, with name and address, to Recipe Contest Editor, Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

Whole Clove for Flavor

By Blanche Campbell

THE WHOLE clove is one of the most versatile spices in your spice cabinet. Perhaps you use it most often to garnish baked ham. It adds both to the attractiveness and taste appeal of baked ham. But it can also do much for many other dishes.

Whole cloves make good garnishing in fruit compotes, salads and pressed ham-type dishes. Their little hammer-head appearance not only gives an intriguing look, but also an inviting aroma that stimulates the appetite.

Whole cloves are a natural when it comes to garnishing foods. Their handy nail-like shape makes them easy to use, and when pushed into food they stay put. You can be sure that the dish will look as good on the table as it did in the kitchen.

You are missing a seasoning trick if you have never added whole cloves to stews and soups. The flavor of the whole clove is released gradually in the cooking process, and still is strong and fresh when the dish is served.

When frying doughnuts, drop a few whole cloves in the boiling fat. This imparts a very pleasant flavor to the doughnuts.

HE'S AS BUSY as a one-armed paper hanger running on a treadmill in a boat about to go over Niagara Falls...

That's a bit of an exaggeration, but it helps emphasize what an active man George Apostle is. For four years George has been No. 1 chef at Sam's Sea Food Family Restaurant, 16278 Pacific Coast Hwy., a few miles south of Long Beach. Sam's, internationally renowned, is one of the largest sea food specialty restaurants in the country, with seating for many hundreds in its spacious Polynesian-style dining rooms.

George's kitchen, only slightly smaller than the Grand Canyon, has seven stoves and vast quantities of other modern, stainless steel equipment. His staff consists of 17 men, including 9 cooks and 8 helpers. They turn out 58 varieties of dinner entrees, most sea foods, plus steaks, poultry, prime rib au jus, Polynesian appetizers, special soups, salads and sandwiches.

George arrives at Sam's every morning at 7:30. He stays until 2 p.m., having devoted many hours to what he calls "preparation work," cooking his fancy sauces, starting his soups and roasts for the evening meals. During that time he also directs his luncheon cooks. He spends the afternoon resting at his Long Beach home, where he lives with his wife and two children. Returning to Sam's at 6 p.m., he supervises the dinner chefs, staying on weekends till around 11 o'clock.

During the evening hours, Sam's turns out hundreds of dinners. George cooks

GEORGE APOSTLE
Busy, Busy, Busy
Cartoon by Pete Willette

many items personally, meanwhile keeping an eye on the entrees being prepared by his assistants. Before each entree leaves the kitchen, it must pass his inspection.

Born in Michigan, but reared in Greece, George has been in restaurant work since his teens, when he returned to this country. His family has a long tradition of restaurant experience. His brothers John and Tony Apostle own King Arthur's Steak House in Long Beach and John is also chief operator of the large Golden Sails Inn here.

Owened for many years by the genial Katsaris family, Sam's offers dinners from $2.25 to $6.25, with most in the $2.95 to $3.65 bracket. Featured are wonderful swordfish, Chinook salmon, tuna or albacore, yellowtail, halibut, bass, rock cod, jumbo shrimp, cracked crab, lobster thermidor or Newburg, shad roe, trout, frog legs, abalone, and many others.

Laugh-In with Rowan, Martin

"We've been waiting to do this sort of thing for a long time," agreed Dan Rowan and Dick Martin, referring to the far-out humor of "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In" comedy series starting at 8 p.m., Monday, Ch. 4.

"Some of the places we've played in the 15 years we've been together have been lulu," Dick said. "Like Albuquerque, where we played to a mixed audience. Not men and women — cowboys and Indians."

"It's good to have a regular series on NBC where we can do the sort of thing we like to do," Dan added.

DAN WAS born to show business—aboard a carnival train. The carnival was owned by his parents, and Dan spent his days attending movies, his evenings as a carnival performer.

Dick also displayed an early interest in the stage, setting a record in his native Battle Creek, Mich., for near-constant attendance at local motion picture and legitimate theaters.

Both Dan and Dick entered show business through a side door, as writers. Dan majored in journalism at the University of Missouri, while Dick earned his journalism degree at Michigan State. Both moved to Hollywood, Dan to become a film writer and Dick to develop material for such comedians as Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis, George Gobel, Ben Blue and Paul Gilbert.

Flesh and Blood

"Flesh and Blood," William Hanley's original drama starring Edmond O'Brien, E. G. Marshall, Kim Stanley, Suzanne Pleshette, Kim Darby and Robert Duvall, will be given its nationwide premiere as a two-hour color special on Ch. 4 at 8:30 p.m. Friday.

In this drama of a contemporary American family, the action takes place in a New York apartment just before New Year's Eve. The family, gathering for the holiday celebration, consists of Harry (O'Brien), a fiercely independent iron worker proud of having helped put up the steel for the Empire State Building and the Golden Gate Bridge; Della (Miss Stanley), his stoical wife trying to keep a secret from him; John (Marshall), his bachelor brother who considers his life bleak and meaningless; and the couple's children — Nona (Miss Pleshette), Faye (Miss Darby) and Howard (Duvall).

As a series of conflicting events unfolds, the members of this closely-knit family discover how little they really know about each other.

GEORGE ERES, Editor

PAN AND FAN MAIL

I'VE READ Pan and Fan practically every week for the past year with barely a week passing without someone praising "Star Trek." I'm nauseated, appalled at the amount of people who are disgustingly in love with this show.

What is it you "Star Trek" believers see in this show? There are three major things wrong with this program: Leonard Nimoy, the plots and William Shatner — in that order. Last week it was stated in Pan and Fan that "It is one of the few non-childish shows left on television." Does this person have the audacity to state to the public that a man who leaps around a space ship with pointed ears and a haircut that makes you wish he'd flip his wig is non-childish?

All I can say to the network is: Don't take "Star Trek" off the air because you have acquired some of the loyalist fans in television history and even though you'd be doing me a supreme favor, you'd be doing many people a supreme injustice.

Michael Greene,
Norwalk

(Something tells me it's a mistake to run this letter).

WE USED to enjoy watching the motorcycle races on television very much. They were telecast from Ascot Park on Ch. 5. There haven't been any shown on TV in quite a while. Are they still running the motorcycle races at Ascot, and if so, when and on what channel will they again be televised?

Mrs. P.A. Wiedrick Jr.,
Lakewood

(Ch. 5 discontinued telecasts because the station felt there was too little viewer interest. No station at present is airing racing from the Gardena track. Motorcycle activity resumes at the track the first Sunday in February.)

HERE ARE A FEW QUESTIONS

tions about "Peyton Place" which I'm wondering if you can answer.

Last night (Jan. 15), they showed old Mr. Peyton leaving his mansion. For good? Does this mean George MacCready is withdrawing from the show?

Also, will we ever find out exactly what happened to Allison, and, just who did murder Steven's sister, Ann (also, how come her last name was Howard instead of Cord?)

Mrs. C. Shalkcross
Long Beach

(The man from Ch. 7 who follows this story avidly says, yes, George MacCready has left the mansion for the last time — at least, at the moment, he's not signed for further episodes, no one will ever know what happened to Allison unless something comes up where she's needed in the story, then the writers will figure something; there was never sufficient evidence to say in court who did murder Steven's sister, although there was a strong suspicion it was the chauffeur, Lee Webber who was done in himself; the names are different because they took names of the people who raised them.)

I THINK Tele Vues should put J. Paul Gleason on the payroll. I can usually depend on him to give a "review" that exactly matches my sentiments about the show in question.

For years now I've looked forward to what J. Paul has to say about commercials, movies and TV in general and I'm sure I'm not alone. How about a story on J. Paul. J. Paul could probably write a better ending for "The Birds" than Hitchcock, anyway.

1952. Recognizing a mutual taste in comedy, they collaborated on material for other people's acts. But, when they demonstrated the material, it was unanimously agreed that their lines lost something in translation unless they did the translating.

Needing no further encouragement, Dan and Dick assembled their own act. Within a week — some sort of a record — they were performing before an audience.

"We figured the time was ripe for low pressure comics. We didn't come on with a big fanfare. We didn't sing or dance or play instruments. All we did was talk."

FOR SIX YEARS, they played small nightclubs all over the country, driving from city to city by car.

"We were pretty broke most of the time, but we didn't let it get us down," they recall.

"We even figured out a way to pay room rent only every other day when we were playing one night stands. We'd drive at night, check into a motel in the morning and sleep all day. Then we'd do the show, sleep a few more hours and be fresh the next day."

OVER THE years, the nightclub bookings and — presumably — the motel accommodations improved. Rowan and Martin made 40-50 guest appearances on network television. Their careers

The last two years have been the most rewarding for the comedy team. In 1966 they guested on four Hollywood Palace programs and six Dean Martin shows and were selected as 13-week summer replacements for the Martin show.

The Martin replacement earned the highest ratings ever reported for a summer series and led to an offer to star in a comedy special of their own. The first "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In" — basis for their current series — was colorcast on the NBC Television Network as a "sneak preview" special in September, 1967.

DAN IS the straight man for the act, the reserved, debonair dilettante always explaining the errors in Dick's good-natured lack of logic.

Dan is married to the former Adriana von Balloogen an Australian girl he met when the team was playing Sydney. Dick is single.

Both Dan and Dick play golf for relaxation. While they have participated in many charity and pro-celebrity tournaments as contestants, they are still looking for their first trophy.

"Getting a golf trophy is like digging up material for a comedy act," they agree. "It'll have to be stolen."

TV NOTEBOOK

The Public Broadcast Laboratory, financed by a Ford Foundation grant, has had its first executive shakeup.

David Oppenheim, recently with CBS has been put in charge of "shaping the Laboratory's point of view on culture and entertainment." He takes over duties formerly held by Lewis Freedman, who held the title of cultural director.

Freedman said: "There will be comment, but there is no comment yet." He has a two-year contract with PBL and will be a "cultural correspondent," and retain the title of deputy director.

One source close to PBL's internal workings said: the laboratory basically wanted to demonstrate that culture did not necessarily have to be spelled with a capital "C". He added that educational stations carrying the program did not fault the laboratory's good intentions, but were asking what had happened to the promises of sustained viewing excitement.

ABOUT 14 years ago, Patty McCormack was the little brat in "The Bad Seed".

Now 22, she's playing the villainess in "The Wild West," at 7:30 p.m., Friday, Ch. 2 and pursuing a comeback career.

She quit acting at 18, and enrolled in college but never attended classes. She went to beauty school for a while, tried singing, and last March decided to go back to acting.

In Hollywood, beside the TV show, she's done a film, "Mary Jane," for American International, and married Bobby Catania, a boy she's known since she was 11.

Sen. Dirksen's Washington

Everett McKinley Dirksen, the Senate Minority Leader, is well known for his rhetorical powers and lively sense of humor.

How important are these qualities to a member of the Congress?

ABC News commentator Howard K. Smith asks the Illinois Republican this question on ABC News' color special, "Everett Dirksen's Washington," to be aired at 10 p.m. Monday, Ch. 7.

"SPEECH IS, after all, an instrument or a vehicle to convey thought," is Sen. Dirksen's reply. "And, of course, the more crisply and precisely and clearly it is done, the better. After all, that is your instrument, particularly in public life."

Are any votes or minds ever changed on the floor of either chamber by a speech?

"Oh, yes. Not often, but sometimes. It depends on the nature of subject matter and obviously on the type of a speech you make." Sen. Dirksen answers. "I think it has happened twice to me. Once on civil rights because I dug out a quote Victor Hugo had allegedly written in his diary the night he died. He said: 'An idea whose time has come is stronger than all the armies on earth.'

WALKING WITH

Smith through the halls and chambers of the historic Capitol building in Washington, Sen. Dirksen notes that his sense of humor has been a great help to him during his years in Congress.

"You can illustrate things with humor when you can't do it any other way," the Senator explains. "Lincoln knew that. I think that I told you once before that when they got out this new issue of greenbacks during the Civil War somebody said to him, 'I suppose it was Chase, the Secretary of the Treasury at that time, 'Is there an inscription for these?'

"Lincoln, puzzled for a moment, said, 'What was it that Peter said to Paul? 'Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have I give thee.'" I thought that was delightful."

Co-Star with a Bear Animals and Kids are Murder

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

No matter what anyone else says, Beth Brickell has the most difficult job in show business: co-starring with a 650-pound bear, a freckle-faced kid and Chester Goode.

Any actor will tell you that animals and kids are murder; throw in Chester and the female performer might as well be part of the scenery.

Beth, then, must fight for her life every Sunday night on "Gentle Ben," a hokey family sitcom set in the boondocks of Florida.

NO ONE is more aware of her position than Beth, a fetching blonde.

"I've asked myself how to prevent being upstaged by the rest of the cast," she said on a visit to Hollywood where one day she hopes to find more fulfilling work.

"I did a lot of thinking about it and made a deliberate effort to develop an interesting character out of Ellen Wedloe. I've tried to make her as exciting, youthful and vivacious as possible."

Well and good. But when that big slob of a bear trundles into camera range Brigitte Bardot bare naked would be left standing in the wings.

ONE MIGHT not feel compassion for Beth were she just another little actress trying to become a star. But Miss Brickell has deeply dedicated herself to acting, having studied with both Sandy Meisner and Lee Strasberg and at the Actors Studio in New York.

With those credentials you'd think she'd be starring on Broadway, or at least co-starring in Hollywood movies.

But no. She's stuck in Florida playing step-mother to a rather stupid bear. Before accepting the part Beth should have chatted with June Lockhart who played Lassie's mother for so many years.

At least Lassie was entirely safe. Beth says Ben the bear is gentle, all right, but if the bear ever goes on a rampage Beth and the rest of the cast may not be around to describe what happened.

"I like the bear and the bear likes me," Beth said.

Yeah, well, how can she tell?

"SOMETIMES he comes over and grabs me around the neck with his paw and then we wrestle around," she explained. "That's his way of showing affection."

There was nothing in Meisner's or Strasberg's curriculum which prepared her for scenes with a bear. In the future they should include chair handling, whip cracking and blank cartridge firing.

"None of that is necessary," Beth said.

What she meant to say is that it hasn't been necessary yet.

Second Bananas

They Keep Coming to the Top

United Press International

If you wonder why the leading man on a television series looks over his shoulder, it's because the supporting players are breathing down his neck.

The average viewer would be astonished to learn how many of today's series stars were yesterday's spear carriers.

Take Robert Vaughn. He was the big star of "The Man From U.N.C.L.E." Right? But only a couple years ago he was second banana to Gary Lockwood in "The Lieutenant."

Now "U.N.C.L.E." has been cancelled and it appears as if David McCallum has come away top dog both for movies and a possible television series. The guy with second billing is always a threat to pull out of a show and start his own a season or two later.

The old "Bill Dana Show" proved a spin-off for Don Adams who played a bungling hotel house detective. He applied the same character to "Get Smart" and away he went.

Perhaps the classic example is Jim Nabors, unheard of before he appeared as filling station attendant Gomer Pyle on "The Andy Griffith Show." When he got more laughs than the star, Nabors set up shop with his own top 10 series, "Gomer Pyle."

NOR ARE second bananas-turned-stars restricted to male performers.

Long ago Bea Benaderet was the neighbor and comedy foil for the late Gracie Allen. Now she is the star of "Petticoat Junction."

Sometimes the situation works in reverse. Not too long ago Barbara Stanwyck was the star of the "The Barbara Stanwyck Show." Now she is just one of the gang in "The Big Valley." One of the stars of that show is Richard Long, once a member of the cast of "Bourbon Street." So is Peter Breck, who once starred solo in "Black Saddle."

Nobody could have been a more perfect second banana than Dennis Weaver the witless Chester of "Gunsmoke." Now he's his own star — if you don't count that awful bear — in "Gentle Ben."

Ron Harper was a backup man in his two previous television series, "87th Precinct," and "Wendy and Me" in which he played "me" to Connie Stevens' Wendy.

This year Ron is the "Garrison" in "Garrison's Gorillas." Should he appear to be looking over his shoulder, doubtless it is at co-star Cesare Danova and the three other backup players who could branch out any season on their own.

THE METICULOUS television student will notice a spin-off of a spin-off. Take Ronnie Schell, America's slowest rising young comedian. He had a bit part as Duke in "Gomer Pyle" and now co-stars in his own situation comedy, "Good Morning World."

Carl Betts was just the guy who played Donna Reed's husband in "The Donna Reed Show" for a half-dozen years. Now Donna is nowhere to be seen on the tube while Betts is starring in "Mudd For The Defense."

Then there is the interesting case of Harry Morgan. He was a supporting player in "December Bride," became a co-star with Cara Williams in "Pete and Gladys" and now finds himself Jack Webb's sidekick in "Dragnet."

ROWAN & MARTIN'S
Laugh-In (4), 8 p.m. (C) —
Premiere. The wacky, irreverent hour of sight gags, sketches and musical parody, which was "sneak pre-viewed" last September, gets a regular weekly berth in the hour vacated by the intrepid Iliya and Solo.
Judy Carne, veteran of the defunct "Fair Exchange,"
"Baileys of Balboa" and
"Love on a Rooftop" joins Arte Johnson and KMPC's Gary Owens as a regular, with initial guests including Barbara Feldon, Pamela
Austin, Henry Gibson, Jo
Anne Worley, Larry Hovis,
Ruth Buzzi, Flip Wilson,
Ben Wrigley, Tiny Tim, the Strawberry Alarm Clock and some surprise cameo guests. (Show follows "Hollywood Squares" as second of three NBC mid-season replacements, the final being "The Saint" for "Maya" on Feb. 24.)

EVERETT DIRKSEN'S
Washington (7), 10 p.m. (C) —
The colorful Minority Leader of the Senate takes Howard K. Smith on a personal tour of the Capitol Building, reminiscing about his personal experiences on the Hill and relating little-known facts about the Capitol. Cameras also visit Pekin, Ill., where Dirksen's brothers recall his childhood in Illinois, and view the 72-year-old Senator's new second career as an entertained — as the nation's fifth-ranked male vocalist.
(Dirksen returns next month for a Steve Allen-hosted salute to the state of Illinois, and is next week's guest on ABC's "Issues &

The Second Bananas

From supporting player to star to co-star.

PLAINLY THERE have been outstanding supporting players who haven't managed to cut it as stars.

Tim Conway is one of those. He was a funny supporting character on "McHale's Navy" but bombed out in the title role of "Rango," his own series.

On the other hand Bob Denver was such a hit as the moronic Maynard Krebbs on the defunct "Dobie Gillis Show" that the moment the series folded he starred as the idiotic Gilligan of "Gilligan's Island" while his former star in "Gilligan" Dwayne Hickman, floated off into the horse latitudes.

Roy Thinnes of "The Invaders" was just one of the cast in "The Long Hot Summer." But now he stars alone with no one standing just behind his shoulder to carry on in the future.

Roger Moore is in much the same position as "the Saint." Not too many years ago he was Beau Maverick in the "Maverick" series which starred Jim Garner who is smarter than all the rest. Garner left television altogether to star in movies where one seldom slips on a second banana peel.

SPECIAL

LAURA (7), 9 p.m. (C) — Lee Bouvier (Princess Lee Radziwill) makes her TV dramatic debut in the title role of Truman Capote's updated adaptation of the 1944 Oscar-winning movie, starring with Robert Stack, Arlene Francis, Farley Granger and Thelma Ritter in Vera Caspary's best-selling mystery classic of a homicide lieutenant who becomes emotionally involved with an apparent murder victim while trying to unravel the crime. Two-hour drama was taped in London by producer David Susskind. Miss Bouvier, sister of Jacqueline Kennedy, originally was to have starred in "Voice of the Turtle," but the switch was made following reviews of her stage performance last summer in "The Philadelphia Story."

NATIONAL SMOKING TEST, aired Tuesday, Ch. 2.

... the sharply produced hour — a blend of documentary technique, humorous animation and live testing of viewers — was the latest of CBS audience involvement examinations. Others have dealt with driving, health, citizenship and current events.

Reporter Mike Wallace said at the outset that the program would not try to resolve the smoking controversy.

Antismoking fanatics might have thought that the program was too outwardly impartial in its approach. But nothing succeeds like the simple accumulation of facts. You don't have to take a stand. You just tell it like it is. No lecture can have the same fair-minded impact.

Furthermore, the pro-smoking points brought up by participants in the hour could never have compensated to cigarette advertisers for the antismoking evidence on hand. For there is no question that the mere subject of the smoking controversy is something that cigarette advertisers don't like raised at all — especially on television, with its vast audience. CBS did a documentary on smoking some time ago.

Tuesday night's hour did, in fact, bring up the point that more money is spent for cigarette advertising on television than for any other single product — $195 million a year.

Among the other points brought up was that cigar and pipe smokers suffer far less from heart and lung diseases than cigarette smokers. In fact, almost as little as nonsmokers.

Taking an informative approach, the hour segued to a final segment based on a smoking insight questionnaire. This was developed by Dr. Daniel Horn, director of The National Clearing House for Smoking and Health of the U.S. Public Health Service. He stated simply that the health service regards smoking as a serious hazard. Furthermore, his comments regarding the questionnaire seemed plainly directed at how to help people stop smoking, or avoid starting.

—Rick DuBrow, UPI

THE CAGE, (Danny Thomas Hour), aired Monday, Ch. 4.

A fairly interesting.

prison yarn ... handicapped by sluggish execution. Somehow the script ... became so enmeshed in the subject of group therapy, that overall the drama was not particularly convincing.

Bobby Darin performed capably as the chief con, while Sugar Ray Robinson seemed too nice a guy to be in prison; Norman Alden and Dean Stockwell were okay. Lloyd Nolan was competent as the medico, while Arch Johnson was good in a brief role. Richard Sarafian's direction was routine.

Now the dream of graceful living you have worked for, and waited a lifetime to achieve is a reality ... and so easily within your means. A classic hotel towers majestically at the sea, inviting gentle people just like you to discover a truly new approach to life ... at a price invented for your situation.

Imagine living at the recently remodeled and completely refurbished New Breakers Hotel, where all rooms face outside and afford a magnificent view of sea and city. They are beautifully decorated and have TV and FM music. You will enjoy service in the tradition of all fine hotels ... 24 hour switchboard, maid service, valet, porter, and room service.

Scores of selective seniors have found their future at the New Breakers. There is a full time Social Director with a professional's creative approach to recreation. You will enjoy classes, games, tours, trips, and parties.

A unique medical health plan has been especially created for resident guests. It is all inclusive and the premiums are paid by the hotel. Free transportation is provided to and from the near-by health center.

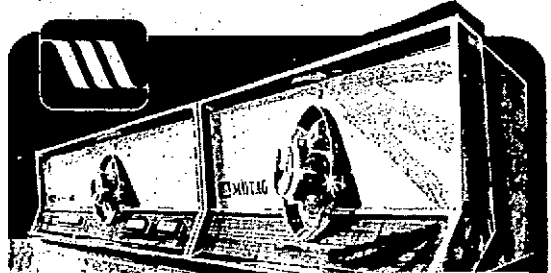

Guests may select either the European or the American plan. For those on the American plan three superb meals are graciously served daily in a distinctive ocean-view dining salon.

Best news of all is the modest cost ... tailored for retired incomes. It is well under that of any comparable place in the area. Accommodations start as low as $110 a month on the European plan. And for those joining us during the month of January, we have a special two free weeks offer. Come in today and ask for details ... look around at the fabulous all New Breakers Hotel ... a lovely, lively place to live!

WHEN ASTHMA MAKES YOU SHORT OF BREATH

If recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma or Bronchitis make you suffer coughing and difficult breathing that ruins sleep, give quick acting MENDACO a trial. See how fast you curb coughing and breathe easier, thus sleep and feel better. To help loosen and remove that choking phlegm get MENDACO at drugists.

WOMEN SUFFER WITH BLADDER IRRITATION

Common Kidney or Bladder Irritations affect twice as many women as men, often causing tenderness and nervousness from frequent, burning, itching urination. Secondly, you may lose sleep and have headaches, backaches and feel older, tired, depressed. In such cases, CYSTEX usually brings relaxing comfort by curing germs in acid urine, and easing pain. Get CYSTEX at drugists today.

Radio Notes

A new Soviet radio station covers the globe daily with bitter political commentary. When offended parties complain, the Soviet government says it is helpless to do anything about it, according to Associated Press Writer Michael Johnson.

"Radio Peace and Progress," says chief editor Lev Talanov, "belongs to public organizations."

This cryptic explanation means that the Kremlin wishes to disavow responsibility for the station's commentary. It broadcasts 15 1/4 hours a day in eight languages beaming its views chiefly to countries toward which the Soviet Union is often hostile. Communist China, the United States, Israel, West Germany and Portugal are prime targets.

Broadcasts in English and Hindi this winter stirred protests in the Indian parliament when the station criticized Indian leaders by name.

Since the uproar, the attacks on India have ceased.

CLAIMS ADJUSTING

OFFERS MEN AN OPPORTUNITY FOR AN ACTION PACKED CAREER!

Join the ranks of professional accident investigators and claims adjusters. Men are needed everywhere. Many positions are available, due to the tremendous increase of auto accidents, fires, robbery, windstorms, riots and industrial mishaps.

22 million insurance claims had to be investigated last year and almost twenty-billion dollars paid by claim men.

In this exciting top paying work, there is no threat of automation and no lay-offs. Maturity is an asset and lack of formal education does not close the door as it does in many other fields.

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED IN LEARNING HOW YOU CAN QUALIFY FOR THIS FIELD, FILL OUT COUPON BELOW AND MAIL FOR FREE DETAILS.

Do you know the difference between low-cost insurance and cheap insurance?

Buying cheap insurance for your home or car is like buying a cheap parachute. By the time you find the holes, it's too late to do anything about it.

But you don't want to pay too much for your insurance protection, either.

That's why smart people buy insurance for home, car or business through an independent insurance agent.

Because he represents several companies, he can shop around to find the best insurance for you at a fair price. What's more, he's on your side when it comes to fast, fair settlement of all claims.

Remember — there's no such thing as bargain-basement insurance.

This symbol is your assurance that we are professional independent agents.

The Independent Insurance Agents Association of Long Beach includes 80 agencies with 130 licensed agents to serve you. For a list of members, see the Yellow Pages of your telephone directory under the heading "Independent Insurance Agents Association of Long Beach," under the "Insurance" classification.

Independent Insurance Agents Association of Long Beach

All members are affiliated with the National Association of Insurance Agents and California Association of Insurance Agents.

Q. Lynda Bird Johnson's wedding was done in excellent taste. It was joyful yet dignified. Who was responsible for running the show that well?—Nanette Hopkins, Raleigh, N.C.

A. Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson; the bride; Mrs. Elizabeth Carpenter, the First Lady's press secretary; Mrs. Bess Abell, the White House social secretary, and, of course, all their many assistants.

Q. Can you tell me if Jean Francois Steiner, the Jewish author of the bestselling book, Treblinka, about concentration camps, recently married a Nazi?—Henry Kitzakowski, Milwaukee, Wis.

A. Steiner, whose father died at Auschwitz, was secretly married several months ago to Grit von Brauchitsch, granddaughter of Field Marshal von Brauchitsch who commanded the Wehrmacht in Poland, France, and Russia from 1939 to 1941, but was later fired by Hitler. Steiner and his bride first met at the Sorbonne several years ago and fell in love. Miss von Brauchitsch was never a Nazi.

CINDY BIRDSONG, DIANA ROSS AND MARY WILSON.

Q. The Supremes—have they broken up? I noticed a new girl singing with the group on TV. What's the story?—Karen Holbert, Clinton, Md.

A. The Supremes are now called "Diana Ross and the Supremes." Of the original trio, Diana Ross and Mary Wilson remain. The third member, Florence Ballard, has been replaced by Cindy Birdsong. Motown Records claims Miss Ballard left because she was tired of traveling. Others claim she did not like the new billing.

Q. I understand that Egypt is bankrupt and is being supported by King Faisal of Saudi Arabia. Is this so?—R. T. Malouf, New York City, N.Y.

A. Faisal in partnership with the government of Libya contributes about $70 million to Egypt every 90 days. In that way King Faisal keeps Nasser in line.

Q. When Bobby Kennedy was a schoolboy, didn't he flunk out of St. Paul's, a fashionable prep school in Concord, N.H.?—Dean Hartrick, Rutland, Vt.

A. He did not. St. Paul's is an Episcopal school. Its daily chapel services are Protestant. As a youngster Kennedy thought seriously of becoming a priest. He wrote his mother about the Protestant services at St. Paul's and requested that he be sent to some other school. Mrs. Kennedy thereupon enrolled him in a Roman Catholic preparatory school, Portsmouth Priory in Rhode Island.

Q. Isn't Julie Andrews secretly wed to director Blake Edwards? Aren't they on their honeymoon?—Eric Underwood, Phoenix, Ariz.

A. Miss Andrews' California decree will not be final until November this year. She and Mr. Edwards have been traveling in Europe, will start a film next month.

Q. Gen. David Shoup, retired commandant of the U.S. Marine Corps, says that President Johnson's contention that the Vietnam war is vital to U.S. interests is "pure, unadulterated poppycock." Shoup says it is really a civil war among the Vietnamese. Would you give us some background on Shoup? Is he a crackpot or a respected member of the corps?—A. T. Davis, Indianapolis, Ind.

A. Gen. David Monroe Shoup, 63, was the 22d commandant of the U.S. Marine Corps, 1960-1963, and a respected member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He was born in Battle Ground, Ind., educated at De Pauw University, commissioned a second lieutenant in the Marines in 1926.

In World War II he was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for leading the Marines in the attack on Tarawa. In 1959 he stood tenth on the list of Marine officers, but President Eisenhower thought so highly of Shoup that he advanced him over nine senior Marine officers, including three lieutenant generals, to the position of Marine commandant.

Q. Who said: "Our foreign dealings are an open book—generally a checkbook?"—Ollie Williamson, Seattle, Wash.

A. Will Rogers (1879-1935), American humorist.

Q. I have a bet about Nancy Sinatra, Frank's daughter. I say she has had a nose job and a hair job. My husband says I am a jealous cat, and it's not so. Who is right?—Louise Altman, Miami Beach, Fla.

Q. What percentage of student scientists in Russia are girls?—Rowland Crawford, Cambridge, Mass.

A. Approximately 40 percent.

Q. I would like to find out what Col. John Eisenhower, son of the ex-President, does for a living now that he's no longer in the Army. Also, will he inherit General Eisenhower's millions?—Patricia Altonberry, Merion, Pa.

A. Col. John Eisenhower works as an editor for a publishing company. As the ex-President's only child, he will inherit eventually his parents' considerable wealth.

Q. George Meany of the AFL-CIO—doesn't Lyndon Johnson have labor leader Meany in his hip pocket?—Bernard Wolfson, Newark, N.J.

A. Meany believes firmly in going all the way with L.B.J.

RINGO AND WIFE (L.) WITH EWA AULIN

Q. Ringo Starr, the Beatle drummer—I understand his wife is furious because Ringo is making out with Miss Sweden in Italy. What's the scoop?—Ellen James, Des Moines, Iowa.

A. Ringo is acting in the film, Candy. In several scenes he plays opposite Ewa Aulin, 18-year-old Swedish actress. He plays the part of a sex-driven Mexican gardener who has an affair with Candy. Ringo's wife understands it is all make-believe.

The Impala Custom Coupe with new formal roof line.

Its Silent Ride of Quality is Something You'll Value for Years.

Hushed... Calm... Quiet...

Words that only hint at Chevrolet's new extraordinarily quiet ride. Chevrolet engineers went all out to bring you the quietest riding Chevrolets ever built. They utilized computers to help show where to position body and engine mounts to most effectively isolate you from road noise, shocks and vibration.

For '68, you'll find that Chevrolet shock absorbers have been refined and Chevrolet exhaust systems have been redesigned to make them work even quieter.

THE SURE CHEVROLETS. If popularity is any indication, we're doing a lot of things you like.

New things like Hide-A-Way windshield wipers that stay hidden until you want them. Full-length body side molding with a raised vinyl insert that protects Impala from nicks and knocks.

There's a new standard 200-hp V8 and a new 250-hp V8 you can order that run on regular fuel.

Just a few of the features that make Chevrolet the surest value you can buy!

An Apple for the Computer

by HERBERT KUPFERBERG

STORRS, CONN.

A typical schoolboy essay was fed into a computer at the University of Connecticut Bureau of Educational Research for grading recently.

The composition was on the subject "My Favorite Television Program" and, complete to spelling and grammatical errors, it read:

THE NAME OF MY FAVORIT TELEVISION PROGRAM IS BATMAN. I WATCH IT EVERY CHANCE I GET EXEPT LAST WEEK WHEN OUR TV SET WAS BUSTED. THEN I COULDN'T SEE IT.

THE WEEK BEFORE THAT THEY HAD A REALLY GOOD SHOW ON. THE CAT-WOMAN STOLE SOME JEWELERY SHE LIKED. SHE HID THE STUFF SOMEWHERE. I BELEIVE THAT IT WAS IN HER HIDEOUT.

BATMAN AND ROBIN AINT STUPID SO THEY SOON FOUND IT AND ALMOST CATCHED THE CAT-WOMAN. SHE GOT AWAY DURING THE FIGHT. THEY COULD HAVE FOUND HER LATER BUT THEY DIDN'T WANT TO GIVE THEIRSELVES AWAY.

THEIR IS OTHER NEAT CROOKS ON THE PROGRAM TOO. LIKE THE PENGUIN THE RIDDLER AND THE JOKER.

THEY ARE ALWAYS TRYING TO GET THE DYNAMIC DUO, BUT THEY NEVER SEEM TO BE ABLE TO.

The computer paused a moment to digest this information, and gather strength. Then lights flashed, bells rang and its teletypewriter keyboard began clacking out:

HERE IS SOME INFORMATION ON YOUR ESSAY.

I DON'T THINK YOU DID VERY WELL.

DO YOU REALLY THINK THE PAST TENSE OF "BROKEN" IS "BUSTED"? OR WERE YOU JUST CARELESS?

I NOTICE YOU USE THE WORD "AINT." SEE IF YOUR TEACHER ALLOWS THAT WORD BEFORE YOU USE IT AGAIN.

THE WORD "THEIRSELVES" SHOULD BE REPLACED BY "THEMSELVES."

HERE IS A LIST OF YOUR SPELLING ERRORS.

FAVORIT EXEPT JEWELERY BELEIVE.

(THERE MAY BE OTHER ERRORS THAT I DID NOT FIND). YOUR ESSAY IS CONSIDERABLY SHORTER THAN THE ASSIGNMENT REQUIRED. YOUR SENTENCES SEFM SHORT AND CHOPPY.

IT WAS NICE TO READ YOUR ESSAY. I HOPE YOU WILL COME BACK SOON TO WRITE ANOTHER. GOOD-BYE.

The computer also put in commas, corrected tenses, and made other suggestions for improvement. As a matter of fact, it did almost every thing a human teacher could have done except keep the pupil after school.

The machine is part of a project which Dr. Ellis B. Page, professor of education at the university, hopes eventually will enable computers to grade "creative" or essay type questions with the same speed and precision they now bring to multiple-answer tests. The program, known as Project Essay Grade, has the financial assistance of the U.S. Office of Education and the College Entrance Examination Board.

A set of 265 essays written by students in Grades 8 through 12 at a high school affiliated with the University of Wisconsin on the subject "Are The Best Things in Life Free?" was exhaustively tested by computer for idea-content, organization, style, mechanics and creativity. According to the Connecticut educators, the computer did as well as individual teachers in making evaluations—though a committee of teachers did better than either.

Prof. Page, a tall, spare man with a background in English literature as well as in education, regards computers as his friends. "I don't have any feelings toward the machines themselves," he says, "but I feel they can help solve the fundamental problems of mankind."

One of the fundamental and most back-breaking problems of education has always been marking papers. Prof. Page believes that by programming a computer to do such things as spotting spelling errors, detecting grammatical gaffes, parsing sentences, counting words, spotlighting vague expressions, measuring paragraphs, it will be possible to match a teacher's intellectual judgment and relieve his work load.

"A teacher may not be able to remember how Johnny did on his test last time, but a computer can," he points out. "And the machine can eliminate the difference between 'hard' and 'easy' markers."

The Connecticut investigators have even given attention to the possibility that students may try to cheat or deceive a computer, though they say they have no plans for a "Tilt!" sign to light up when this is tried. One example cited was that of a possible examination on the discovery of America, with the computer trained to recognize such key words as "Columbus," "1492," "Pinta," "Spain" and "America," and to mark the student accordingly.

But what would happen if the student wrote: "The ship Columbus left America to discover Spain, while Samuel Pinta was King of England in 1492?"

Said Prof. Page, who is as well versed in the ways of students as of computers: "For every strategy there is a counter-strategy."

Since few computers can read handwriting, exams must either be transferred to punch-cards or written by machine before being processed. But Prof. Page feels this is only a minor drawback because writing by hand, in his opinion, is on the way out.

"It's inefficient," he says. "Children learn to write and read better on electric typewriters. Their brains are ready before their hands are. I believe one day we'll have low-cost, utterly noiseless, power-driven character-printers in the schools. That will solve the computer-input problem."

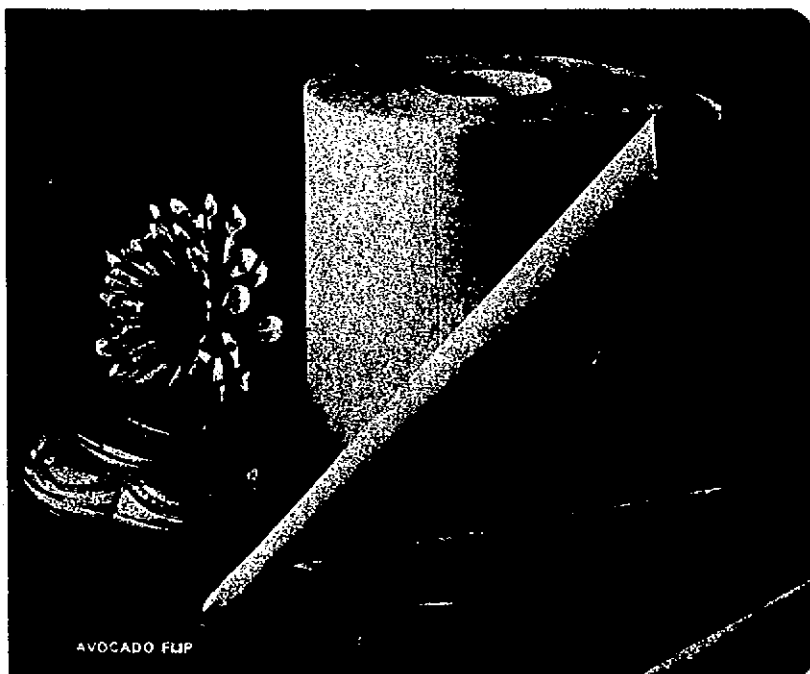

Gerald Fisher, a research associate working with Prof. Page, was asked whether it would be worthwhile to run, say, Hamlet's soliloquy "To be or not to be" through the computer.

"Well, what our machines of today might have to say would be grossly impertinent," he said. "But in 50 years, perhaps they may be able to say more. They may be able to explain something about Shakespeare's choice of words, and why he affects us in the way he does."

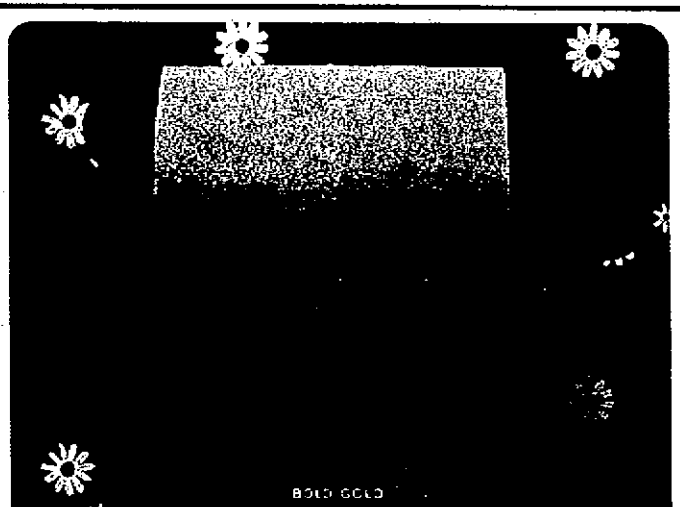

Shakespeare can afford to wait for 50 years. But this article is going up to the computer right now. Ready, Professor?

PROPHYLACTIC VITAMINS

Physicians at the Caroline Institute in Stockholm are sure that a dose of vitamins taken before drinking liquor will help the drinker feel less drunk.

Dr. Leonard Goldberg, in charge of the department of alcoholic research, used 16 policemen as volunteers. He "shot" eight of them intravenously with large doses of Vitamin B. The other eight were "shot" with placebos, dummy injections.

All were then ordered to drink whiskey in amounts proportionate to their body weights.

Those who had been given Vitamin B injections not only said they were less drunk than the others, but when tested for reaction time by pressing keys in response to signals, they all tested higher than the placebo volunteers.

FRANCE AND KUWAIT

Kuwait, the little oil-rich Arab country which has at least $1 billion on deposit in London banks, a major support for the shaky pound, is secretly depositing funds in France.

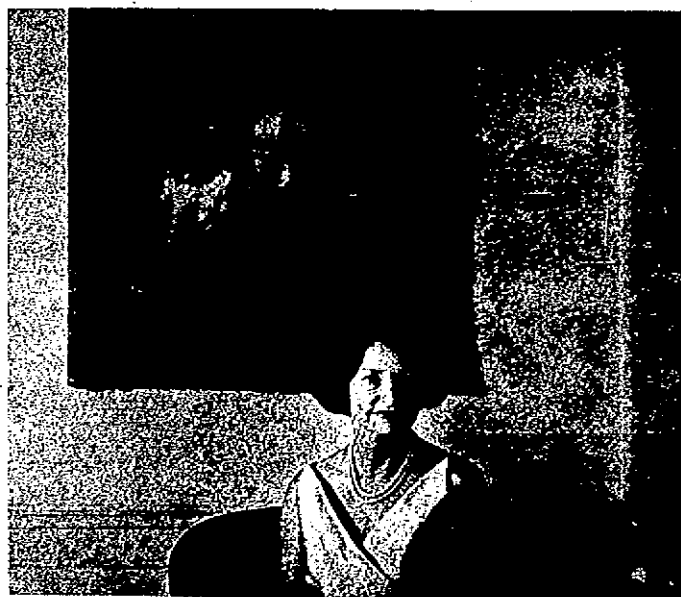

For the first time Kuwait has deposited $150 million in the Credit Lyonnais, France's largest nationalized bank. It has also invited Credit Lyonnais to open a branch office in Kuwait, which it is doing.

Simultaneously, General de Gaulle, who has refused to send Israel the 50 Mirage fighters it ordered before the June war against the Arabs, has offered to sell the Arab world as many Mirages as it wants just as soon as the Middle East embargo is lifted. That should be any day now.

What this means is that Kuwait is taking royalties paid to her by U.S. oil companies and depositing them in France. French bankers are using the money to buy up gold in order to weaken and force an eventual devaluation of the dollar.

Talat Al-Ghoussein, the Kuwait Ambassador to the U.S., says he has not been officially notified of his country's latest financial move.

"But it doesn't surprise me. After all, no one should blame us for depositing our money where we think it will be safest."

MRS. JOHNSON BEFORE A MARY CASSATT PAINTING IN WHITE HOUSE FAMILY SITTING ROOM.

TWO MOST WANTED MEN

Insofar as Ladybird Johnson is concerned, the two most wanted men in the White House are John Adams and James Madison. The First Lady, who quietly obtained some marvelous acquisitions last year -- a $45,000 piece of Charles Russell sculpture from the Hammer Galleries, a beautiful chandelier from Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, several works of art from former Senator William Benton -- would like to obtain this year from any generous donor, original paintings of President John Adams and President James Madison. The ones now hanging in the White House are copies.

Mrs. Johnson has also begun acquiring outstanding works of American art. She is particularly anxious to hang some works of George Caleb Bingham (1811-1879), a Missouri artist whose large, tightly composed paintings depict the jolly flatboatmen and the county electioneers of the mid-19th century. The University of California at Los Angeles plans an exhibition of Bingham's works next month. Contributions to the White House are of course tax-deductible.

OBEDIENT WIVES

Are you in the market for "an eager, attractive, obedient, hard-working wife, who does not expect to be treated as an equal and wants only to please you?"

If so, contact Erik Eriksson, 42, a bachelor marriage broker in Nynashamn, Sweden.

Last year, Eriksson, an ex-sailor in the Swedish navy, advertised for prospective wives in Turkish newspapers.

"The response," he says, "was overwhelming. I got more than 3000 replies. The photos they sent showed that many were magnificent women; many were well-educated and came from excellent homes. All were eager to marry non-Turkish men."

Eriksson thereupon went into the marriage broker business. He arranged for 70 Swedish bachelors to pay $200 each for a bus trip to Istanbul where they would be met by their prospective brides. In addition, he was paid a non-returnable brokerage fee of $150. Sweden's single girls are, of course, furious at Eriksson. Says one, "I think he is both unpatriotic and obsessed with belly dancers."

TATTOO REMOVAL

A merchant seaman who had "Kiss Me, Kate" tattooed across his chest wanted to marry a girl named Mildred.

Mildred refused unless he had the tattoo removed. The seaman went to his physician who told him to wait until the laser technique of tattoo removal was perfected.

Dr. Leon Goldman, chief of a research group in Cincinnati, has been working on the painless removal of unwanted tattoos for some time.

Recently he and his team have been using a laser beam to erase the tattoos. The laser beam vaporizes the dye particles in the tattoo, leaving only a light "socially acceptable" scar. Dr. Goldman reports success in 116 cases.

The technique is still in the experimental stage.

DR. SCHWEITZER'S SUCCESSOR

In 1913, Dr. Albert Schweitzer, Alsatian clergyman, physician, philosopher, musician, and missionary, founded a hospital in Lambarene, Africa.

When the good doctor died in 1965, his famed bush hospital was turned over to a Swiss physician, Dr. Walter Munz, who has been running it with Rhena Eckart-Schweitzer, the founder's daughter.

Dr. Munz, a handsome bachelor of 34, was recently in New York trying to raise funds for the hospital. Unless he succeeds, it will have to shut down. Although Dr. Schweitzer opposed money-raising campaigns in his lifetime, he was an internationally famous figure, a Nobel Peace Prize winner, and his hospital was supported generously by personal friends. Now, many of these wealthy oldtimers have passed on. Dr. Munz lacks Schweitzer's renown, and contributions are not easy to come by. But unless they are forthcoming, the 5000 new patients he and his staff treat each year will have to go without medical help.

Last year Munz and other surgeons performed more than 1200 operations at Lambarene, everything from the most delicate cardiac operation to plastic surgery.

Munz needs about $2.5 million to modernize the original antiquated Schweitzer facilities. Schweitzer did not believe in electricity or prohibiting animals from wandering around his hospital. He had a "great reverence for all life," but Munz says he must have electric light by which to operate. He cannot permit animals to amble among the sick or the people to use the hospital as a hotel or a welfare board.

Like Dr. Schweitzer, however, he still permits natives to come to the hospital, cook and care on the premises for their relatives.

NEW SERVICE

This is the first service of its type in West Germany and is expected to spread quickly to other states.

BLACK MARKET BEATLES

East Germany has outlawed beat music, no longer will permit concerts by such performers as Ella Fitzgerald, Louis Armstrong, the Modern Jazz Quartet.

In addition, radio and TV stations are no longer permitted to play American hits, and Western pop records are banned from sale.

According to Professor Heinz Busch, of the East Berlin Music School, "Beat music is being used by imperialistic nations to distract our young people from the serious problems of the day."

The result of these idiotic, ideological edicts is a black market in East Germany for Western pop records. Beatle albums sell for $25 a copy. A Louis Armstrong sells for $10, Rolling Stones for $15, Elvis Presley for $12.

The German Ministry of Culture plans to develop "a socialistic dance music for our own citizens." While such music is in the process of creation, East German youngsters tune into the jam sessions broadcast from Western Germany via the American Forces Network.

Long vacation agreed with machinist Ted Mathos, shown relaxing at home with wife and beagle. "Any psychiatrist who thinks leisure time will ruin me needs a psychiatrist himself."

What Would You Do With A 13-Week Vacation?

PITTSBURGH.

Could you stand your wife 24 hours a day, seven days a week for 13 weeks? Putting it another way, could your wife and children stand you around the house for the length of a 13-week vacation? Would you all enjoy it or would you drive each other out of your minds?

These questions are not academic. Increasing automation is already forcing longer vacations in American industry and the trend is bound to continue. In fact, Dr. Richard Bellman, a Rand Corp. mathematician, makes the extreme prediction that in 20 years, 2 percent of us at farm and factory will produce all that the other 98 percent need.

The mind boggles at that sort of revolution. And psychiatrists and sociologists are fearful you're so ill equipped to use the coming leisure time that you probably will overeat and drink, loll about the house, watch TV and fight with your wife and children.

"Most people are not emotionally ready for much free time," warns one psychiatrist. "Wise use of leisure is much more difficult than working," says another. "Oh, we're going to need lots of vacation counselors," says a third.

In search of a preview of such a possibly troubled future, PARADE interviewed a group of workingmen who are trailblazers in the "ordeal" of longer vacations. They're members of the United Steelworkers of America and already enjoy the longest vacations among U.S. workers. At intervals, according to seniority, they're turned loose for 13 weeks at full pay.

Are things as bad for them as the psychiatrists forecast? Do they become bored, restless and hostile toward wife and kids? Their answers were explosive, unanimous — and encouraging for the rest of us.

"Any psychiatrist who thinks leisure time will ruin me needs a psychiatrist for himself," says Ted Mathos, a 62-year-old machinist. "I could take a 26-week vacation every year and never be happier."

'Psychiatrist is nuts'

Joe Liptak, 52, a burly loader, puts it more directly: "The psychiatrist is nuts."

Edward Dean, a veteran crane repairman, goes at it with logic: "It's only common sense to give an older worker a taste of the retirement that's coming along. I enjoyed every minute of it and I learned a few important things about how to use my free time."

Mathos, Liptak, and Dean not only reflect the overwhelming enthusiasm of the steelworkers for the long vacations. They also illustrate well the varieties of leisure time use. Mathos went hunting most of the time. Liptak just loafed around and took it easy. Dean took his wife to Hawaii. And all three say they had such a wonderful mentally healthful time that they hated to see it end.

The matter of tension between father and children didn't arise, if for no other reason than that by the time a steelworker has the seniority for a 13-week vacation, his children usually have grown up and left home. And, PARADE could find no serious case of tension between husband and wife.

One wife, who didn't want her name used, told us: "Oh, there were moments when I got tired of having him around so much, like maybe when I have my middle-of-the-morning coffee. I like to sit by the window and look out over the hills and do some thinking of my own. And there he'd be, right in the way. But it's a little thing, not important."

In extreme contrast to this, Margaret Liptak says blissfully, "I honestly enjoyed sitting here and looking at Joe. He's always been good to me and I like seeing him happy."

Connie Dean, recalling her Hawaiian trip, sighs happily: "It meant a second honeymoon for me."

In general, the Pittsburgh interviews reflected the heartening findings of a sociological study made recently of 390 California steelworkers. These men, a bit younger than the Pittsburgh average and having school-age children still at home, reported on their 13-week vacations.

The picture is far from the gloomy one forecast by the pessimistic psychiatrists and sociologists. Here's how the California group answered questions:

Enjoyed the long vacation, 88 percent; went traveling, 81; did not watch more TV than usual, 71; did not seek an interim job, 87; started new hobbies, 16; spent more money on entertainment, 59; felt important benefits from spending more time with families, 80; and, felt a reduction of tension in the house, 70.

From these answers, the report drew conclusions that largely banish concern over long vacations:

"The workers used their extended vacations in ways which they themselves felt were useful for themselves and their families. They were not bored. They traveled as families. When they were at home, they seemed to participate more fully in the life and activities of their families. Husbands reported that they wanted to see more of their wives. The disruption that was expected to occur in family organization because of the increased presence of the father in the home did not occur. It may at least be hypothesized that the family of the blue-collar worker in America is strongly capable of handling extended leisure."

Nearly 500,000 steelmakers — their

The GRACE OF GOD— What Does It Mean?

Even among Christians, there is often misunderstanding of the nature and effects of this supernatural gift.

Saved from misfortune... or blessed in a worldly way... some pious and well-meaning people are wont to say: "It was only by the grace of God." This may reflect a worthy attitude of appreciation toward God, but it doesn't necessarily reflect the understanding of divine grace every Christian should have.

In general, grace has been defined as a supernatural gift infused in the soul, making it pleasing to God. No one can merit divine grace, or acquire it by his own unaided efforts. "... that not of yourselves, for it is the gift of God" (Eph. 2:5-8).

There are, moreover, distinctions in the kind, quality and purposes of divine grace. The first distinction is between sanctifying grace, which the Church calls a permanent quality in the soul, and actual grace, described as a transient movement from God that comes and goes and acts on the soul rather than in it. Sanctifying grace makes the soul pleasing to God and remains there permanently unless expelled by serious sin. Actual grace moves us to do good works.

There are other kinds, qualities and purposes of divine grace with which every Christian should be familiar. Lacking space to describe them here, we have published an interesting pocket-size pamphlet called "GRACE—Without It, You're Dead"... and we will be happy to send you a copy free upon your request.

This new pamphlet covers such topics as "The Supernatural State"... "Grace—What Is It?"... "Actual Grace"... "Other Kinds of Grace"... "Ways to Obtain Grace" and "How Can We Merit God's Grace?" It explains what we must do to make ourselves worthy of God's freely given gift of grace... how the Sacraments and prayer open the channels through which the grace of salvation is poured into our souls.

Every Christian... in fact, everyone seeking the favor of God through grace... should read this interesting pamphlet.

union is third in size behind the teamsters and auto workers — are eligible for the long vacations which were agreed upon in 1962 as a compromise in a dispute over a shorter work week. Senior men, in the $7000-$8000 range in yearly wage, and in the upper half of their job classification in years of service, get four weeks off in a normal year. The big bonus vacation comes every fifth year. If a man wishes, he can trade three of his 13 weeks for money but he must take at least ten in vacation, since the original purpose of the innovation was to create more jobs.

Steve Liptak, 55, a torch operator and brother of Joe, gives a capsule report on how he proved the psychiatrists wrong during his 13 weeks:

"The regular four-week vacation is good but in that time you can only do some of the things you want—not all. In 13 weeks you can do just about everything and any man who can't take that probably has troubles that have nothing to do with the length of his vacation.

"As for me, I went to Canada for some fishing. Every so often I have to get out of that steel mill and into the deep green woods where I can breathe and just listen to all that silence.

"Then, after I got my fill of that, I came home and made some repairs on the house. I also added a few things to my collection of bottles and mugs. Then the wife and I went down to Maryland and visited our two boys and grandchildren. In doing all this I put pretty near 5000 miles on the speedometer."

A hobby helps

The long vacations have already demonstrated to the Pittsburgh men that one essential is a hobby, or even several of them. And, it seems that most of them do have at least one absorbing interest. They can remember only a few cases of men who found the time so heavy that they cashed in their days and dollars at the neighborhood saloon—and ruined the vacation for their families.

Another bit of long vacation lore is: "Don't let your wife make it a honeydew vacation. You know, 'Honey, do you want to paint the garage? Honey, do you want to clean the basement?' And so on, all day every day."

Most of the Pittsburgh steelworkers PARADE talked to work for Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. and some said they were sorry when they had to go back. A company spokesman says that whatever their personal attitudes about returning, the long-vacation men have never been a problem when back on the job.

"They're just as good producers," he reports. "The long layoff doesn't seem to affect them."

Each year there's a new wave of steelworkers embarking on the 13 weeks and, if they're charting a precedent for our future long vacations, you can start planning now where you want to travel: Ireland, Hawaii, New York, California, the South, the Southwest — these are some of the places the Pittsburghers have gone with their happy wives.

George Bernard Shaw once quipped, "A perpetual holiday is a good working definition of hell." It's a sure thing that quite a few steelworkers have never heard of Shaw. And it's equally a sure thing that the steelmen, by example, are trying to prove Shaw—and the psychiatrists—dead wrong.

As astronaut, Scott Carpenter, only man who has explored outer space and undersea, wears space togs at Cape Kennedy in 1962.

ASTRONAUT TURNED AQUANAUT:

The ups and downs of Scott Carpenter

BY JOHN G. ROGERS

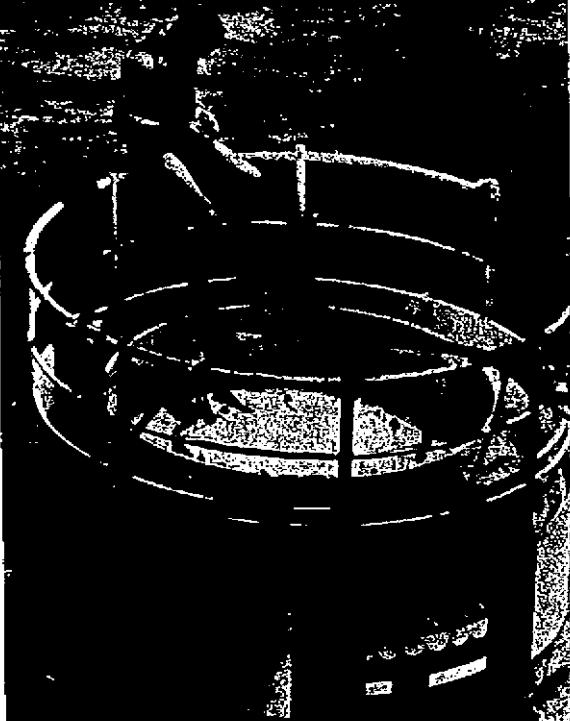

NAVEY CHASE, MD. Commander M. Scott Carpenter, the second American to orbit the earth and the first from anywhere to live 30 days on the ocean floor, has a complaint.

As an astronaut soaring in space, he leaped into the future in the most sophisticated and versatile apparatus known to man. But, as an aquanaut under the sea, he's been returned to a "Stone Age" of equipment that's completely inadequate.

"It's high time," contends the lean, well-tanned Carpenter, "that we realize the great importance of the wealth beneath the waves and speed up our efforts to get at it."

"I think my devotion to the space program is well known and I don't want to make space and ocean research competitive. We need both. But what so many Americans don't appreciate is that deep sea research will pay off in richer rewards much sooner — in oil, food, solid minerals, new antibiotics. There are even springs of fresh water down there for our coastal cities."

"So, my argument is that we ought to apply the money and support to ocean research that will enable us to develop the sophisticated tools we need to work at the bottom in deeper and deeper water. I know it can be done because I've seen it done — in the space program. That was once in the 'Stone Age,' too, and look at it now."

As aquanaut, Carpenter sits in rim of Sealab II, diving capsule he lived in for 30 days, setting world underwater record in 1965.

To interview Carpenter these days, you proceed to a shopping area of this Washington suburb and in an improbable setting of lackluster rug stores, shoe shops and greasy restaurants, you find on the seventh floor of a small office building the only man in world history who's both whirled in space and lived deep in the ocean. His office, among many others, has been forced to the hinterland by crowding in the capital.

Carpenter's crashes

Carpenter is a no-nonsense man of cool confidence, pleasantly relieved by good humor. For example, he's asked which of his several accidents — a near fatal auto crash and a motorcycle smash-up — put a sharply etched scar on his forehead. He can't suppress his delight over the impending surprise as he reveals: "I got that when I fell out of my crib at the age of one."

In pursuit of his new career, the adventuresome, science-minded former navy flyer has cut all his ties with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, for which he was one of the seven original astronauts, and has been named a special assistant in the navy's Deep Submergence Systems Project. It was during a leave from N.A.S.A. in 1965 that he set a world underwater record, living for 30 consecutive days in and around a navy ocean-floor laboratory at a depth of 205 feet.

That project — part of the navy's man-in-the-sea program — was called Sealab II and in it Carpenter was joined by two teams of divers staying down 15 days each. Home was a 57-foot-long, steel-walled "house" which provided a special breathing atmosphere, telephone service, TV, good food and a doctor. The divers also had hot showers, indispensable for warming their bone-chilled bodies on return from working trips in the water — trips on which they sometimes used breathing bottles, sometimes long tubes supplying them from Sealab. Despite the welcome creature comforts, Carpenter concedes that toward the end of the experiment, he and his colleagues wistfully thought more and more of families and blue skies.

Today, he and the navy divers — Carpenter admires them as "a special breed with more guts than any other" — are planning Sealab III which aims at pushing our deep sea frontier down to 600 feet. It's set for next summer near San Clemente Island, off San Diego, Calif., and the time spent down there in the cold, dark silence will be extended to 60 days.

"The ocean is a hard place," Carpenter says. "Just like space, it's a hostile atmosphere — but of a different kind. Nothing could ever top the exhilaration I felt during and after my three-orbit flight in 1962. But, the Sealab experience was far more grueling and physically taxing. It was also the most richly satisfying experience in my life."

By nature a self-assured man who gets impatient with too much desk work, Carpenter flashes a smile of enthusiasm and his green eyes light up as he looks forward to his next ordeal against the elements. The deep water's attracted him ever since he started scuba diving 15 years ago while stationed in Hawaii. Having become a veteran amateur diver and having made his contribution in space, he began turning toward career oceanography several years ago and, now, Mrs. Carpenter: How she feels about her husband's daring career.

Tuffy, a friendly porpoise, is fondled by Carpenter. Companionable mammal was pet, tireless messenger, even a lifesaver.

Model of Sealab II is displayed by Carpenter. Underwater research craft had hot showers, good food, telephone and TV.

at 42, it's his great enthusiasm. He told PARADE in his office here:

"We learned a lot in Sealab II, both good and bad. The big thing was — we learned that men can live and work at the bottom of the ocean. Some of the bad things — we found out that our suits just couldn't keep us warm enough in that bitter cold water. As a result of being cold we couldn't perform our work — setting up measuring devices, collecting marine life, and so on — as long or as well as we'd expected. We learned that divers can't signal adequately to each other. They become practically deaf mutes, limited to a few hand signals or tapping on each other's breathing bottles. We also learned how badly salt water corrosion affects all our equipment."

Each deficiency discovered in Sealab II will be attacked in Sealab III, as best the budget permits. Carpenter discloses that a new diver's suit to be tested is nuclear powered. Another suit to be used has been adapted from a cooling garment for astronauts and this sort of link between his two careers is far from the only one.

"In both fields," says Carpenter, "we must design and test special hardware, and select, train and test men specifically for work in a foreign environment. In both fields we pit man against danger and confront him with the unknown. In both we're very dependent on new materials and new techniques."

One of the new techniques in Sealab III will be extended use of what Carpenter calls "our amazing animals."

The star of the group is Tuffy, a 270-pound Atlantic bottle-nose porpoise which demonstrated in Sealab II that he could deliver tools, messages, letters and other things strapped to his harness.

"There'll be another porpoise next time," Carpenter discloses, "and two sea lions and a harbor seal. Tuffy already has shown us he could rescue a lost aquanaut by carrying a line and homing in on an acoustic signal from a device worn on the wrist. We think the sea lions have a greater range and more endurance but they're also pretty touchy. They bite. But you can see the attraction and excitement in an experiment that uses such extremes as atomic energy and dumb animals."

"Dumb animals? I'm not so sure about that. We thought we were using Tuffy."

Sometimes he seemed to have an expression that said he was using us."

Carpenter, who has moved his family from space headquarters in Houston to the Washington suburb of Bethesda, Md., concedes there can be personal danger in underwater work but "if you're well trained and have calculated your risks and done all you can to minimize them, you get on with your job." His only close call in Sealab II came when he was working in the water and, suddenly, the tube that ran back to the lab was giving him nothing to breathe: He had no recourse but to swim as fast as possible back to Sealab, hoping he'd make it before blacking out. He just made it,

The Carpenter family, shown being received by President Kennedy at the White House in 1962, has since grown accustomed to father's feats in space and water.

and found that his tube had simply kinked, like a garden hose, turning itself off. Carpenter found the experience a sobering reminder that vigilance under water can never be relaxed. On another dive, he was stung by a scorpion fish. Adequate medical treatment was available in the underwater home, however, and in two days he was back in the water.

One aspect of Sealab living that, at first, caused much hilarity was the way the high helium content of the artificial atmosphere distorted the voice. Words came out in a high-pitched Donald Duck cackle.

"At first it was hard to keep a straight face when we talked to each other," Carpenter recalls. "But we soon got used to it and it seemed quite normal to be talking in this insane gaggle."

An undersea diet

Eating habits changed, too. No eggs for breakfast—yolks give off a toxic sulfide gas difficult to remove from the atmosphere. No frying of anything — another toxic gas called acrolein is released. And, since helium disperses heat 12 times as fast as earth atmosphere, instant coffee too hot to drink when made is almost instantly cold. One day Carpenter tried eating plankton, the micro-organisms, rich in protein, that abound in the sea and are a main food for fish and marine animals.

"It tasted pretty good. Something like beef broth," reports Carpenter on this food source some scientists say will someday be used by humans as an inexpensive nourishment.

There's been some controversy over the fact that no women have been admitted to the space program. If a similar fuss is to develop in the Sealab series, the tacitful Carpenter won't get into it.

"At the moment," he says, "we don't have the facilities to accommodate women. But if you have the imagination to visualize colonizing the continental shelf with whole cities when we come to large scale utilization of the ocean wealth, it's easy to see that women would have their natural place in that life."

Considering that the Carpenter family is the only one in all history in which the kids can ask their dad about the relative wonders of whizzing 167 miles out from the earth's surface and of existing 205 feet under the ocean, PARADE was interested in the attitudes of the four children — boys of 18 and 15, girls of 12 and 11.

"Well," Carpenter replies, "none of them has any interest in being either an astronaut or an aquanaut."

"But, they must ask you some pretty interesting questions about the extremes of your two famous achievements?"

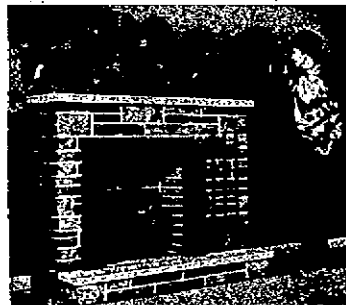

"No, they don't. They've become completely accustomed to it. Whether I go up or down, it's just my normal job as far as they're concerned."

And how does his pretty blonde wife, Rene, feel about his "normal job?"

"She'd rather have me out in space," Carpenter explains. "She has quite a fear of water."

MAKE LIVING EASIER—TAKE A LOOK AT THESE SMART NEW IDEAS DESIGNED FOR YOUR HOME AND YOUR FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

Automatic fireplace: Here are the first gas logs (above left) to come with a room thermostat that automatically regulates gas flow to maintain the temperature you want. Installation is so simple, claims the maker, that you can do most of the job yourself, with some help from a plumber to run a small gas line to the logs. The 20"x17½"x8½" logs come with oak or birch finish—and in models for natural, manufactured or LP gas. $99.95 express or freight collect. Details: Readybuilt Products, Dept. PP, 1701 McHenry, Baltimore, Md. 21223.

Compact projector: Designed to make slide shows really portable, this new projector (above right) is small enough (6"x4") to fit in a purse or overcoat pocket—and can fill a 40"x40" screen in sharp color. You can use it with all Instamatic, 35mm, 127 and half-frame slides, with or without cartridges. Projector: $14.95. 24 cartridges: 89¢. Kapco, Dept. PP, 33 New Broad St., Port Chester, N.Y. 10573.

Pips in a planter: Just add water to 2-year-old lily of the valley pips (bulbs) that come in a planter and they grow as much as an inch overnight and to fragrant blooms indoors in 21 days, with many familiar white bell-shaped flowers on each stalk. Garden of 5 pips in planter: $1.89. Michigan Bulb Co., Dept. PP, Grand Rapids, Mich. 49502.

Footwear protector: With a new water repellent, you can protect all types of leather boots and shoes—including hunting and ski boots, and golf and work shoes—from moisture. Because the preparation contains no animal oil or fats, it allows leather to "breathe," does not clog its pores. 3-oz. tube: $1 in stores. Dow Corning, Dept. PP, Midland, Mich.

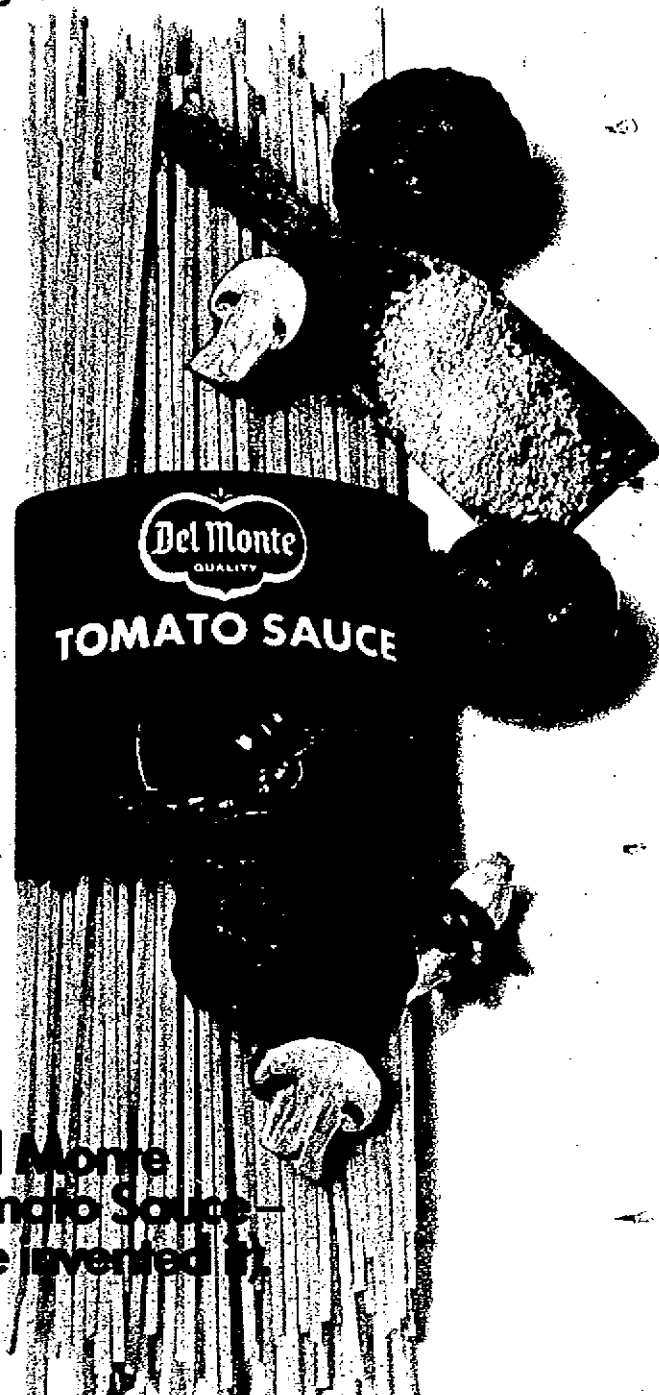

Scour wand: A handy new helper for the kitchen, this long-handled holder (above left) grips a scouring pad tightly so you can use it to scour and scrub pots and pans more easily. The extra length also enables you to get into narrow areas such as bottles, vases. Rustproof plated steel. With woven pad: $1.98. Hollis, Dept. PP, 1133 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10010.

Locking pliers: Apply this new slip-joint plier (above right) to a piece of work and it automatically locks on to give you a wrenchlike grip, without any need for adjustment. It also has a fingertip trigger that instantly releases the lock for regular plier action. 7½", chrome plated: $2.95 postpaid. LockMatic, Dept. PP, Highway 12, Maple Plain, Minn. 55359.

Sketching pen: You can use a new fountain pen for everything from fine tracery to bold strokes without loss of ink flow. Good for both quick sketches and developed drawings, it has an ink feed on which the stainless steel nib is mounted—and the nib itself has a reservoir across its top. The feed regulates flow according to demand and the reservoir adds to flow at times of exceptional demand, as when you draw long bold lines. $5. Storins Co., Dept. PP, 561 Grand Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y. 11238.

Tests By Doctors Prove It Possible To Shrink Painful Hemorrhoids

And Promptly Stop The Itching.
Relieve Pain In Most Cases.

A scientific research institute has discovered a medication which has the ability, in most cases—to actually shrink hemorrhoids and to promptly stop the burning itch and relieve pain.

In case after case, the sufferer first notices relief from itching and pain. Then painful swelling of the inflamed hemorrhoids is gently reduced.

Tests conducted on hundreds of patients by doctors in New York City, in Washington, D.C.

and at a Midwest Medical Center proved this so.

The secret is Preparation H®. There is no other formula for the treatment of hemorrhoids like Preparation H. In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids—Preparation H lubricates, soothes irritated tissues and helps prevent further infection.

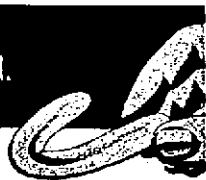

Just ask for Preparation H Ointment or Preparation H Suppositories. No prescription is needed.

It's true. These symptoms often occur together.

Because they have the same cause: irregular habits and improper diet. The pace of today's modern woman is hectic.

With their special pressures and problems, no wonder so many women pay the penalty of irregularity with indigestion.

That is why physicians frequently specify Caroid® and Bile Salts Tablets rather than an ordinary laxative. Caroid and Bile Salts Tablets are unique. They are designed to treat the full complex of symptoms.

Was the patrolman simply responding to color when he decided to stop this car?

Does a Red Car Make Drivers See Red?

By Ken Purdy

If you drive a bright red automobile, you're considerably more likely to have an accident than you would be in a black car—or indeed one of any other color. Why? No one's quite sure, but it's a fact that while Detroit finishes only a comparatively few of its cars in red—7.5 percent at Ford, for example—red cars do get into more trouble.

It may be that aggressive people tend to choose red, or that other drivers are annoyed by it. Psychologists know that red is a stimulating color, and that nervous, jumpy people tend to be attracted to it. (Red is the only color that elicits a strong reaction in infants.) We associate red with danger, with anger, with heat ("red flag," "red rage," "red hot").

Orange-yellow has something of the same effect. I owned, successively, black, green and yellow cars of the same make and model. I had no trouble with the black and green ones, but before I'd driven the yellow one a month I had been stopped twice by state troopers, although my driving habits hadn't changed in any way; I noticed, too, that other cars were passing me more often, and more aggressively.

The most popular color in U.S. cars today is white, with blue, green, red, black and gray following. (Metallic gold has displaced blue in General Motors cars.) Probably because we associate gray with old age and black with death, these two colors are always at the bottom of the list, except during severe economic depression, when they move up, and the bright colors popular in prosperous times move down.

Some drivers won't buy black or gray because of their poor visibility. A gray car can almost disappear under certain conditions, a snow flurry at dusk, for instance. Good practice with any dark-colored car: keep it clean and polished, so that the whole body surface is reflective, and turn on head and taillights promptly at sunset.

MINI LOAVES

BY BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Smart restaurants around the country have taken to serving little loaves of bread hot from the oven instead of rolls with the entree. You can produce the same little loaves easily at home.

Take a package of rye muffin mix, then add caraway seeds, orange peel and a little molasses to the ingredients listed on the box. Bake batter in tiny loaf pans and serve hot at lunch or dinner.

Loaves can be broken apart, as you would break a large muffin, for buttering. Or each guest can be supplied with a small sharp knife, for slicing. No matter which way you choose, it's good eating.

Caraway Rye Mini Loaves

- | | |
|--|---------------------------------|
| 1 package (13 $\frac{3}{4}$ oz.) rye dinner muffin mix | $\frac{7}{8}$ cup milk |
| 2 tablespoons light molasses | 1 egg |
| $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon baking soda | 1 tablespoon caraway seeds |
| | 1 tablespoon grated orange peel |

Empty mix into mixing bowl. Measure molasses in measuring cup; add baking soda; fill cup with milk; pour into bowl. Add egg. Blend for $\frac{1}{2}$ minute at low speed of electric mixer (30 strokes with spoon), scraping bowl constantly. Add caraway seeds and orange peel. Beat at medium speed for 1 minute (100 strokes with spoon), scraping bowl often. Grease 6 individual loaf pans (4 $\frac{1}{2}$ x 2 $\frac{3}{4}$ x 1 $\frac{1}{4}$ inches). Spoon equal amount of batter into each. Bake at 400° for 15 to 20 minutes. Serve warm.

If Your Dentures Are Over 2 Years Old...

Dentures—especially older dentures—are harder to clean and keep clean than natural teeth. And because they are 15 times softer, they are easier to damage and scratch.

That's why so many dentists suggest soaking dentures clean in KLEENITE instead of harsh brushing with abrasive pastes or powders. With KLEENITE you can now clean your precious dentures like fine jewelry—clean them thoroughly but safely.

Because its easy-to-use formula combines 3 different stain-removing actions—(1) detergent; (2) oxidizer; and (3) solvent, KLEENITE soaks even dingiest dentures clean 3 ways at once.

What's more, KLEENITE is instantly-activated the moment you put it in water. It surges into every denture crevice. It penetrates toughest tobacco stains...helps soak away film. The difference it makes—even in the dingiest denture—will surprise you. Try it. Get KLEENITE today at all drug counters.

Helps restore dentures' original whiteness!

Creme Away Corns Calluses, Warts

With New 'Easy Off' Softener

Now sufferers from laming corns, calluses, common warts report dramatic results thanks to a unique creme called DERMA-SOFT. This wonder-working formulation softens and dissolves those hard to remove growths so they creme away painless, safely, leaving skin silky smooth & soft. So don't suffer. Get DERMA-SOFT today at all druggists.

HARD OF HEARING

due to accumulated ear wax impacted down your ear canal? It can muffle sounds, cause temporary deafness. For fast relief—use DeWitt's OIL FOR EAR USE—compounded only to soften excess ear wax for easy removal. Only 75¢. DeWitt's OIL FOR EAR USE. Accept no substitute.

Travelers Aid

Makes Eating With FALSE TEETH

Up to 35% Easier

Clinical tests prove you can now eat and chew better—make dentures average up to 35% more effective—if you sprinkle a little FASTEETH on your plates. FASTEETH holds uppers and lowers more firmly so they feel more comfortable. FASTEETH is not acid—doesn't sour. No gummy, pasty taste. Helps check "denture odor". Dentures that fit are essential to health. So see your dentist regularly. Get FASTEETH at all drug counters.

Gerber Training Pants. Heat-resistant elastic at waist. Sizes 1 to 3 yrs. 2/$1.00*

Gerber® Baby Pants Party

Here we go round in wonder wear—in Gerber Training Pants! Now that your baby is ready to make a "giant step" from waterproof baby pants (by Gerber, of course!) to training pants, make sure those training pants are made by Gerber. That means long-lasting whiteness, extra comfort...and they fit as if tailored to your tot! Never shrink or sag out of shape...last and last until your "trainee" is ready for a larger size.

Ring-a-round a rosy little waist—the elastic at waist (and legs, too, on the de luxe version) is heat-resistant, planned to "take it" in washer and dryer. No ironing needed, ever. It's thoughtful details like this that make us proud to say—in babywear as in baby food—"Babies are our business...our only business!"*

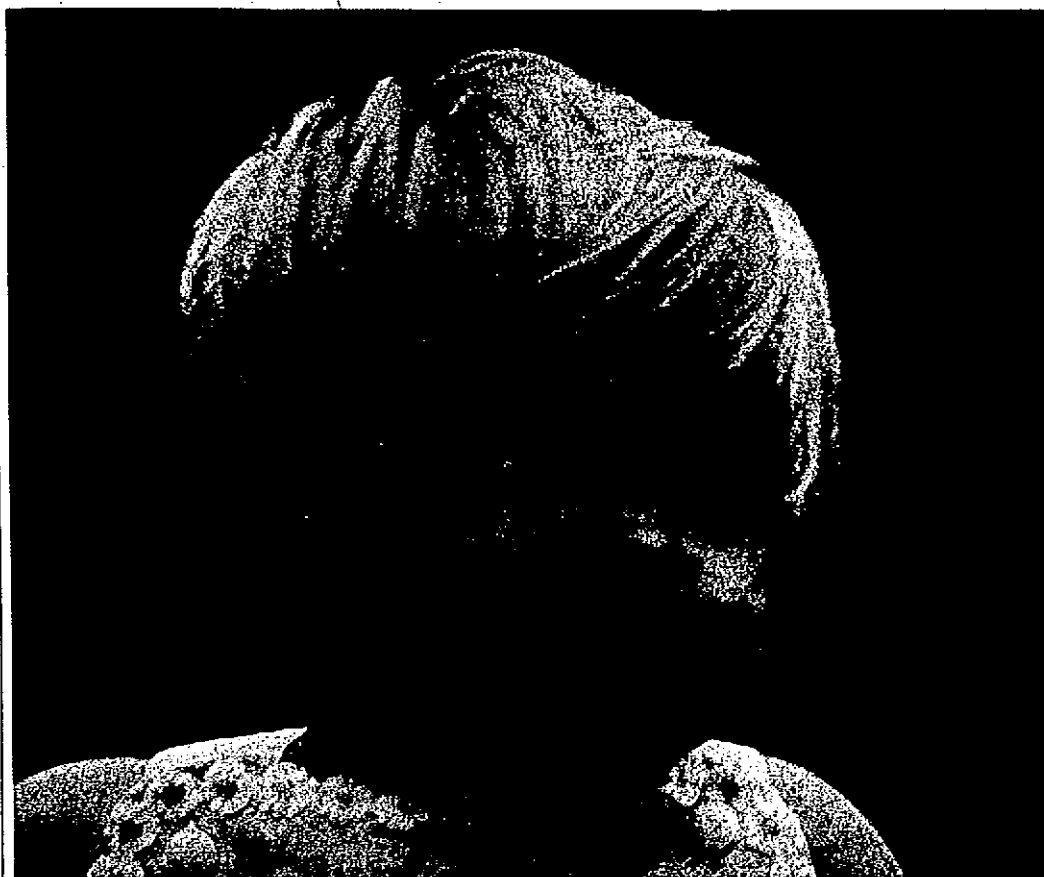

GERBER®
BABY PRODUCTS,
FREMONT, MICHIGAN

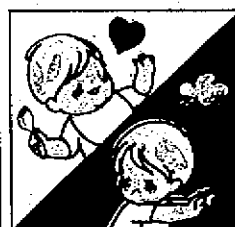

Mrs. Dan Gerber,
Mother of Five

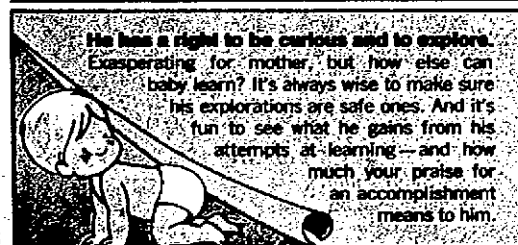

He's not quite like Mother, not quite like Dad.
A bit of each...but with a mind of his own.
What do you do about the little nonconformist in your family?

He has a right to be himself and to be accepted as the unique little person he is. Whether baby's a ball-of-fire (or just the opposite), he has a personality all his own. You can guide and help develop that personality, of course. And his confidence will grow, with the feeling of acceptance you give him.

He has a right to change his mind (as you do) from time to time. Suppose baby suddenly takes a stand against Squash. Take advantage of Gerber variety. You can offer Carrots, Spinach, Garden Vegetables, Mixed Vegetables, Sweet Potatoes instead. All have high vitamin-A values.

He has a right to be curious and to explore.

Exasperating for mother, but how else can baby learn? It's always wise to make sure his explorations are safe ones. And it's fun to see what he gains from his attempts at learning—and how much your praise for an accomplishment means to him.

He has a right to grow and learn by trying new things. New toys, new games, new foods. For instance, as he gets a little older, a gradual change-over from strained to Gerber Junior Foods will give him new experiences in eating. Their heavier consistency and larger portions satisfy his increasing appetite. And there are certain foods which come only in the junior size. Dinners like Spaghetti, Tomato Sauce and Beef or Split Peas with Bacon. Vegetables such as Carrots & Peas and Creamed Green Beans with Bacon. Appetite interest!

A toddler's right to feel "grown-up" can be fulfilled by sharing a meal (or a dish) with you sometimes. Like this Vegetable Omelet:

- | | |
|-------------------------|----------------------------|
| 2 eggs, slightly beaten | 1 tsp. butter or margarine |
| 2 Tbsp. evaporated milk | ½ cup any Gerber Vegetable |
| Salt, to taste | heated and seasoned |

Make omelet as usual. When browned, fold in half and turn onto serving plate. Put heated vegetable between the folds. Yield: 2 servings.

Every baby has a right to an adequate, balanced diet and a variety of food experiences. Gerber prepares infant formulas, cereals and over 100 baby foods. Babies are our business...our only business!*

Do you sometimes feel there's a lot more to the news than meets the eye?

Is the world really as "simple" as it appears? Is man? Or are there, as Shakespeare said, "more things in heaven and earth... than are dreamt of in your philosophy"? Are flying saucers a myth, or are the authorities keeping silent about the UFO's to prevent a possible panic? Do some doctors warn against "spirit healing" for your good — or theirs? Will the Russians soon agree to an H-Bomb ban because their scientists have harnessed the far more potent powers of E.S.P.? Has there really been a satisfactory explanation for the recurring power blackouts that have crippled sections of the country?

latest surprising developments in psychic phenomena and E.S.P.... science and medicine... human relations and nature.

The most stimulating new books — at big savings!

Each month Club selections are described to members in advance. Although these new books sell for $4.95, $5.95 or more in original publishers' editions, you pay only $2.49 plus postage and handling. (Occasional extra-value selections slightly higher.) You accept only the books you want — as few as 4 books in the coming year. You may resign any time after that.

The Universe Book Club lets you decide for yourself!

Each month the Editors of the Universe Book Club "discover" the books that raise provocative questions that need answers... books that make you think... books that take "unpopular" stands to help you make up your own mind on puzzling issues of our day. These are timely books. Some are best sellers. But many others have been shoved to the back of the bookstore because they are "too controversial"... or ask too many "embarrassing" questions. These books challenge you to explore — and extend — the frontiers of human experience in the world around us. Discover for yourself the

TERRY AND THE PIRATES
 GEORGE WUNDER
 HAVING BEEN "VOLUNTEERED" BY SNAPPER BRASSARD, TERRY FINDS HIMSELF A REPLACEMENT FOR THE APPENDICITIS-STRICKEN COLONEL.

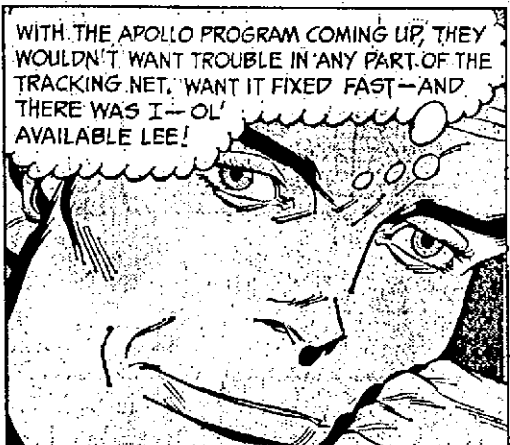

WHAT DO YOU SUPPOSE THE COMMANDING OFFICER OF A SATELLITE TRACKING STATION DOES TO EARN HIS BED AND BOARD?

GUESS THE CURRENT C.O. WILL BRIEF ME... WONDER WHY HE WANTS A TRANSFER SO BADLY BEFORE HIS TOUR IS UP... SOUNDS LIKE SORT OF A PLUSH POST.

MUST BE SOMETHING ODD. AT LEAST HE WORRIED WASHINGTON ENOUGH FOR A NEW MAN TO BE SENT OUT IN A HURRY TO TAKE OVER—AND FIND OUT WHAT'S THE PROBLEM.

WITH THE APOLLO PROGRAM COMING UP, THEY WOULDN'T WANT TROUBLE IN ANY PART OF THE TRACKING NET. WANT IT FIXED FAST—AND THERE WAS I—OL' AVAILABLE LEE!

SOMETIME LATER, THE TRANSPORT TOUCHES DOWN AT AN AUSTRALIAN AIRPORT.

OUR MAN SHOULD BE ON THIS FLIGHT.

WHAT'S HIS NAME? COLONEL LEE, RIGHT?

SIR, TINKERS AND DUDLEY HERE. ROYAL AUSTRALIAN AIR FORCE. WE HAVE A CARIBOU STANDING BY TO WAIT YOU ON YOUR WAY.

GENTLEMEN, UNACCUSTOMED AS I AM TO SUCH SERVICE...

WE FLY A WEEKLY RUN OVER TO THE ISLAND, ACTUALLY, SUPPLIES, MAIL, THAT SORT OF THING, FOR YOUR PEOPLE MANNING THE STATION. GOT WORD TO WAIT FOR YOU.

THANKS.

LATER... COLONEL LEE, SIR, WE'VE MADE OUR LAND-FALL. YOU CAN SEE IT OUT THE PORT WINDOW. NOTHING MUCH TO LOOK AT, I'M AFRAID. CAN'T IMAGINE WHY WE BOTHER TO OWN IT.

ONE BIG ISLAND, MOSTLY SAND AND ROCK, RING OF SMALLER ONES AROUND THE LAGOON. DREARY-LOOKING PLACE. THE OLD SEA CAPTAIN WHO NAMED IT "PUNTER'S PRIDE" AFTER HIMSELF MUST HAVE BEEN DOTTY!

I'VE HEARD FOLKS SAY MOST PEOPLE NEVER LEARN A DARN THING FROM EXPERIENCE! THAT'S ALWAYS STRUCK ME AS CRAZY TALK! EVEN A CAT DOESN'T TOUCH A HOT STOVE TWICE!

THE MEER... SHALL INHERIT THE EARTH... IT'S GOIN' T'BE FUN T'WATCH AN' SEE HOW LONG TH' MEER KIN KEEP THE EARTH AFTER THEY INHERIT IT. KIM HUBBARD

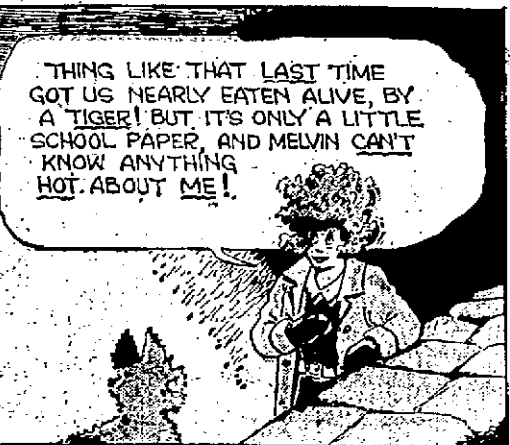

BUT TAKE FILMORE! WAY HE FELL FOR THAT GOLD MINE SWINDLE! MR. MOXIE BROKE UP THAT ONE, BUT DID FILMORE SMARTEN UP ANY?

NOW Y'CAN BET YER INLAWS HE'S BLOWN HIS TEN THOUSAND CASH ON PHONY OIL STOCK! MAYBE SOME GUYS ARE JUST BORN IN A RUT. THE RUT TO RUIN!

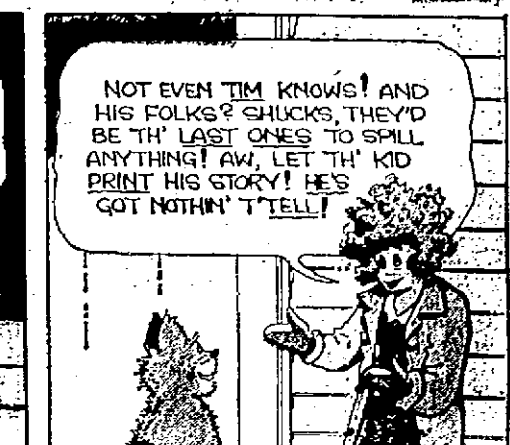

GEE! I SURE HOPE THIS HIST'RY REPEATIN' ITSELF ISN'T CONTAGIOUS! ME, F'R INSTANCE, AND THAT SMART-ALECK KID EDITOR PRINTIN' MY PICTURE AND A STORY 'BOUT ME!

THING LIKE THAT LAST TIME GOT US NEARLY EATEN ALIVE, BY A TIGER! BUT IT'S ONLY A LITTLE SCHOOL PAPER, AND MELVIN CAN'T KNOW ANYTHING 'HOT ABOUT ME!

ONLY "DADDY'S" GARDENER, SAM, AND MARSHAL BADGE AND TH' REV'REND AND MR. MOXIE KNOW WHY I'M LAYIN' LOW HERE. THEY'D NEVER TELL!

NOT EVEN TIM KNOWS! AND HIS FOLKS? SHUCKS, THEY'D BE TH' LAST ONES TO SPILL ANYTHING! AW, LET TH' KID PRINT HIS STORY! HE'S GOT NOTHIN' T'TELL!

NOTHING TO TELL? THE ANSWER TO THAT WILL BE FOUND IN THIS WEEK'S ISSUE OF THE HIGH SCHOOL PAPER!

OH, FILMORE! WE PROMISED NOT TO TELL ANYBODY!

FIDDLESTICKS! MERTON MARGIN WON'T EVER LET IT GO ANY FARTHER!

BRAGGING ABOUT THE BIG SHOTS HE KNEW! WHEN I CASUALLY MENTIONED WE ARE CARING FOR THE WARD OF OUR CLOSE FRIEND, OLIVER WARBUCKS... WELL! I GUESS THAT SHOWED HIM!

BUT WHAT IF YOU WERE OVERHEARD?

NOBODY AROUND MA SMITH'S ROOMING HOUSE! ONLY SOME KID OUT IN THE HALL WHEN I LEFT!

WHAT DID HE LOOK LIKE?

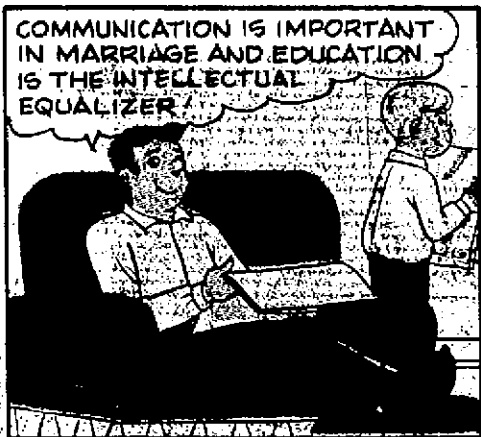

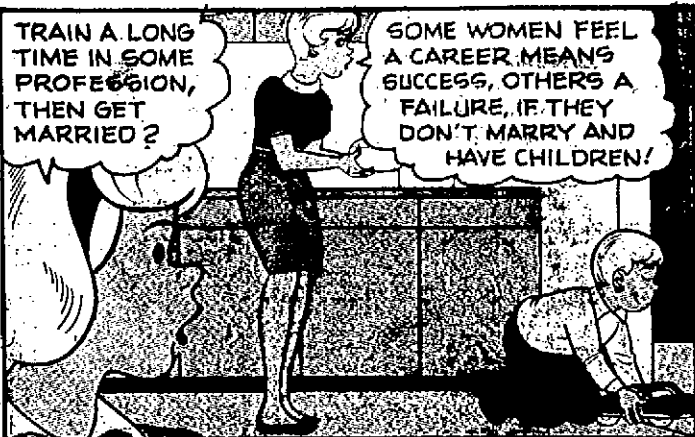

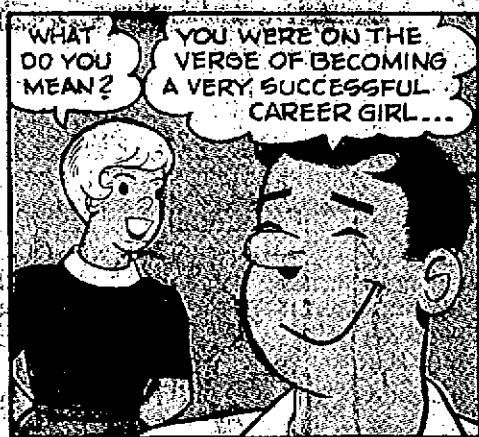

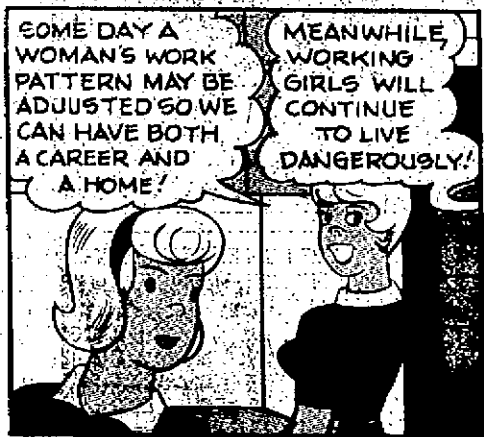

OH, TALL, SKINNY BOY WITH GLASSES, SAID HE WAS TO MEET "PAUL PEOTONE FROM PEORIA"! SAID MAYBE THE GUY... HAD CHECKED INTO THE MOTEL INSTEAD! POOH! JUST A DUMB KID!

LET'S HOPE SO! IF ONLY YOU'D KEPT YOUR MOUTH SHUT!
